Nixon, in Memoirs, Blames Foes for Watergate Scandal

By HERBERT MITGANG
Special to The New York Times

LONDON, Sept. 28—In his forthcoming memoirs, Richard M. Nixon maintains his innocence and contends that Watergate was merely a partisan scandal used by his enemies to bring him down, according to publishing sources in the United States and Europe who have read part of the manuscript.

He expressses regret that he did not question his aides more closely because he knew very little about the Watergate break-in and subsequent events. Admitting only an error of judgment, he denies personal responsibility, says that he may have let the American people down, though he did not intend to do so, and concludes that Watergate caused him a great injustice.

The former President declares that he resigned only to prevent six months of national divisiveness that would have resulted from an impeachment trial.

These views emerge in a closely guarded account in which Mr. Nixon disputes former aides and friends, differs with previously published books and discloses his own reflections on events ranging from his controversial campaign for the House of Representatives in 1946 to his resignation in the face of impeachment proceedings in 1974.

Knowledgeable publishing sources in Europe and the United States, who have seen the 164 pages of completed manuscript dealing with Watergate and the last two weeks of the Nixon Administration, say that the document also contains the following descriptions and views:

¶When Mr. Nixon decided that he could no longer remain in the White House, he summoned Vice President Ford and told him to prepare himself for the Presidency. In reply, Mr. Ford said that he wanted to talk it over first with his wife, Betty. In the same conversation, Mr. Nixon pleaded with his successor to re-

Buckley Is Using 60% of Donations On Drive to Raise Campaign Fund

By FRANK LYNN

Reflecting the new restrictions on big money in political campaigns, Senator James L. Buckley has spent on fund-raising nearly 60 percent of the $1.2 million he had raised as of last month and has had to reach out of New York State for about half the money he has collected.

The Buckley campaign finances provide a dramatic case study of the impact of the new Federal campaign-finance law, which restricts individual contributions to $1,000 in campaigns for Federal office and thus puts pressure on candidates to reach far afield for small as well as large contributions.

The Buckley finances also provide a glimpse at the fund-raising efforts of a Senator who, because of his clear-cut conservatism, has a national constituency and possibly for the same reason may have greater difficulty than other Republicans candidates in raising money among liberal and moderate New York Republicans.

Whatever the reason, Mr. Buckley, seeking his second term in the Senate, has spent more than $600,000 for fund-raising appeals by mail—the largest single expenditure in his campaign. Thus, less than half the money raised has been available for the actual tools of a campaign—advertising, workers, literature, travel, telephones and headquarters.

In contrast, two contenders for the Democratic Senate nomination—Daniel P. Moynihan and Ramsey Clark—had a greater rate of return from their more modest mail fund-rasing efforts. Mr. Moynihan spent about $3 to raise each $10 and Mr. Clark about $4. Mr. Buckley is spending nearly $6 to raise each $10.

Fund-raising specialists said one reason for the lesser return in the Buckley cam-

British Pound at $1.64, New Low; Central Bank Acts to Halt Plunge

4-Cent Loss Is Large —Government Crisis Appears at Hand

By PETER T. KILBORN
Special to The New York Times

LONDON, Sept. 28—The British pound, once the world's proudest and strongest currency, crashed 4 cents today to $1.64, its lowest point ever, after falling 2 cents yesterday. The losses are among the sharpest in history, and the Government is now beginning to look very much like one in crisis.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, the minister in charge of Britain's troubled economy, was preparing to board a plane for Hong Kong when he put off the trip and rushed back to his desk. The Bank of England finally stepped in to stem the fall, but bankers were doubtful that the central bank could do much to help.

"No one can trust this Government or the unions to do what should be done," said a British executive of a Kuwaiti bank here. Currency dealers said few people were selling pounds but that absolutely no one wanted to buy.

[The dollar yesterday remained at its lowest rates in 14 months on some European markets, and gold slumped to about $116 an ounce.

Early last year the pound was worth $2.40. Nothing that the Government has said and nothing that the Government has done has been able to put the pound up again.

The pound stood today as it has through most of this month, like a pitiless judge of the British economy. The Prime Minister, James Callaghan, thought he might help the pound in delivering a vigorous call for self-sacrifice this morning in Blackpool.

"The route is long and hard," he told the warring factions of the Labor Party at its annual conference there, "but the long march has begun."

The pound had been slipping before he spoke. It paused to listen. And then it slipped again.

In early 1975, one British pound, a green-and-white certificate bearing a bejewelled portrait of the Queen, was

$5.1 Billion for Foreign Aid Voted, Over Half for Middle East Nations

By RICHARD D. LYONS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 — Congress passed and sent to the White House today the fiscal year 1977 foreign aid appropriations bill containing $5.1 billion, more than half of which is earmarked for Middle Eastern nations as part of the Sinai accords drawn up by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

The Senate, by a vote of 56 to 24, passed the bill, which has the backing of the White House although it contains $684 million less than the Ford Administration requested. The House passed the measure yesterday, 216 to 155.

Included in the bill are provisions of either loans or grants for the purchase of American-made munitions, with $1 billion for Israel and $145 million for Jordan. In addition, Israel would receive $735 million in economic aid, with Egypt getting $700 million, Syria $80 million, and Jordan $70 million.

As the 94th Congress rushed toward its target of a Friday night adjournment, the Senate and House also passed the toxic substances bill, giving the Environmental Protection Agency greater power to control hazardous chemicals and banning the production of PCB's in three years.

PCB's, a class of chemicals named polychlorinated biphenyls, have been linked to birth defects and several types of cancer. The measure cleared the Senate by a vote of 73 to 6, and the House, 360 to 35.

In other legislative action today, the following steps were taken:

¶The House all but killed the outer continental shelf lands bill by voting, 198 to 194, to return it to committee, from which it may or may not re-emerge. The measure would have given the Government added power to develop offshore oil fields.

¶Senate and House conferees reached agreement on the $25.5 billion revenue-sharing bill that would provide Federal aid to states, counties and municipalities through 1980.

¶The Senate, by a vote of 78 to 3, passed and sent to the House the omnibus higher education and vocational training bill, which appropriates more than $20 billion for the next three fiscal years.

¶President Ford signed into law a bill making large increases in the amounts of Federal funds authorized for land and

CAREY GETS WARNING ON WELFARE BUDGET

Increasing Costs Are Threatening Overrun of Up to $175 Million

By LINDA GREENHOUSE

State budget officials told Governor Carey yesterday that if welfare costs continued to increase at the current rate, there would be an overrun of $120 million to $175 million in the state's welfare budget for the current fiscal year.

The higher figure is more than 10 percent of the state's current welfare budget of $1.657 billion. Either figure would be a blow to the state's precariously balanced budget.

Governor Carey called the new projection a "very profound and disturbing reflection of the depressed state of our national and regional economy." He directed his Social Services Commissioner Philip Toia, to work with the state's county executives to "develop a complete and thorough range of legislative proposals" to counteract the rising welfare bills.

Upstate Factors Cited

The Budget Division said that most of the overrun was occurring upstate in the "home relief—singles" category of public assistance, which goes mainly to people living alone whose unemployment benefits have expired.

Meanwhile, a federally financed study by the Rand Corporation reported yesterday that New York City's welfare families actually received cash and other services that lifted as many as 90 percent of them above the poverty level. [Page 25.]

The state's current welfare budget assumes a "home relief—singles" caseload of 100,000 recipients a month. But the revised projections are for a caseload of 132,200 recipients a month by the end of the year.

According to the Budget Division, the home relief caseload is rising at the rate of 5,000 every three months in New York City and 14,000 a month upstate.

Operation to Drive Palestinians From Positions in Mountains Disrupts Conciliation Effort

By HENRY TANNER
Special to The New York Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Sept. 28—The Syrian Army, and Lebanese Christian militia forces began a tank-led offensive at dawn today to dislodge Palestinian units from their positions in a wide mountain area east of Beirut.

The attack came only five days after Elias Sarkis took office as Lebanon's President and proclaimed his intention to move the country toward peace by starting negotiations between the rival forces.

But his conciliation attempts are now likely to be postponed indefinitely, according to men who have been close to him. They described Mr. Sarkis as a deeply saddened man.

It was not clear from the front-line reports today whether the Syrian offensive was just another application of pressure, as in the past, or whether it would turn into an attempt to put an end to the Lebanese crisis once and for all by military means.

Plea to Arab States

Yasir Arafat, the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, apparently felt it was a final offensive; he sent an emotional appeal to all Arab heads of states asking them for immediate intervention to prevent the Syrians from "liquidating the Palestinian resistance movement and striking at the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples."

[In Syria, the Government of President Hafez-al-Assad, also began to put increasing political pressure on Mr. Arafat to accept the intervention in Lebanon. Page 3.]

Late tonight, spokesmen for both the Palestinians and the right-wing Christians said that Syria had proposed consultations on a possible cease-fire. There were reports that the Syrians were demanding as a condition that the Palestinians withdraw from the mountains.

Mr. Arafat, in his message to the Arab heads of state, said that the Syrian Army had sent large reinforcements into Lebanon before today's attack.

The Syrian forces struck the Palestinian mountain positions from the east and the south. They made their main drive westward from the Christian city of Zahle

Wife and Mother of Soviet MIG Pilot Appeal for His Re

By CHRISTOPHER S. WREN
Special to The New York Times

MOSCOW, Sept. 28—The wife and the mother of a Soviet pilot who flew his jet fighter to Japan were brought forward today by the Soviet authorities to plead for him to come home without fear of punishment.

At a news conference for Soviet and foreign reporters, Lyudmila Petrovna Belenko said she had been assured "at a sufficiently high level" that her husband, First Lieut. Viktor I. Belenko, would be forgiven, "even if he had made a mistake." A Foreign Ministry spokesman present, Lev V. Krylov, added that "official guarantees have been given by competent Soviet bodies."

Mrs. Belenko and her mother-in-law, Lyudmila Stepanovna Belenko, said they sent a cablegram to President Ford 10 days ago asking him to return the pilot to his family.

Comments Are Widely Publicized

Lieutenant Belenko landed his MIG-25 fighter on the Japanese island of Hokkaido three weeks ago and, according to Japanese authorities, requested asylum in the United States. It was promptly granted by President Ford. The plane, believed by some to be the most advanced of its kind, is being dismantled by Japanese experts with American assistance.

The women's comments figured prominently in Soviet radio and television newscasts, injecting an emotional element into Moscow's campaign to get the plane and pilot back and presenting the United States with an implicit challenge to present Lieutenant Belenko publicly. He has not been heard from since he arrived in the United States on Sept. 9.

George Bush, the Director of Central Intelligence, said in a television program in the United States on Sept. 19 that the defection was a "major intelligence bonanza" and that the debriefing of the pilot was "going well."

The incident has brought a chill to relations between Moscow and Tokyo, with repercussions for Washington. In a statement made public today, the Soviet Union warned Japan a few days ago that failure to return the plane promptly would affect relations between the two countries.

Associated Press

Lyudmilla P. Belenko, left, wife of Lieut. Viktor I. Belenko, the Soviet defector, appears with the pilot's mother at press conference in Moscow.

The Soviet version of the affair is that Lieutenant Belenko lost his bearings on a training flight and, after having landed in Hokkaido for lack of fuel, was kidnapped by the Japanese authorities with the collusion of Washington.

Today the two women stuck to this version as they read from prepared statements and then answered questions. Both dabbed at their eyes with handkerchiefs. At one point Lieutenant Belenko's wife broke down in tears when she said, "I reject the thought that he did this deliberately."

Wife Says Marriage Was Happy

The two women painted a portrait of Lieutenant Belenko as a "patriot" as well as a devoted son and husband. They said he "had excellent marks at school," was a party member and had nurtured the hope of becoming a test pilot.

His wife, who is 25 years old, said they were married five years and had been living happily in the Soviet Far East. A dispatch from Tokyo, published Sept. 22 in The New York Times, quoted intelligence sources as having said that Lieutenant Belenko had an unhappy marriage.

In the news conference, his wife frequently referred to their 3½-year-old son, nicknamed Dima, for Dmitri. The day before the flight to Japan, she said, the pilot played with his son and read him fairy tales.

In their cablegram, sent from the Far Eastern city of Khabarovsk, the two women said they had asked President Ford as "father of a family" to "understand our great sorrow and help as far as possible." Copies of a c of an intimate letter to Lieut ko from his wife were distri

Congressional Conference Bars Export of Plutonium Equipment

By DAVID BURNHAM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—House and Senate conferees, in one of three Congressional moves on nuclear policy, today informally approved an amendment that would prohibit by law the export of equipment to extract plutonium from used uranium. Plutonium is the raw material for nuclear weapons.

Although shipments of such reprocessing equipment are already prohibited by Administration policy, the amendment is another indication of concern in Congress about the executive branch's approach to reducing the spread of nuclear weapons.

The amendment has been actively supported by Representatives Paul Findley, Republican of Illinois, and Clement J. Zablocki, Democrat of Illinois. Partly because Congress is now pushing for adjournment this weekend and partly because the amendment has been added to the controversial Export Administration Act, final approval remains far from certain, and a veto by President Ford is thought possible.

Murphy Backed for Nuclear Agency

In a second action, six Senate members of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy unanimously voted today to approve the nomination of the committee's staff director, George F. Murphy, as a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

In hearings last week, lobbying groups opposed the appointment on the ground that Mr. Murphy's long association with the Joint Committee meant it would be hard for him to make independent judgments in the commission, which is concerned with nuclear material and reactor safeguards.

Whether Mr. Murphy's nomination will be approved by the Senate in the waning days of this Congress remains unclear. According to staff members, Senators John A. Durkin, Democrat of New Hampshire, and William Proxmire, Democrat of Wisconsin, have decided to take action, including a filibuster if needed, to block the nomination.

Mr. Murphy, a registered Democrat, was recommended to the White House by Senator Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, and is actively supported by Senator John O. Pastore, the Rhode Island Democrat who is chairman of the Joint Committee.

Congressional Review Canceled

In the third action involving nuclear policy, the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy eliminated an amendment to an authorization bill that would have required the Congress to review nuclear fuel exports to such countries as India.

The committee's rejection occurred as it met to act as the House-Senate conferees on the $7 billion authorization bill for the Energy Research and Development Administration. This agency is responsible for the uses of nuclear, fossil and other forms of energy.

Because the amendment requiring Congressional review of nuclear fuel exports had already been voted by both the House and the Senate, its rejection by the Joint Committee may be subject to a point of order when it returns for final approval. If an objection is raised and upheld, it could endanger the entire authorization for the energy agency.

An application to export more than 24,000 pounds of slightly enriched uranium to India is now pending before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Some groups oppose uranium exports to India, partly because of its explosion of nuclear device in 1974.

Syrians Pressing Arafat to Shift Position on Lebanon

By JAMES F. CLARITY
Special to The New York Times

DAMASCUS, Syria, Sept. 28—In addition to its military actions in Lebanon, Syria has begun to step up political pressure on Yasir Arafat, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, to accept Syrian intervention and to give active support to the new Lebanese Government of President Elias Sarkis.

The accelerated pressure was clearly reflected today in a long article in Al Baath, the newspaper of the governing Baath Party, headed by President Hafez al-Assad, calling for a change in leadership in the P.L.O. The Syrian pressure has also taken the form of arrests of scores of Palestinians living in Syria and of close surveillance of the activities of Palestinian leaders in Damascus.

Palestinian leaders here, while not so outspoken as those in Beirut, expressed disappointment and discouragement over the Syrian actions and pressures since Syria sent occupation forces—15,000 troops and 500 tanks—into Lebanon early in June.

400 Reported Arrested

In interviews, the Damascus-based Palestinians said that since May about 400 Palestinian nationals had been arrested in Syria and that about 100 were still in jail, most of them charged with complicity in recent street bombings that killed and injured several civilians. Some of the bombs exploded in offices of the Baath Party. In one case, Syrian security policemen were said to have killed a Palestinian suspected of being a terrorist near the headquarters of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, one of the P.L.O.'s strongest units.

What disturbs the Palestinians most, is that the Government apparently condoned actions to weaken Mr. Arafat's leadership. No leader can replace Mr. Arafat, said a key Palestinian official here. He said that rumors envisioning the replacement of Mr. Arafat come from "imperialist" circles. Another leader, however, said the source of the anti-Arafat rumors was Egypt.

The anti-Arafat effort took the form of leaflets, found a week ago in a residential area here, calling for a change in the Palestinian leadership. The incident was not reported in Syrian newspapers or broadcasts. But today, on its political page, Al Baath published a statement appealing for a change. It was signed by a hitherto unheard of group, the Struggle Council of the P.L.O.

In defending Mr. Arafat, Palestinian leaders acknowledged that the Syrian intervention had weakened the P.L.O. "There are differences in views between us and Syria," said a ranking Palestinian official. Asked if he approved of the intervention in Lebanon, he said, "We prefer that all Arab armies be on the front against Israel, the aggressor."

One Palestinian, Khalid Fahum, who lives in Damascus and is president of the Palestinian National Council, or parliament, denied reports that he was a possible candidate to replace Mr. Arafat. Mr. Fahum, who is not a member of Fatah or any of the other militant Palestinian groups, said that at the time of the June intervention he had spoken to President Assad. "In the depth of his heart," Mr. Fahum said, "Assad prefers us to the other parties in Lebanon." Mr. Fahum added that the effect of the war on the Palestinian movement was, "It weakened us."

"It weakened our cause in the eyes of the world," he said." Now we have all the support of the Communist parties in Europe, in France, in Italy. But is this helping us? No."

ummand of the Pales- banese Moslems and Syrian tanks had bee ghting.

At stake in the offensive is a pear-shaped area that starts 12 miles east of Beirut, just north of the main Damascus highway, which at that point is under Palestinian control.

The area stretches northeastward from a point west of Hammana to the 6,000-foot-high peak of Jebel Sannin 25 miles east northeast of Beirut. Palestinian forces are dug in on the peak, and from there, their guns can reach a mountain pass a few miles farther north containing a road that connects Christian-held areas in and north of Beirut with the Bekaa valley of Eastern Lebanon.

This road, which runs from the Christian-held port of Junieh through Aintura to Zahle, can be kept open in winter, at least most of the time, and its capture appears to be the immediate objective of the Syrian drive.

Palestinian forces in the mountain area near Hammana are estimated at 1,200 to 1,500.

Chtaura was the site of the inauguration of President Sarkis last week. It is on the Damascus highway in the Syrian-controlled part of eastern Lebanon just south of Zahle, where the Syrians have one of their heaviest concentrations of tanks. Zahle apparently was the starting point of the attack on Tarshish and Ain Tura.

The Damascus radio confirmed tonight the Syrian involvement in the battle. It reported that combined forces of Assaiqa, the Syrian-controlled Palestinian group, and of the military force called Vanguards of the Lebanese Army "backed by a Syrian regiment" had begun operations in the Lebanese mountains to deal with "bandits" who had been terrorizing villagers there.

The Vanguards of the Lebanese Army is a pro-Syrian group of officers and soldiers from garrisons in eastern Lebanon. They sided with the Syrian Army when it took over that part of the country several years ago.

Earlier in the day the Damascus radio reported that soldiers of Assaiqa and the Vanguards had fought off "dissident elements" in Chtaura.

The Palestinian forces in the mountains east of Beirut have recently been equipped with Soviet-made SAM-7 shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles and Soviet-supplied wire-guided antitank missiles, according to Palestinian and neutral diplomatic sources.

Lebanese politicians who thought that the Syrian drive was meant as a decisive military action against the Palestinians cited today's editorials in the Government-controlled Syrian press and broadcasts by the Damascus radio to support their contention.

The Syrian statements said the Palestinian leadership under Mr. Arafat was directly responsible for a Palestinian guerrilla raid on the Semiramis Hotel in Damascus over the weekend and the seizure of hostages. Three of the Palestinians were hanged after their capture in a gun battle.

The Syrian editorials also spoke of Mr. Arafat and his colleagues as "deviationist leaders."

Today's military offensive was a serious setback for President Sarkis. He was said to have thought that he had at least a month in which to try to settle the Lebanese crisis by political means. He was trying to get two sets of negotiations started—one between Syria and the Palestinians and the other between the rival factions in Lebanon.

Collapses in Congress to Block Missile Sale to the Saudis

id after the meeting the committee that would have "foreign all out of proportion to the technical and military issues involved."

"The basic issue," he said, "is one of our relations with Saudi Arabia." He said that country had been "a good friend of the United States," had "played a stabilizing role in the Middle East," had been "helpful in peace negotiations" and that "it is in our interest to retain the friendship."

Should the arms sale be blocked, Mr. Kissinger expressed doubt that it would lead to an oil embargo, which he said Saudi Arabia had in no way threatened to impose against American companies. But he went on to point out that Saudi Arabia "is in a position to use its influence in many other ways, in oil and in peace efforts."

Mr. Kissinger, in response to a question, specifically left open the possibility that legislative actions aimed at Saudi Arabia, the largest foreign supplier of oil to the United States, could lead to higher oil prices.

With the Senate committee unwilling to act, pro-Israel members of the House gave up their attempt to push a similar resolution through the House Committee on International Relations for action by the House. Representative Benjamin S. Rosenthal, Democrat of Queens, the leading sponsor of the resolution in the House, described the measure as dead, with no chance of being pushed through the House before adjournment late this week.

The Maverick is a television-guided, air to-ground missile that is particularly effective against tanks. The Administration has said that Saudi Arabia, which already has 1,000 of the weapons, needs the additional missiles to meet its defense requirements against such nations as Iraq and Southern Yemen.

Jewish Groups in Effort

Meanwhile, there was increasing doubt that Congress would act before adjournment on legislation to thwart the Arab boycott. The legislation, which is attached as an amendment to an extension of the Export Administration Act, would penalize American companies for complying with the Arab boycott of Israel and would prohibit them from certifying to the Arab countries that they were not trading with Israel.

In what Congressional sources described as a coordinated campaign, various Jewish groups sought today to put pressure on the Administration to relax its opposition to the antiboycott legislation.

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, issued a statement complaining that the Administration had not "exercised its moral leadership in this area" and charging that "spokesmen for the executive branch and especially the State Department have been actively engaged in appeasement by blocking legislation that might offend the oil-rich Arab states."

Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg, President of the American Jewish Congress, called upon President Ford "to declare his support" of the antiboycott legislation and said "reports of Administration backing of the drive to undermine anti-Arab boycott legislation now pending in Congress, if true, would be completely inconsistent with past pledges by Administration spokesmen to protect American business from the depredations of foreign economic boycotts."

Israeli Arabs Halt Work in a Call For Ouster of Top Galilee Official

By WILLIAM E. FARRELL
Special to The New York Times

JERUSALEM, Sept. 28—Israeli Arabs from the Galilee region quietly demonstrated today to back demands for the dismissal of an Israeli official who provoked a furor with his report recommending measures to curb the growth and influence of the country's Arab population.

Sympathy strikes for the Israeli Arabs were held by Palestinian Arabs in Israeli-occupied towns of the West Bank of the Jordan and in the Gaza Strip.

There were violent incidents, mainly involving clashes between Israeli security forces and stone-throwing bands of Arab youths in a number of towns, including Nablus, Hebron, Gaza and Tulkarm.

The Israeli-Arab protest, which took the form of a two-hour work stoppage by municipal employees in many communities in the Galilee, was in sharp contrast with one last March 30, which erupted into riots that left six Israeli-Arabs dead and scores injured.

One resident of Nazareth contrasted today's Israeli Arab protest with the Arab disturbances in the territories Israel has occupied since the 1967 war, and said it demonstrated that "Israeli Arabs are Israelis first and Arabs second although some Israeli Jews tend to put us in the same basket."

Israel's Arab population currently numbers about 450,000. From 1948, when the state of Israel was formed, until the March 30 protest, the Israeli Arabs were generally quiet and nonmilitant. But that is changing. Growing numbers of Israeli Arabs are fighting against what they term their "second-class" citizenship in Israel.

The latest focus of their discontent occurred about three weeks ago with the publication in a newspaper here of a secret report written by Israel Koenig, the chief Israeli official in the Galilee region, that Israeli Arabs have labeled "racist and fascist."

Mr. Koenig said that in two years, the Israeli Arabs would constitute a majority in the Galilee region and that "their increase in the Galilee contains a threat to our very rule in the region."

He recommended a number of proposals to curb the growth and influence of Israel's Arabs, including a decrease in state subsidies to large Arab families and other recommendations offensive to Israel's Arabs. These have been disavowed by a number of Israeli leaders as contrary to official policy. But the disavowals have been regarded as inadequate by Israeli Arab leaders, who are calling for Mr. Koenig's ouster from his post in the Galilee.

"There is more bitterness today because this [Mr. Koenig's report] affects everyone," an Israeli Arab journalist said.

The Israeli Arab demand for Mr. Koenig's ouster provided a new impetus for demonstrations by Arabs in the Israeli-occupied territories. In the West Bank town of Nablus, the evidence of a protest was far more visible than in Nazareth, where shops were open and clusters of tourists wandered through winding streets.

In Nablus, stores were shuttered and for most of the day roving bands of Arab youths periodically occupied a main square burning tires, stoning a branch of an Israeli bank and taunting Israeli security forces and pelting them with rocks.

Any Turnabout on Rhodesia Plan Is Denied by Tanzania's President

By JOHN DARNTON
Special to The New York Times

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania, Sept. 28—President Julius K. Nyerere of Tanzania strongly denied today that the "front-line" African presidents had agreed to detailed proposals for Rhodesian majority rule in talks with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger—proposals they later rejected in public.

On the contrary, he said, "every time Dr. Kissinger tried to mention details, I kept trying to put him off" on the ground that the fine points should be worked out in a conference attended by Rhodesian nationalists.

"I want to know now," President Nyerere said at a news conference, his voice rising to a high pitch, "who is implying that Dr. Kissinger had put these details to us and that we accepted them privately and now somehow we are rejecting them.

"I want to know who is implying that we knew these details," he repeated.

The minority Government in Rhodesia has suggested that the African heads of state agreed to the plan put together by Mr. Kissinger during his 11-day shuttle trip only to harden their demands after the major concession, majority rule within two years, had been extracted.

Some Hold Smith Responsible

Others have argued that Prime Minister Ian D. Smith, whom Mr. Kissinger allowed to make the plan public in a speech to Rhodesians Friday, embellished it in such a way that it became unacceptable to the African leaders.

The resultant controversy is raising suspicions on all sides and doing much to undercut an atmosphere for further talks.

The African presidents—Kenneth D. Kaunda of Zambia, Samora Machel of Mozambique, Sir Seretse Khama of Botswana, Agostinho Neto of Angola and President Nyerere—rejected the features of an interim government for Rhodesia at a weekend conference in Lusaka, Zambia. They said its structure and racial composition would retrain power for the minority. President Nyerere reiterated these points today.

He said that under the plan Mr. Smith himself could "easily" become the chairman of a council of state, which would have legislative powers, supervise the drafting of a constitution and appoint a subordinate council of ministers.

"At one time we were expecting Smith would not be there at all," President Nyerere said. "And this same Smith is running the government. Who will call off the war? Smith? Who is going to appeal to the U.N. to lift sanctions? Smith?"

President Nyerere stressed that the Lusaka statement "accepts certain things and rejects others" and that the position had been communicated to both London and Washington before the presidents met. Sources here said today that Western ambassadors were called to the Foreign Ministry Saturda ymorning so that the Africans' response would not come as a surprise.

So far, the presidents have carefully avoided raising any suggestion of duplicity on the part of Mr. Kissinger.

These signs are taken as indications that the African states want to keep the American channels open and want the peace initiative to continue, through a constitutional conference called by Britain.

Peking TV Varies Mourning Fare

PEKING, Sept. 28 (Agence France-Presse)—For the first time since the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung on Sept. 9, Chinese television tonight stopped broadcasting scenes of sorrow and mourning, and showed instead a program on work and industrial production. The program began with a three-minute showing of the portrait of Chairman Mao framed in black. This was followed by working scenes and pictures of the operations of a steel mill and of military training and maneuvers.

sia Questioning a U.S. View That Aspects of the Peace Settlement Are Negotiable

AEL T. KAUFMAN
The New York Times

Rhodesia, Sept. 28—The rnment today challenged iments of an American t official who suggested he peace settlement outreek by Prime Minister ere less than hard-and-ave-it propositions.
ked the British Govern-end a representative to solve misunderstandings way for peace talks. At rted view of William D. y Secretary of State for Economic Affairs, that aspects of the structure and composition of the biracial interim government described by Mr. Smith Friday were negotiable issues rather than final terms of an agreement. In his comments Mr. Rogers declared that the questioning of these points by the five African Presidents who met Sunday in Lusaka, Zambia, did not constitute a rejection of the settlement package.

"They accepted the essence, the basic sequence of events," Mr Rogers said of the Lusaka communiqué.

Mr. Smith's Government, however, insists that the proposals he reported in his reluctant acceptance of the settlement had been presented to the Rhodesian Government "as a package deal which would have to be accepted or rejected in its entirety."

In a statement issued today by the Prime Minister's office, a spokesman for the Government said that two days before Mr. Smith publicly accepted the proposals, the United States Government had urged Rhodesia to accept the settlement and had conveyed assurances that "no new demands would be raised by the the other side."

Today's statement also said that the six points read out by Mr. Smith as the basis of settlement had been contained in a document presented to him by Mr. Kissinger at the meeting of the two men in Pretoria.

While the statement from Mr. Smith's office did not go so far as to accuse the United States, Britain or the African leaders of reneging on what was understood by the Rhodesian Government to be an ironclad, nonnegotiable framework for the transfer of power toward majority rule, it did request clarification of the confusion that has grown since the Lusaka meeting of the black presidents.

In light of this confusion, the spokesman reported that Mr. Smith had asked Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland of Britain to send Edward Rowlands, his deputy for African affairs, now in Botswana, to Rhodesia "to discuss procedures and other related matters."

The message to Mr. Crosland made it clear that he was not eager to jettison the peace initiative. Instead, it affirmed his "anxiety to proceed as soon as possible with discussion with African leaders with a view to setting up the interim government in terms of the agreement reached in Pretoria."

The Lusaka communiqué did not directly dismisss any of the points of settlement cited by Mr. Smith. It did, however, call in general terms for Britain to convene a conference outside Rhodesia where the structure and composition of the interim government would be established.

7 in Baader-Meinhof Band Get Terms Ranging From 2 to 7 Years

HAMBURG, West Germany, Sept. 29 (UPI)—A West German court sentenced seven members of the Baader-Meinhof urban guerrilla band today to prison terms of two to seven years.

Linked to fire bombing deaths in 1970-72, they were convicted of illegal possession of firearms and explosives and of forging documents. Christa Eckes, 26 years old, drew the longest term for participating in a bank holdup in Hamburg in 1973.

Ulrike Meinhof, one of the band's leaders, committed suicide in a prison cell May 9.

Kissinger Says All Parties Are Eager for Rhodesia Talks and Predicts Rapid Prog

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said today that progress toward the opening of negotiations between Rhodesian blacks and whites would be made rapidly and that "within a week or so I would think that this would become evident."

Speaking to reporters after a closed-door session with the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Kissinger said, "All parties have expressed their willingness, and indeed their eagerness, to get the negotiations going soon."

Pessimistic Views Countered

This was a reference, officials said, not only to messages received from key black African leaders but to one received today from Ian D. Smith, leader of the Rhodesian white minority Government.

"We believe that a breakthrough has been achieved," Mr. Kissinger said, "and the problem now is to settle the negotiations."

Mr. Kissinger's optimistic comments were consistent with his efforts of recent days to combat pessimistic reports from Africa suggesting that hitches had arisen in the negotiations.

A major source of the problems has been the confusion caused by the refusal of the key black African presidents to accept without further discussion the detailed points made by Mr. Smith last Friday.

In that speech, Mr. Smith outlined what he said was a "package proposal" from Mr. Kissinger on behalf of the Americans and British.

Among the points was one outlining what the interim government to be promptly established in Rhodesia would consist of—a council of state, evenly divided between whites and blacks, and a council of ministers with a black majority. A white would head the council of state, and a black the council of ministers, but defense and law and order ministries would be reserved for whites.

Yesterday, William D. Rogers, a top Kissinger aide, said the black leaders had been advised of the points in the Smith speech and had neither accepted nor opposed them.

'A Hard and Fast Package'

This led the Rhodesian Government to say in Salisbury today that Mr. Smith had been told that the points he outlined had been given him as a hard and fast package that had been approved by the blacks, contrary to Mr. Rogers's comments.

In Dar es Salaam, President Julius K. Nyerere of Tanzania said today he had not agreed to the details as outlined by Mr. Smith and had not made any commitments to the form the interim government should take.

But despite the comments from white and black leaders, both sides seemed in agreement with the United States and Britain on the need to get on with discussions for forming the interim government.

The Rhodesian Government called for the negotiations to begin, and Mr. Nyerere said that formation of an interim government in six weeks would mean that Mr. Kissinger's African mission had been a success.

Callaghan Sees Early Resolution

Meanwhile, Edward Rowlands, the British Minister of State for African Affairs, arrived in Botswana to discuss convening a conference to set up an interim government and other issues leading to the eventual formation of a black majority government in two years, when Rhodesia would become formally independent, ending its outlaw status.

Botswana was the focus of attention because African leaders are there this week for ceremonies marking the 10th anniversary of independence. William E. Schaufele Jr., Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, was flying there to represent the United States in the talks.

Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain said that an interim government should be formed in four to six weeks.

"Once that has happened there will be no going back—the die will be cast," he said at the Labor Party's annual conference.

It was a busy day for Mr. Kissinger as he briefed all sorts of ga the Rhodesian negotiations.

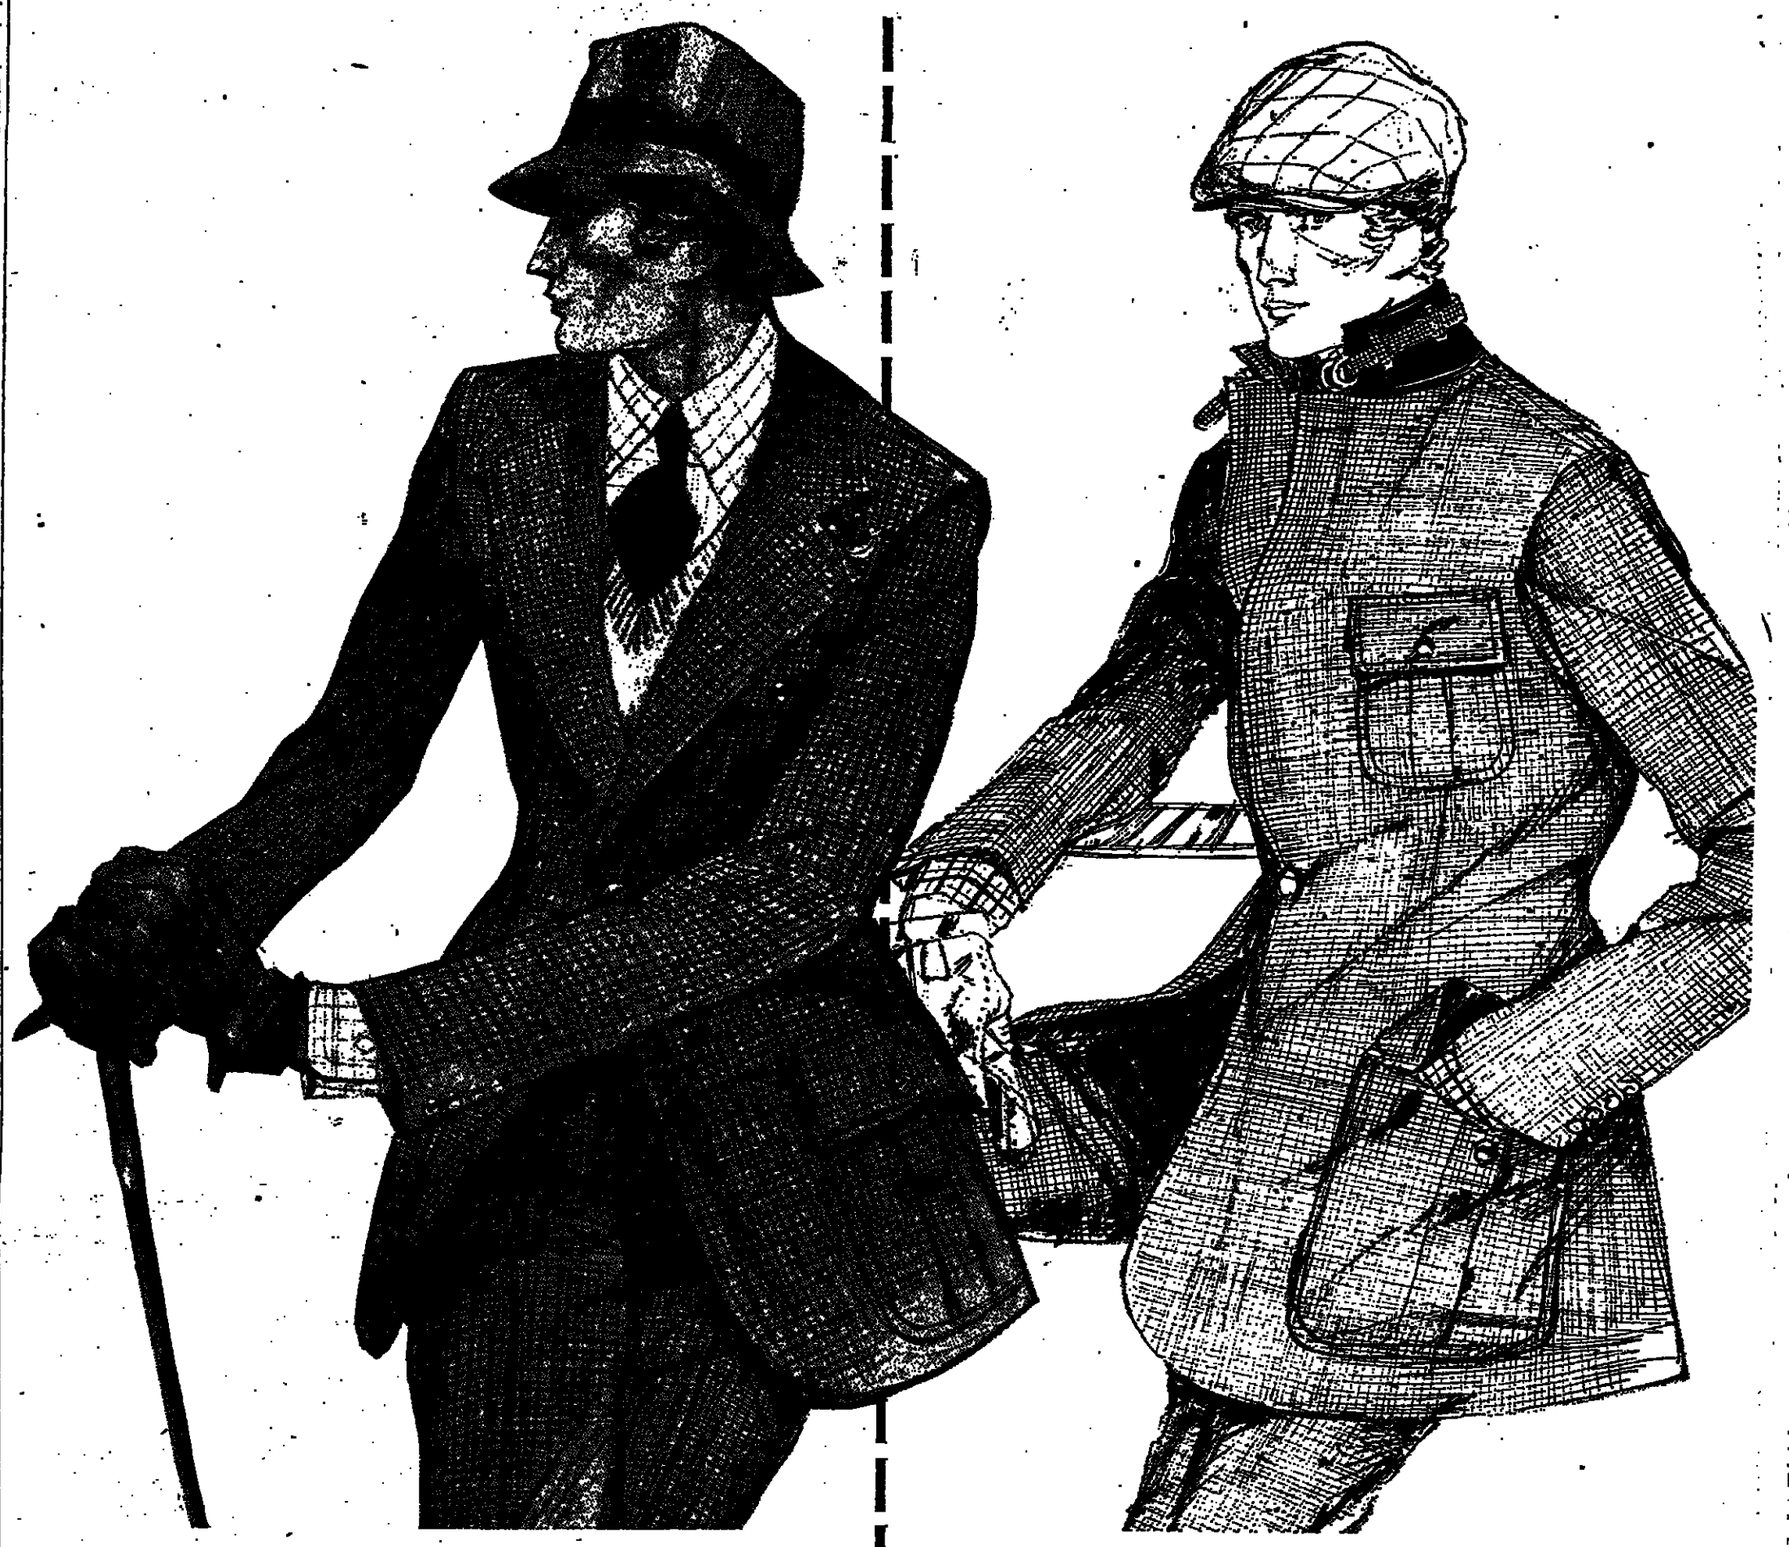
Which of these suits do you prefer?

Be careful; it's a loaded question.



Let's run down a list of possible wrong answers.

1. The one on the right. I like a sporty look. That double-d-ring throat belt is a bit of all right, old chap.

2. The one on the left. It's dressy enough for the office, but still casual. Bellows pockets are news, right?

3. I'll take them both. One for week-ends, one for the work-week.

We gave you a clue in answer #2. "Bellows pockets." Now study our sketches once more, Sherlock. Ah, you got it! These are not two different suits. This is one (very different) suit. With a label you're hearing about more and more: Country Britches.

Pure wool, of course, in an earthy-brown minicheck called "end on end tickweave" by our buyer, who speaks menswear-ese as fluently as English.

You can see on this page how versatile it is. You can't see the straight leg trousers, the buttoned back vent, the change pocket with buttoned flap. And you can't see how fine this new two-in-one suit will look on you. Come prove it to yourself in Altman's Men's Store, main floor.

Libyans Say, 'Our Land Is Fertile,' And Seek Food Self-Sufficiency

By MARVINE HOWE

Special to The New York Times

ARYAN, Libya—They are planting trees where trees shouldn't grow, growing wheat where nobody else would try and breeding sheep in the heart of the desert.

This is all part of the Libyan's insistent struggle for self-sufficiency in food at any cost.

Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, leader of Libya's seven-year-old revolution, believes that a country is not independent until it can feed itself, and he is determined that Libya will reach self-sufficiency by 1985.

"Our soil is fertile and cultivable," Colonel Qaddafi has proclaimed. "It is still virgin and must be turned green."

Aryan is at the center of the Jafara Plain, south of Tripoli, once a breadbasket for the Romans and now an important base for Libya's ambitious agricultural program.

The Government has given top priority to agriculture under the 1976-1980 development plan. More than $4 billion has been allocated to that sector for the five-year period, or 17 percent of total development money. This includes projects of land reclamation, irrigation, water research, forestation, animal production, mechanization and any kind of scheme to squeeze food out of the desert.

This means that the Libyans will probably be producing some of the world's costliest sheep, alfalfa, cereal, fruit and vegetables.

But it doesn't really matter. Libya has the money and would rather spend it on national products than on imported food, which it has done in the past. This year's oil revenue is expected to exceed $7.5 billion.

"Everyone is screaming that there is going to be a world famine, and so the least we can do, is to feed our own people," Omar Muntassaar, head of the Libyan National Oil Company said recently.

Seek to Prove Experts Wrong

At present, the Libyans are self-sufficient in only oranges, eggs, poultry and honey.

Most international reports hold that only 2 percent of Libya's vast territory, three times the size of Texas, is arable. The Libyans refuse to accept this judgment and have set up a national water agency to prove that the experts are wrong.

The young, determined directors of the General Water Authority are quick to produce for visitors a water research map showing water reconnaissance work, studies or projects, covering about half the country.

"Our research will cover all of Libya," Nuri Sbak, the 31-year-old president of the General Water Authority said in an interview.

Before the 1969 revolution against the monarchy, there was no systematic study of the country's water resources, according to Mr. Sbak.

"The revolution found that water was an important limiting factor of our development and strategy to attain self-sufficiency in food," he said.

French, Egyptian and other contractors have made studies and exploratory drillings—and water is being found. Villages and towns that used to import water now have wells.

As a result of the water research, four principal agricultural areas have been mapped out for intensive development: Kufra and el-Sarir deep in the eastern Sahara, the Fezzan desert area around Sebha to the west, Tebel al-Akhdar or the Green Mountains on the coast from Benghazi to Tobruk and the Jafara Plain south of Tripoli.

'On Frontier of Knowledge'

At the Sarir Sand Sea, which is part of the Kufra project, technicians are studying an inexpensive project to transport one million cubic meters of water a day by pipeline to the Gulf of Sirte.

The second desert farm area is the Fezzan. The water reserves here too are said to be "on the frontier of knowledge." Nevertheless, Yugoslav and West German technicians are working on projects for fruit trees, grazing land and cereals.

The other conventional farm area, which with Jafara shows the best results, is along the coast: the Green Mountains east of Benghazi, where the ancient Greeks farmed.

Both of these areas have salinity problems. Water consumption has increased rapidly. The water table has gone down and there is said to be an inflow of sea water.

The Water Authority has launched an education campaign through posters and brochures distributed around the country.

"Water is a gift from God," reads the message in Arabic on the walls of Tripoli. "It is our duty to protect it. The protection of water is the protection of life."

The Libyan's basic problem, according to the Water Authority president Mr. Sbak, is that since oil was discovered a score of years ago, the people have forgotten about water.

$5.1 BILLION IS VOTED IN FOREIGN AID FUNDS

water conservation and the preservation of historic landmarks.

¶The Senate passed by voice vote and sent to the House an $865 million supplemental appropriations bill, with $500 million intended to meet part of the Postal Service's $3 billion debt and $334 million earmarked to repair governmental facilities and compensate victims of the Teton Dam collapse in Idaho and typhoon Pamela on Guam.

Thoughout the day Senate and House conferees also sought to settle differences in the clean air amendments, chiefly as to whether the Government should relax auto emissions standards, while the House debated a measure calling for the first major revision in the lobbying laws in 30 years.

The foreign aid bill was the final major appropriations measure for the fiscal year 1977 to clear Congress. Of the total amount of $5.1 billion, all but $1 billion is to go for traditional foreign aid. The $4.1 billion includes $2.7 billion for military grants and loans and $1.4 billion for economic assistance.

Israel is to receive the largest single amount of money, $1 billion, for military purposes. Half the funds consist of loans, the remainder are grants.

Other funds would go to operate the Peace Corps and the Agency for International Development, as well as to meet United States contributions to the Asian Development Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, and the International Development Association.

Provisions of the toxic substance bill empower the head of the Environmental Protection Agency to prohibit manufacturers from putting new chemicals on the market before they have been tested for their effects on human health and the environment.

"This bill closes the last major loophole existing in consumer and environmental law," said Senator Warren G. Magnuson, Democrat of Washington, the chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee.

The ban on PCB's would be phased in over several years, with the head of the E.P.A. being given discretion to permit limited production in about 1980. PCB's are widely used as insulation in electrical equipment.

PCB's have been identified with the contamination of fish and other wildlife in many areas of the United States, including the Hudson River, the Great Lakes and the Gulf of Mexico. Japanese scientists have found that the chemicals cause cancer and genetic damage to humans who have been exposed to large amounts of the compounds.

The fate of the bill at the White House is uncertain since the Ford Administration considers some of its regulatory provisions to be both too strict and duplicating those of some current Federal laws.

The Administration also had misgivings over the outer continental shelf lands bill for some of the same reasons. Mr. Ford had threatened to veto the measure if it was sent to him by Congress.

Most environmental groups had supported the legislation, which was aimed at the efficient development of the oil and gas resources in the continental shelf of the United States while protecting the coastal regions from the potential hazards of oil spills.

The bill was also intended to promote competition within the petroleum industry by prohibiting large companies from making joint bids on offshore Federal tracts believed to contain oil and gas, while requiring some bidding systems other than the cash-bonus method most commonly in use.

One of its most controversial features ordered the Federal Government to undertake an experimental program of exploratory drilling in an effort to find out what mineral resources the offshore tracts contained.

Opponents of the measure, including the major oil companies, the Administration and several representatives who spoke today, contended that this would "put the Government in the oil business" and delay rather than accelerate the development of new oil fields.

However, according to Representative Silvio Conte, Republican of Massachusetts, sending the bill back to committee "represents a cave-in to the oil barons."

Representative John M. Murphy, the Staten Island Democrat who was the floor manager of the bill, termed the measure "a sound and rational management system for the exploitation of our offshore energy resources." He said he would seek to revise the bill to delete provisions objectionable to the Administration, such as the Federal drilling program, and bring it back to the floor before adjournment. But only three legislative days remain, and its passage was viewed as extremely doubtful.

Yugoslavia Cracks Down on Slovenes Who Urge More Political Freedom

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
Special to The New York Times

LJUBLJANA, Yugoslavia, Sept. 25—In drive to "purify" the press and courts f the Slovenian Republic, the authorities ere have sentenced a non-Communist ournalist to two years' imprisonment and ave charged a judge with treason.

The prosecution of the judge, which ould theoretically result in a death sen- ence or 20 years in prison, is regarded s a landmark blow against any inde- endence for the judiciary.

The journalist, Viktor Blazic, who is ot a member of the Communist arty, was employed by the Slovenian arty newspaper, Delo. He was sentenced Sept. 16 for having written an article for Zaliv, a Slovenian-language magazine published in Trieste, Italy, urging greater political freedom in Slovenia.

The judge, Franz Miklavcic, was arrested May 17 in a courtroom here while conducting a case. He has been held in prison awaiting trial, which is expected in October. A guerrilla who fought under Marshal Tito during World War II, he has also not joined the Communist Party and is believed to be the only nonmember who is a judge in Slovenia.

Like the journalist, he was arrested for having written an article on Slovenian freedom for the Trieste review. The police seized his private diary, entries in which have been used in formulating the treason charge. The entries are believed to have touched on Slovene nationalism, although the judge was not known to his family and friends as a believer in Slovene separatism.

Both men have been linked with Edvard Kocbek, a leading Slovene writer and one of the elder statesmen of the Government who is now in disgrace. A cabinet minister under President Tito in 1945-47, he is a liberal and a Roman Catholic and never joined the Communist Party. After he fell out with Marshal Tito he expressed grief for 12,000 Slovene conscripts who were handed over to the Communist authorities by their British captors after World War II and were shot along with Nazi officials, political collaborators and war criminals.

When the comment was published by Zaliv, Mr. Kocbek, who lives here, was summoned twice by the secret police. It is a crime for a Yugoslav to write any article or be interviewed for publication abroad without official approval. He was presumably spared prison because of his wartime service and his diseased heart; his apartment is kept under surveillance and his telephone and mail are monitored.

When the journalist and the judge wrote articles supporting Mr. Kocbek, they were arrested.

Russian Stabs Herself on Refusal Of Visa to Join Husband in Sweden

MOSCOW, Sept. 28 (AP)—A 37-year-old woman stabbed herself in the chest at a Moscow passport office after she was refused permission to emigrate to Sweden, where her husband is living, relatives said today.

Lyudmila Agapova was being treated in a hospital, where a doctor said her life was not in danger.

Her husband, Valentin, was traveling in Sweden two years ago with a Soviet group when he decided not to return home. Six months later Mrs. Agapova applied for permission for herself, her 13-year-old daughter and her husband's 66-year-old mother to join him. Permission was initially denied because Mrs. Agapova had worked in a factory whe parts were assembled for space relatives said.

n Provinces commending ed Flu Effort

nitoba, Sept. 28—Provinities have recommended against swine flu in e confined for the time ally ill persons and inms.

dopted unanimously by 'or the nation's 10 provnce with the proposals eral Ministry of Health and Welfare in Ottawa, which call for more widespread immunization. Under the Federal plan, the inoculations are recommended for all persons between 20 and 50 years old, and all those over 65, the age groups considered most vulnerable to infection by swine flu. The immunizations are voluntary under both plans.

Effects on Children

The provincial ministers, who are responsible for carrying out health policy in their provinces, have acted upon professional advice to withhold sanction of a mass inoculation procedure pending further evidence that a previous outbreak of swine flu was more than an "isolated episode," an official of the Manitoba Ministry of Health said today.

Provincial health authorities also want to know more about the effects of the vaccine, especially upon children, he added.

However, he declared, the provinces will go ahead with mass immunization "if a single proven case of swine flu appears anywhere in the world."

The cautious approach approved by the provincial health ministers will be recommended to their individual governments. There is no expectation that the governments may depart from Canadian custom by turning down ministerial advice in this instance.

Meanwhile, the official stated, the provinces have ordered sufficient amounts of vaccine for the extensive program urged by the Federal government. The vaccine, produced in the United States, will begin arriving in October, he said.

"To us it seems reasonable to order the vaccine now, and equally reasonable to hold our fire until we have more information," he said, referring to possible side effects and the paucity of information as to how the immunization might affect children.

In the case of Manitoba, the official declared, the limited program would provide immunization to 24,000 persons out of the provincial population of about one million.

COLORADO TAX PROPOSAL IS RULED OFF THE BALLOT

DENVER, Sept. 28 (AP)—An initiative that would have required voter approval of all future taxes was ordered off Colorado's Nov. 2 ballot yesterday by a retired State Supreme Court justice.

Justice Edward C. Day stayed his decision until next Monday to allow an appeal to be filed. Backers of the measure said that one would be forthcoming quickly.

The measure, Amendment 10 on the state's general elections ballot, would require voter approval before any existing tax could be increased or any new local or state tax could be started in Colorado.

Justice Day ruled that some signatures collected on petitions to place the measure on the ballot were invalid.

Justice Day retired from the high court yesterday morning but was assigned by the chief justice to cover the vacant courtroom of United States District Court Judge Robert Kingsley.

In a closed hearing, Justice Day concluded that at least 8,147 of the 63,990 signatures were invalid because they were cut and separated from the original petition, which ran as a newspaper advertisement. He said the action rendered the signatures worthless because it could have invited fraudulent actions, although he said he doubted that any had occurred.

"If this decision is upheld, then 64,000 people have been deprived of their constitutional rights," said Thomas J. Morroni, the chairman of a group calling itself Stop Tax Increases.

West German Formula: Not Just Work, but Minimizing of Industrial Strife

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
Special to The New York Times

BONN, Sept. 28—The West German industrial machine works, but it is not a military colossus. It is, instead, a reflection of a political and social consensus that may be unique in Western Europe.

Germans do not work all that much harder than anyone else, and they have more paid holidays, but the work they do is more effective because labor, management and government are not at each other's throats the way they so often are in France, Britain and Italy.

Here the head of seven million union-organized workers can agree with the head of the several score industrial employers' associations to keep wage increases below 6 percent, and the agreement sticks.

This society is built like a colonnade, each pillar closely linked to the next one. Union members sit on the boards of industry, government officials help steer huge companies like Volkswagen through troubled times and public opinion plays a constant controlling role through the press, through mass political parties and through frequent public-opinion polls.

Key Roles Behind Scenes

Whoever wins the general election Sunday—Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democrats or Helmut Kohl's Christian Democrats—those pillars will stand. Here are some of the people who play the key roles more or less behind the scenes in holding them steady.

Heinz-Oskar Vetter, 58 years old, chairman of the Federation of German Labor Union in Düsseldorf presides over 7.4 million workers, organized in 16 industrywide unions. They own banks, insurance companies and the largest real-estate concern in the country. By law they hold half the seats on the boards of directors of the largest industries.

"For the past year," Mr. Vetter said, "we have been engaged in a revolutionary social experiment. We agreed to hold down our wage demands to give industry a chance to make investments that will create new jobs. This fall and next spring will show if the other side has kept its part of the bargain."

Contributions by the Unions

When Chancellor Schmidt visited the United States last July, Mr. Vetter and a heavyset, cigar-smoking industrialist, Dr. Hanns Martin Schleyer, 61, were in the plane with him. Dr. Schleyer is the president of the Federation of German Employers Associations, which has no equivalent in the United States. Dr. Schleyer is Mr. Vetter's opposite number at the bargaining table.

"The labor unions, with all the conflicts we have with them," Dr. Schleyer said, "have contributed to the stability and health of the economy in recent years by showing a great deal of responsibility."

Karl-Otto Pöhl, 46, has a foot in both government and industry. As the chief monetary expert in the Finance Ministry, he has been a key figure in Mr. Schmidt's repeated decisions to revalue the mark, making it the strongest major European currency. He is also deputy chairman of the board of the German company that suffered the most revaluation—Volkswagen which is building an assembly plant in New Stanton, Pa., because the strength of the mark has been pricing German-made Rabbits right out of the American market.

"We accepted a steady revaluation of the mark even though we knew it would put our exports at a price disadvantage on world markets," Mr. Pöhl said. "It is one of the reasons why West Germany didn't import worldwide inflation."

Growing Role for the Whip

Mr. Pöhl, a member of Mr. Schmidt's Social Democratic party, is a banker by profession. He sits on the Volkswagen board because the federal Government owns a fifth of its shares. After the company went hundreds of millions of dollars into the red in 1974, he helped select a new general manager, Toni Schmücker, who moved it back into the black and made the decision to shift some Rabbit production to the United States.

If the Christian Democrats win in October they might have to keep him, a friend in the Finance Ministry remarked.

Even if the opposition does not win, it appears certain to shave Mr. Schmidt's 46-seat majority in Parliament, and then Herbert Wehner, 70, will become an even more important figure. A lonely man, he is the Social Democrats' whip in Parliament and for years was their chief political strategist. It was he who pushed through the legislative compromise that gave Mr. Vetter's workers half the seats on West German industrial boards, though it did not satisfy the unions because it leaves the power of breaking a deadlock with shareholders' nominees.

Without his influence, Helmut Schmidt and his predecessor, Willy Brandt, could never have risen to power since the Social Democrats were a minority proletarian party with strong Marxist overtones until they adopted middle-way social reformism in 1959.

Almost a legend, Mr. Wehner is distrusted by many because he was a Communist until World War II. He has spent most of his later years regretting his error—"the error of thinking that as a Communist a man can improve the human social condition."

Publisher With Big Impact

Then there is Axel Caesar Springer, 64, a publisher who has become a symbol of resistance to West German compromise with the Communist states.

"It was one of my blackest days," he said in a speech last June, "when the treaties with the Soviet bloc were signed. I am not a seeker of revenge. I am a German who simply wants freedom for all Germans, not just for us here in the free West.

If the Christian Democrats win he will be no small part of the reason. His conservative newspaper Bild Zeitung is read by five million West Germans every day. His publishing company took in $500 million last year and made a profit of $10 million, double the 1974 figure. His empire of book-publishing houses, newspapers in Hamburg, Munich, West Berlin and Bonn, and mass magazines reflects his political attitude.

At odds with Mr. Schmidt's Government, Mr. Springer would be a powerful backer of one headed by Mr. Kohl.

J.H. Darchinger, Gerlammler, Ulrike Medart

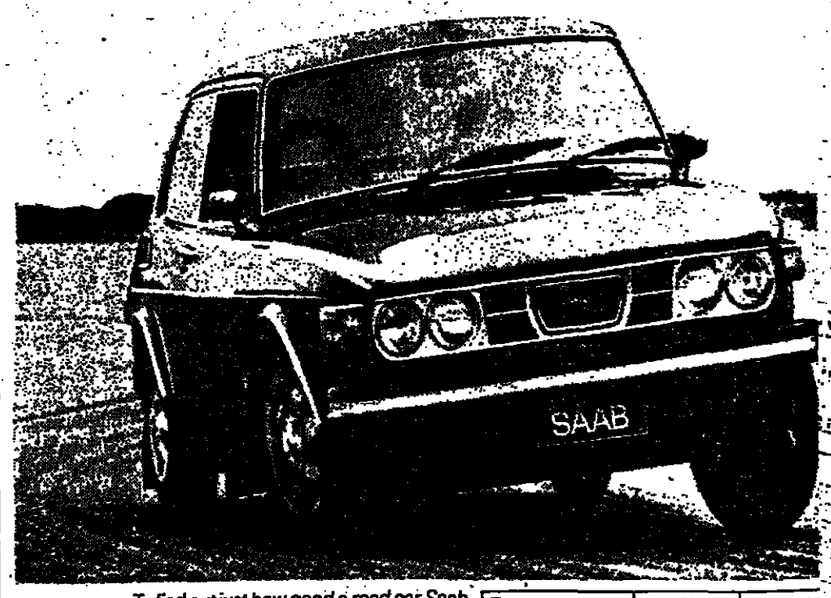
THE ROAD CAR. COMPARE I



To find out just how good a road car Saab really is, we decided to have an independent testing company compare it with what we thought was the toughest competition around: a BMW 2002.

They ran both cars through a series of performance tests designed to measure those characteristics that make a car a true road car: a skid pad test to measure G-Force in cornering, a slalom course for handling, and, of course, acceleration and braking tests.

The results confirmed what we expected. As the chart shows, the Saab and BMW 2002 are quite a match. The Saab was at least an equal in every category. We weren't surprised, but a number of BMW owners may be.

However, don't just take our word for it. There's only one way to find out how good a car really is. Drive it. We did. And look at what happened.

Test	Saab 99 EMS	BMW 200
Acceleration:
0-30 MPH (Sec.)	3.8	3.5
0-60 MPH (Sec.)	11.8	12.0
¼ Mile (Sec.)	18.27	18.33
¼ Mile (MPH)	74.2	73.0
Slalom MPH	46.55	43.13
Skid Pad MPH	32.63	32.77
G-Force	0.711	0.717
Braking:
30-0 MPH (Ft)	40.4	40.3
60-0 MPH (Ft)	154.7	153.2

The tests were conducted by American Testi Institute with 1976 model cars in March of t year. Both cars were 2-door sedans with 4-spe manual transmissions. Test results are availat upon request.

lew Inquiry at West Point Started As Hoffman Confers With Panel

BY JAMES FERON
Special to The New York Times

VEST POINT, N.Y., Sept. 28 — Secre- of the Army Martin R. Hoffmann ed the United States Military Acade- today to open what is likely to be final but most significant of the many uiries into the West Point cheating ndal.

Ir. Hoffmann asked a newly appointed el of educators and former military , some of whom were meeting for first time, for "an independent and assionate analysis" into the "underly- causes" of the cheating incident and provide "recommendations for im- vements" in the cadet honor system.

ven as Mr. Hoffmann spoke in the ge of Grant Hall before high-ranking y and Academy officials, cadet lead- were drafting proposed changes in honor system that has long sought prevent cheating, lying and stealing ng cadets.

he changes, which are likely to be before the corps for approval next nth, would help protect accused cadets ing honor boards, or initial trials, le permitting some who were found lty to remain at the academy. The only alty now is expulsion.

he panel, headed by Frank Borman, rmer astronaut and West Point gradu- who is president of Eastern Airlines, ened as Mr. Hoffmann described the mplex" origins of the incident in pre- and seemingly expert terms.

t began as a cheating incident last rch on a graded homework problem junior level engineering, he said. Ini- y, it was thought that 123 cadets ht have been involved, but the num- s eventually became "unprecedented cale," Mr. Hoffmann said.

fore than 220 of the 820 cadets who k the test have been implicated so Nearly half of them have resigned ler special conditions that could facili- their return after one year. Hundreds others named in affidavits by accused and guilty cadets are currently under investigation.

Mr. Hoffmann referred to "some institutional shortcomings" in handling the incident, which critics have said West Point long sought to discount, and warned panel members that he—the Army Secretary—also had "become part of the problem" by intervening.

Contributing Factors Sought

Nevertheless, he said, the panel must find the "causative and contributing factors" of the incident and determine whether the honor code and system imposed a realistic and reasonable set of standards.

"Is the code accepted by cadets as a way of life or do they adhere to it merely because of the consequence of violation?" he asked.

He asked the panel to find out if academic, athletic and military training pressures on cadets were realistic at West Point and whether they contributed effectively to the mission of the Academy. "Does the institution properly support the code? Is there sufficient instruction on honor matters?" he asked.

Mr. Hoffmann recalled cheating incidents at West Point in 1951 and at the Air Force Academy in 1965 as well as the investigations conducted earlier in the current incident. "You are entering, to some extent, a second generation problem because we've been through it quite extensively," he said.

Lawyers Would Be Advisers

The Army Secretary added, however, that the panel's scope was unlimited and he suggested several times in a letter to the panel that they could also study the overall situation at the Military Academy.

According to cadets who have commented on recent briefing sessions by honor committee members, meanwhile, the proposed changes in the administration of the honor code, if approved, would be far-reaching. "For one thing," a cadet who has already been found guilty said, "they will bring due process into the honor boards."

Army lawyers, previously barred from the honor boards, or "grand jury" stage of honor enforcement, would serve not only accused cadets but also the prosecution and the board itself as an adviser under the proposed changes.

Jurors would be selected from three of the four classes, including the "plebe," or freshman, class rather than only from among honor committee members, who are juniors and seniors. An accused cadet would be permitted to determine the general makeup of the panel, although not its specific members.

Thus, the honor board would become more of a jury than it is today, removing that function from the officer boards, which would serve more precisely as appeals panels. The present system of determining guilt, a unanimous vote of 12 honor board members, would be changed to a vote of 10 to 2. This would protect the cadet less, its proponents say, but it would make bribery of board members more difficult.

A two-thirds vote of the corps of cadets would be necessary to approve the changes. Under a separate proposed referendum, the honor board would take a second vote to determine if cadets found guilty would be permitted to remain at West Point. The Superintendent, Lieut. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, had testified that he favored such discretion in certain cases such as self-reported violations and unusual stress.

HOW TO SAVE IT BETTER OR SPEND IT BETTER... ALL IN ONE BANK.

Emigrant Savings Bank has a way to help you save money even while you're spending money.

It's our Free Checking Account and it's really free.

Because unlike lots of other banks that advertise free checking, Emigrant doesn't ask you to maintain a minimum balance in either your checking or savings account.

At Emigrant, not only is there no minimum balance required, there are no check charges or monthly service charges.

The only thing we do ask is that you have an Emigrant Savings Account and as little as five dollars will open one.

You can even apply for overdraft loan privileges of up to $1000. After you qualify you'll have a credit reserve anytime you need it.

And when you're not saving on your spending, we'll help you save on your savings, too.

That's because your Emigrant Savings Account earns you the highest bank dividend rates allowed by law. 5¼% from day of deposit, compounded daily and credited quarterly. Yielding 5.47% per year on daily dividend or grace day accounts.

So whoever said, "you can't have it both ways," was wrong. They just didn't know about Emigrant.

'French Connection' Narcotics Figure Changes His Plea to Guilty

By MAX H. SEIGEL

A major figure in the so-called "French Connection" case, charged with heading an international ring that smuggled half a ton of heroin and cocaine into the United States from 1968 to 1972, pleaded guilty yesterday to smuggling-conspiracy charges.

The defendant, Dominique Orsini, 54 years old, had originally pleaded not guilty in Federal Court in Brooklyn. But he changed his plea immediately after Judge Henry Bramwell rejected his contention that he had been tortured by the Senegalese police in Dakar at the direction of American officials before being put on a flight to the United States.

Mr. Orsini, a native of the French island of Corsica and a key figure in Corsica-based international crime, arrived in Dakar on Aug. 7, 1975, on a routine stop of a flight from Argentina to Nice, in southern France, and was arrested immediately.

He was the supplier in Marseilles of the narcotics that were later distributed by the "French Connection" dealers.

In rejecting Mr. Orsini's contention that he was tortured, Judge Bramwell said that testimony and documents showed no torture and no involvement of American officials or any use of force.

"This court further finds," the judge said, "that any force that may have been used by Senegalese police on Aug. 25, 1975, was both reasonable and justified under the circumstances presented in that Mr. Orsini was unreasonably and violently resisting the sovereign and legitimate act of the Senegalese Government in expelling him from that country."

Gino Gallina, Mr. Osini's lawyer, then told the court that his client wished to change his plea to guilty under an arrangement worked out with the prosecutor, David A. DePetris, an assistant United States attorney. The arrangement calls for Mr. Orsini not to be sentenced to more than 10 years and for no further prosecution in the Eastern District. Normally he would face up to 20 years in jail and a $20,000 fine.

Judge Bramwell then asked Mr. Orsini whether he was guilty of taking part in a conspiracy. Speaking through an interpreter, Mr. Orsini replied that he had attended a meeting in Martinez, Argentina, in October 1970 to discuss the shipment of narcotics to the United States.

"The conversation was about heroin," he said. "The purpose of that agreement which was reached was to send narcotics to the United States. It was a stupid action on my part which was knowingly and voluntarily done."

After his plea, he was kept in Federal custody in lieu of bail of $1.5 million.

Nixon, in His Memoirs, Calls Watergate Scandal Partisan Effort That Caused Him Great Injustice

tain Henry A. Kissinger as Secretary of State.

¶After President Nixon's farewell to the nation on television, Mr. Kissinger walked back to the Oval Office with Mr. Nixon and told him that he had just delivered one of the greatest speeches in American political history and would be regarded as one of the great Presidents.

¶Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, in their book "The Final Days," describe an emotional scene in which President Nixon and Mr. Kissinger got down on their knees and prayed together, but Mr. Nixon writes that they stood and prayed.

From the beginning, Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., then the White House chief of staff and now the North Atlantic Treaty Organization commander, was certain that Mr. Nixon would have to resign. Ronald L. Ziegler, press secretary and later Presidential assistant, opposed resignation.

¶Tricia Nixon Cox, the former President's daughter — whose own diary entries are quoted extensively in the manuscript—at one point heard a group booing her father and started toward them until restrained.

¶In the final hours, Pat Nixon tried to persuade her husband to go to a window to acknowledge what she thought were friendly crowds outside the White House. In fact, they were shouting, "Jail to the chief!"

Sales Campaign Under Way

World rights to the Nixon memoirs are owned by Warner Books, whose executives have been conducting an international sales campaign. At the recent Frankfurt Book Fair in West Germany, they showed a secret 13-page topic outline to potential publishers of foreign-language editions. It was read only in a small booth behind a drawn curtain and only in the presence of Warner executives.

The potential clients were not permitted to make notes on the contents of the Nixon documents and were asked to promise not to discuss them. Despite the stringent security measures, it is known that one copy of the secret outline got away.

The outline promises that Mr. Nixon will also discuss how he learned of the Watergate break-in; why he had a tape-recording system installed in the White House and why he decided not to destroy damaging recordings after their existence was publicly disclosed; how he learned of an 18½-minute gap on one of the tapes; his assessments of H. R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, Charles W. Colson and John W. Dean 3d, all White House aides; a $100,000 contribution from Howard R. Hughes, and the pardon granted to Mr. Nixon by President Ford.

2 Choices for Vice Presidents

In addition, the book is to discuss the Vietnam war and Mr. Nixon's two choices for Vice President. The outline puts it succinctly: "The resignation of Vice President Agnew" and "The decision-making process behind the choice of Gerald Ford to be Vice President in October 1973."

The Vietnam war is to be covered in great detail, beginning with 1969 and the secret bombing of Cambodia during the first months of the Nixon Administration, and ending in 1973 with secret discussions about the renewal of bombing and the impact of domestic considerations, including Watergate, on these matters.

On Vietnam, the outline promises to explain such controversial matters as Vice President Agnew's speech attacking the news media, the Mylai massacre and Congressional attempts to cut off war funding or set a date for withdrawal from Vietnam, the impact of North Vietnamese propaganda on American opinion, the impact of Secretary Kissinger's "peace is at hand" news conference and the decision to break off negotiations and begin the Christmas bombing in 1972.

Mr. Nixon will also trace the development of his "long and close relationship" with Asian and European heads of state, from his first visits as a Congressman to his decisions as President. The outline stresses that it was Mr. Nixon, rather than Secretary of State Kissinger, who set the course of American policies abroad.

For example, Mr. Nixon will tell of a note to Mr. Kissinger within a week of his inauguration in January 1969 in which he suggested an "opening of relations with the People's Republic of China."

Two supplements accompany the secret outline. One is a 14-page list of "foreign contacts," including scores of prime ministers, presidents, chancellors, kings, ambassadors, princes, generals, admirals, queens and other leaders around the world. The second supplement, six pages long, mentions every foreign journey made by Mr. Nixon as President.

Heavy Investment

Warner Books has invested heavily in the Nixon memoirs, but the details of the contract have never been disclosed. One of its clauses provides that the amount of money to be received by the former President cannot be made public.

William Sarnoff, the Warner chairman, says that all sorts of inaccurate figures have been published, giving figures that range from half a million dollars to $4 million. "The real figure may be somewhere in between," he says.

Other sources privy to the terms of the agreement contend that Mr. Nixon will receive $2 million plus provable expenses of as much as $300,000. Payments are stretched out over five years to reduce Mr. Nixon's income taxes. The contract calls for a down payment of $350,000, another $350,000 at the end of this year and periodic installments thereafter.

Warner Books, a paperback publisher that is part of a communications conglomerate, also owns a distribution company, DC Comics, Superman, Batman and Mad Magazine.

It is the publisher of a series of books by Xaveria Hollander, a former madam who wrote the bestseller "The Happy Hooker."

Book and Film on Nixon

In paperback, Warner Books also published "All the President's Men" by Mr. Woodward and Mr. Bernstein, and Warner Brothers, another part of the conglomerate, produced the film based on the book.

In June, The New York Times Company purchased from Warner Books for an undisclosed sum the worldwide newspaper and magazine serialization rights for Mr. Nixon's memoirs. Special Features, the syndicate affiliate of The Times, is offering the memoirs to The New York Times and other periodicals for serialization two to four weeks before their publication in book form.

The former President has set his own target date—Jan. 9, his 64th birthday—to finish the book, according to Franklin R. Gannon, the director of Mr. Nixon's research staff in San Clemente, Calif. Mr. Gannon, whom others call the writer putting the book together, attended the Frankfurt book fair earlier this month with executives of Warner Books and Irving P. Lazar, Mr. Nixon's literary agent.

Sources in the book industry in the United States and Europe say that Mr. Nixon is working on his memoirs seven days a week. He is said to dictate into two portable cassette recording machines —one in his office and one in his study —on the basis of extensive longhand notes on legal pads and "research packages," mainly chronologies of events, prepared by Mr. Gannon and his staff.

Mr. Gannon worked in the White House, first on a fellowship in 1971 and then for two Presidential counselors, Robert H. Finch and Donald H. Rumsfeld, now Secretary of Defense. In 1974, Mr. Gannon was named a special assistant to the President, working under Mr. Ziegler. On Aug. 9, 1974, he was aboard Air Force One when Mr. Nixon returned to San Clemente after his resignation.

Mr. Gannon, who was born in New York in 1942 and grew up on Long Island, graduated from Georgetown University, received a master's degree from the London School of Economics and a doctorate from Oxford. Before becoming a White House fellow, he worked for J. Walter Thompson, the advertising agency.

The job of assisting Mr. Nixon with his memoirs was first offered to Patrick J. Buchanan, a former Presidential speechwriter, according to a source familiar with the negotiation, but Mr. Buchanan preferred to return to journalism.

Compared Nixon With Lincoln

Mr. Gannon, in a 1974 article, compared Mr. Nixon with Abraham Lincoln, saying, "both Presidents have shared a determination to preserve the traditions and institutions of self-government, whatever the political or personal cost."

Not long afterward, Mr. Gannon began working on the Nixon memoirs.

"I think people will be amazed by President Nixon's reactions in the book," Mr. Gannon said in Frankfurt. "For example, the things he noticed—the decoration of a room, or if someone had a soup stain on his tie during a state visit—that quality of recollection makes his memoirs exceptional."

"As much as 42 pages will be photographs and documents," says Mr. Sarnoff, the Warner chairman. "There will be lots of pictures of the final moment and days, plus family photos, handwritten memos and even doodles."

If you're looking for an 8-day London Theatre Tour, choose the one that gives you some choice.

The Air-India 8-day London Theatre Tour.

We give you four theatre tickets. Three tickets to any plays you want to see. If the play's running and if there are tickets available, you've got it. (Only exceptions: no opera, ballet or Royal Shakespeare Company.)

How about that fourth ticket? It's to a performance at the exciting new National Theatre. And, as a bonus, Air-India also gives you a guided tour of this incredible new theatre complex.

How does all this stack up to other airlines' theatre tours? Well, some of them don't give you as many tickets. And some of them don't give you as much choice. In fact, some of them don't give you any choice at all.

An Air-India 8-day London Theatre Tour also gives you a great flight round-trip, 7 nights in a good hotel with private bath, an Avis car for three days (that's right, three days), transportation to your hotel from the airport and to the airport from your hotel—and a bunch of extras.

We do all this for the same—or perhaps less—than the airlines that don't give you so much choice. Which makes the whole thing an easy choice, right?

2 Political Parties Held To Raise Consciousness Of Some Ethnic Groups

STORRS, Conn. (UPI)—The American political party system has encouraged ethnic consciousness in citizens who are generations removed from their immigrant roots, University of Connecticut political scientists contends.

"American political leaders who fervently avow their belief in the melting pot during patriotic celebrations ignore it at election times," said Dr. Louis L. Gerson, head of the university's political science department.

Writing in the "Journal of Politics," Dr. Gerson said both major political parties had played up latent nationalistic feelings in an effort to win large numbers of imigrant votes since the 188m0's. During the present election, the Democrats call their effort the "All American Council," while the Republicans call theirs "Heritage Groups."

He described the size of their potential audience by noting there were 30 million Americans in 1970 who spoke a language other than English as their first language.

Dr. Gerson said there was little evidence the ethnic appeals affected foreign policy and said politicians, when presented with evidence that the ethnic appeal was not working, viewed it as "evidence of wrong appeals and the need to find new issues to bewitch the ethnics."

He concluded that ethnic nationalism was related to the winning of political power than it is "to the achievement of dignity, equality, respectability, and unhampered access to American values and benefits."

suggestion, a new eco-
nt subcommittee was formed and Thomas G. DeVivo, fiscal administrator of Nassau County and Mr. Caso's chief deputy, was named to head it.

The first objective of the new group has already been achieved, Mr. De Vivo said, "by our joint commitment to solve mutually our economic problems rather than to go off in separate directions." He added that New York City and the two counties were "clearly stating that our political differences will not transcend our cooperation."

Next Step Explained

The next step, he said, will be to expand the cooperative mechanism to include representatives of business and labor. This new coordinated economic task force will first assemble analytical data on "our overall economic base, our mutual capital requirements and our industrial locational advantages and drawbacks," he said.

Officials should then be able to answer a host of questions, such as whether capital funds are available locally to finance business modernization and expansion, what new industries can be expected to emerge in the next two decades and what changes can be predicted in the size and composition of the regional labor force in the years ahead.

Mr. DelBello, elaborating on what the subcommittee hoped to accomplish, said it could target likely industries to be sought for the metropolitan area.

"We already know we won't have much hope of recruiting heavy users of energy because of our high energy costs," he said, "but we hope to find out which industries can best use the advantages we possess, and to go after them."

The two County Executives and Mr. Beame repeatedly stressed the interdependence of their territories. "We don't seek to lure any industry from New York City," Mr. DelBello said. "If it meant keeping a company from leaving New York State, we'd offer it a place, but we would never pirate any industry from the city."

A Joint Request to Carey

The three officials made a joint request to Governor Carey to form a task force that would make joint long-range plans for water supply in the city and the two counties. The object is to develop a unified approach required by Federal authorities before Washington will provide any aid to construct new water-supply facilities or to complete the suspended third water tunnel for New York City.

They urged that Mr. Carey, in naming any regional group, restrict representatives to the city, Nassau, Westchester and five Southern Tier counties that take in most of the local watershed. Suffolk and other upstate counties will be barred, since they do not share the downstate dependence on the Catskill-Croton supply.

Moreover, reflecting some contention over control of the water supply, the three officials asked the Governor to weight the task force in favor of the city, Nassau and Westchester, since they would develop, pay for and operate any facilities that were built.

McCarthy Wins Spot on Ballot

BOSTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—The State Supreme Court ruled today that former Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota must have his name on the Nov. 2 Massachusetts ballot as an independent candidate for President. The court set aside an order barring Mr. McCarthy's name from appearing. The order was issued two weeks ago by Chief Justice Alan B. Hale of the Appeals Court.

Group Plans to Sue To Bar Any Change In Rules on Abortion

By JUDITH CUMMINGS

A national organization that opposes any change in the existing Federal abortion rules said yesterday that it would sue to block any restriction on the use of Medicaid money for abortions, as contained in legislation now awaiting action by President Ford.

The restriction, in a $56 million appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, would prohibit the use of Medicaid money for reimbursement of abortion costs except in cases in which the expectant mother's life was threatened.

The National Abortion Rights Action League, the organization threatening the legal action, contended this would discriminate against low-income women by placing legal abortions beyond their economic reach.

Sarah Weddington, a Texas State representative who is president of the league, announced the plans at a news conference here at the Warwick Hotel. She said similar conferences were being held simultaneously in 10 other cities in a "last-minute" attempt to counter the so-called "pro-life" movement, which is seeking a constitutional amendment to reverse recent Supreme Court decisions liberalizing abortion laws.

Although Mr. Ford is expected by tonight's deadline to veto the appropriations measure, and with it the abortion item, because he feels the appropriations bill is too generous, Representative Weddington said the group would challenge any action in Congress that would revive the provision.

She said that Representative Bella Abzug, Democrat of Manhattan, had agreed to act as cocounsel in a challenge.

Although the Texas legislator and other leaders of the pro-abortion group deplored what they termed the manipulation of the abortion question into "a political football" in the Presidential election, she said they would neither "endorse nor criticize" either Mr. Ford or Jimmy Carter, the Democratic candidate.

Aid to Private Colleges Urged

HARTFORD (AP)—Senator Lewis Rome has proposed legislation that would increase state aid to Connecticut students attending private colleges by $2.5 million. Mr. Rome, leader of he Republican minority in the State Senate, said his plan was the cheapest way to educate increasing members of students. He said it would cost more to build state colleges or expand existing institutions.

When you want to improve your home, one word from Chemical can make you a satisfied customer.

Nobody has to tell you when your home could use improvement. You know. You've been living with it every day. The two kids in a bedroom built for one. That cramped, obsolete kitchen. The backyard that looks more like an empty lot.

And you know what you want to do about it. Maybe you've already got the plans drawn up in your mind. You've been waiting long enough, and now you're ready. But what about the cost? If you're like many home owners, you'll probably need financial help to get the job done.

At Chemical Bank, we realize that your financial needs are as unique to you as your home. So when you decide you're ready for a home improvement loan, we'll be ready for you. Ready to work out the right kind of terms to satisfy your unique needs. And if you qualify, we'll say "Yes" to a loan of up to $10,000. Whether you own a house, a co-op, or a condominium, we want to help make your home a more satisfying place to live.

So come see us before you make the final arrangements with your decorator or contractor. We have people at more than 250 branches throughout the New York area who would like to make a satisfied customer out of you.

Because at Chemical Bank, we know the one thing all loan customers have in common is that one word they want to hear: "Yes."

"Yes"

F.B.I. Linked to East Side Break-In Months After Kelley Took Office

Several Entries Reported in the Last 5 Years in Search for a Weatherman Fugitive

By JOHN M. CREWDSON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, searching for a fugitive member of the Weather Underground, burglarized a New York City residence several months after Clarence M. Kelley took over as the Bureau's Director, according to a well-placed F.B.I. source.

That burglary, one of several understood to have been carried out over the last five years at the East 86th St. Apartment of Leonard Machtinger, is the first reportedly to have occurred during Mr. Kelley's tenure.

An F.B.I. spokesman said today that Mr. Kelley was unaware that any illegal entries of the sort now under investigation by the Justice Department's civil rights division had taken place after he took command of the agency on July 8, 1973.

Mr. Kelley said last month that he had been 'deceived' by F.B.I. associates into believing that such burglaries by agents had been halted in 1966 by his predecessor, the late J. Edgar Hoover, but that he had subsequently learned that 'a limited number' of them had occurred in 1972 and early 1973.

The assertion by the F.B.I. source is the first indication, however, that Mr. Kelley's subordinates kept from him the knowledge that what the bureau terms "surreptitious entries" had taken place during his own administration of the bureau.

Others, equally well-placed sources confirmed that the Machtinger burglaries were a part of the criminal case against a number of past and present F.B.I. officials that is now being constructed by the Justice Department prosecutors. But none of the sources would say with what frequency they had occurred.

The prosecutors have also discovered that the F.B.I. agents in New York who carried out the burglaries against Mr. Machtinger and friend and relatives of other Weather fugitives sometimes placed illegal wiretaps on the telephone of their targets, and the F.B.I. sources said that the telephones belonging to Leonard Machtinger and to his parents, who live in the Bronx, had been tapped in that fashion.

In an interview last week at his Co-op City apartment, the younger Machtinger's father, Harry Machtinger, a retired businessman, recalled that in October 1973, following his visit to a bedridden sister in Canada, investigators had suddenly appeared in the city where she lived and began inquiring about the reason for his presence there.

Wiretap Recalled

"How did they know I was going to Canada," Mr. Machtinger asked a visitor with a shrug of his shoulders. Then the realization dawned on both Mr. Machtinger and his wife, Yetta.

"The wiretap," they said in unison.

Leonard Machtinger, told in a telephone interview that his New York City apartment had been entered by F.B.I. agents and that his telephone had been monitored.

He said that he and his parents, who had had no contact with Howard during his years as a fugitive, and who had tried to cooperate fully with the F.B.I., were now contemplating filing a suit for civil damages against the agents who carried out the burglaries and wiretappings.

Howard Machtinger, a graduate sociology student at the University of Chicago at the time he disappeared, was indicted in that city with a number of other members of the Weather Underground Organization on riot charges stemming from a violent demonstration there that the group called "Days of Rage."

Mr. Machtinger vanished shortly after the indictment was returned, and his disappearance was followed closely by visits to his parents and brother from F.B.I. Agents assigned to track him down.

Harry Machtinger, Howard's father, said that he told the agents on two occasions in the summer of 1970 that neither he nor his wife had been in touch with their son since his disappearance and had no idea where he was hiding.

Leonard Machtinger, a lawyer who now lives in Los Angeles, said that he had also been visited openly by the F.B.I. during that period but had been ignorant of his brother's whereabouts.

The F.B.I. agents who he named as having called upon himself and his parents were identified by bureau sources as former members of Squad 47, the 'Weathfug' unit in the F.B.I.'s New York City office that was assigned to find the fugitives.

The Weather Underground, which numbers about 40 members, has taken responsibility for several bombings here and elsewhere in the country during the late 1960's and early 1970's.

Harry Mashtinger said at one point that a friend confided in him that the bureau had tried to recruit the friend to inform on the family's activities. The friend said that he refused the offer.

On another occasion, in what appeared to be a clumsy attempt to induce Leonard Machtinger to lead the F.B.I. to his brother, an agent advised him in a telephone call that "something was going to happen and I should get in touch with Howard right away." Mr. Machtinger said he told the man that he did not know how to reach Howard and hung up.

Then, on Sept. 19, 1973, more than three years after he had become a fugitive, Howard Machtinger was arrested by an F.B.I. agent on the corner of East 86th Street and Second Avenue, about 50 yards from his brother Leonard's apartment building.

An Apparent Coincidence

The location of the arrest appears to have been coincidental. Leonard Machtinger said that he had received no mail or telephone calls from Howard, or anything else that would indicate that his brother had returned to New York City.

Leonard Machtinger arranged for his brother's release on a $2,500 cash bond, and the then-27-year-old fugitive moved in with his parents to await a hearing on the charges facing him.

Eight days later, on the eve of his court hearing, Howard Machtinger became a fugitive for the second time.

"He left and he didn't come back," his mother recalled. "I thought maybe he had a date or something." But she said that it soon became clear that he had gone underground again, and she notified the police.

It was at that point, the F.B.I. source said, that members of the special squad, who earlier had burglarized Leonard Machtinger's apartment, decided to make yet another entry.

The F.B.I. spokesman said today that Mr. Kelley had not authorized a break-in at Mr. Machtinger's apartment or anywhere else since becoming director in July of that year, nor had he been asked to.

SCHORR, IN DISCORD, QUITS CBS NEWS JOB

Correspondent, Accused in Passing of Secret Document, Will Stay on the Payroll 2¼ Years

By LES BROWN

Daniel Schorr, who was frequently at the center of journalistic controversies in his 23 years as a CBS News correspondent, ended his latest episode of strife yesterday by resigning from the network.

Mr. Schorr, who had been accused of allowing a fellow correspondent to be suspected of an action he himself had performed—that of passing a secret House intelligence report to The Village Voice, a weekly newspaper, for publication—said that under the circumstances he saw no alternative but to resign.

"Aware of the polarizing effects within CBS News of the controversy involving me," Mr. Schorr wrote in his letter of resignation, "I would doubt my ability to function effectively if reinstated."

He said also that his reinstatement would be "a source of tension" within the organization.

Stays on Payroll

Under an agreement with CBS News, apparently entered into at the time of his suspension on Feb. 23, Mr. Schorr, who is 60 years old, is to remain on the network's payroll for the remaining two and a quarter years of his contract and is to receive all company benefits for that period.

"I recognize that it seems strange for me to have such handsome terms if I was the one who initiated the resignation, but this all happened before our discussions this week," he said. "I'm not at liberty to explain how it came about."

Although the agreement permits Mr. Schorr to work for other broadcast organizations, he said he doubted that he would return to commercial broadcasting.

"I don't think I'd find at another network what I didn't find at CBS News," he remarked.

He indicated that he planned to lecture, write a book and perhaps accept an offer as a visiting professor for 10 weeks at a university in the Middlewest, which he said he could not yet identify.

Called in By Salant

Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News, had called Mr. Schorr to New York for a meeting on his future with the company. Mr. Salant would not say whether he had intended to reinstate the correspondent.

"We never got to that point," he said. "Dan spared me having to make any decision. He came in, and resigned."

Outside CBS, Mr. Schorr's suspension had seemed entirely related to his role in arranging publication of the classified House report and to the Congressional investigation into the way he acquired it.

His presentation before the House ethics committee—a stirring defense of a reporter's right to protect his source—was so impressive that high-ranking CBS officials believed the public might misunderstand the network's motives if he was not reinstated.

That problem was eased for the network Sunday night when Mr. Schorr agreed to be interviewed by Mike Wallace on the "60 Minutes" program. Mr. Wallace, a fellow correspondent, dwelt on the issue of Mr. Schorr's behavior on the day the House report appeared in The Village Voice.

Began With Denial

The case against Mr. Schorr at CBS News began with his initial denial of having played a role in providing The Voice with the classified document. His copy of it was believed to have been the only one outside the Government.

Other members of the Washington bureau said Mr. Schorr allowed suspicion to fall on Lesley Stahl, another CBS correspondent in Washington.

Members of the bureau knew that Miss Stahl had a close friendship with Aaron Latham, The Voice editor who wrote the preface to the published transcript of the House report.

According to bureau members, Mr. Schorr raised the question of how the document came into Mr. Latham's possession, thereby focusing suspicion on Miss Stahl. Bureau sources contended that Mr. Schorr allowed his colleagues to believe that Miss Stahl had removed the document from his desk and copied it for Mr. Latham and then admitted the following day that he had provided the copy to The Voice.

Asked about these charges in the interview with Mr. Wallace, Mr. Schorr dismissed them as "a piece of office gossip" and "basically trivia."

He said he had acted from confusion and had not dispelled the rumor "for a few tongue-tied hours" because he felt it might give an added layer of protection to his own source of the document.

Mr. Salant, in accepting the resignation, noted in his letter that Mr. Schorr was free to pursue full-time employment with another network without forfeiting his wage payments under the CBS contract.

He praised Mr. Schorr for his journalistic achievements over a 23-year-career with the network, and concluded:

"I say once again that, in your appearance before the ethics committee, you did a superb and eloquent service to all of us in journalism and, above all, to the principles of the First Amendment and the public's right to know."

Army Bomb Expert Dies in Explosion at Illinois Plant

QUINCY, Ill., Sept. 28 (AP)—An Army bomb specialist was killed in the last of five dynamite explosions that rocked a plant on Quincy's north side today.

The fifth blast came about two hours after Senator Robert J. Dole, the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate, had left town.

Federal Bureau of Investigation and Treasury Department agents were assisting in the investigation, but the authorities said that there was no apparent connection between the explosions and Mr. Dole's campaign visit to this Mississippi River community of 45,000.

The dead man, Sgt. Dennis Foster, was a member of the 543d Ordinance Detachment at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. A state arson investigator, Ernie Arenz, was seriously injured as he and Sergeant Foster approached the bomb.

Two other members of Sergeant Foster's ordnance team suffered minor injuries in the blast but were not hospitalized.

The dynamite charge was discovered inside the Quincy Compressor Company plant and had been carried outside the building.

The plant, a division of Colt Industries Inc., manufactures air compressors. It had been emptied for the day after four other dynamite bombs exploded just outside the building last night. The explosions caused heavy damage to factory walls and a large compressor unit.

About 100 workers were in the building when the first explosions occurred. There were no injuries.

The authorities said they had no idea who had planted the bombs.

The plant, which has about 500 employees, was the scene of a dispute earlier in the year over whether workers would be represented by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers or the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. The employees voted to retain the machinists union as their bargaining agent.

Officials also reported a bomb threat at Quincy Airport just before Mr. Dole left today for Decatur, Ill. Adams County sheriff's officers said it was an apparent hoax not related to the compressor plant bombings.

A high school and a small factory also were closed after they received bomb threats.

Detroit Gets Black Chief in Controversy Over Police

By REGINALD STUART
Special to The New York Times

DETROIT, Sept. 28—Mayor Coleman A. Young, with his police department the subject of controversy in recent months, today named William L. Hart as this city's first black chief of police.

The Mayor announced the selection of Mr. Hart, a 52-year-old veteran with more than 20 years of service in the department, shortly after dismissing Philip G. Tannian, the 41-year-old former agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who headed the department for three years. Mr. Tannian had refused to resign after the Mayor asked him.

"Chief Hart has full authority to take whatever steps are necessary to put the department in order, to cooperate with Federal authorities in legitimate investigations of wrong-doing, and most of all, to deal with the crime problem that threatens our hopes for a renaissance," Mayor Young said in introducing Mr. Hart at a news conference late this afternoon.

Mayor Young said that Mr. Tannian "has served Detroit well during three difficult years as the city's chief law enforcement officer."

"In recent months, however, it has become increasingly clear that division and acrimony at the top of the department made a unified effort against crime almost impossible," he said.

United Press International

Mayor Coleman A. Young of Detroit, left, announcing the appointment of William L. Hart as the city's chief of police yesterday.

Today's action by Mayor Young ends months of speculation here that he was weighing a major shakeup in the leadership of the department as a result of internal disputes between Mr. Tannian and the 51-year-old executive deputy chief, Frank A. Blount. Mr. Blount, a central figure in a Federal Drug Enforcement Administration investigation into illegal narcotics activities here, took an indefinite leave of absence from his job last week.

The appointment comes at a time when citizens here are expressing alarm over recent rises in crime, particularly among youths, and with the city operating on a bare-bones budget that has affected the operation of the Police Department. There is also reportedly a morale problems among the police department's rank and file as a result of the dissension at the top.

Mr. Hart, who joined the police force here in 1952, will head a department with some 4,500 police officers and a budget during the current fiscal year of $160.8 million, the city's largest single departmental budget. His salary was set at $43,900 annually, plus a cost-of-living allowance.

Mayor Young, asked if Mr. Hart's race would emerge in the future as a factor in the public's view of the city and the feelings within the department, said that race "was a relatively minor factor compared to the fact that I believe he has done an outstanding job in the department."

When Mayor Young took office as the city's first black mayor three years ago there was considerable concern among whites here over whether he would quickly replace whites in all key city posts with blacks. Keeping Mr. Tannian on as police chief was his signal to skeptics that he did not intend to make a wholesale change in the racial character of the city's leadership, although today's appointment could revive some minor debate on this issue.

The new chief, father of two children, has a low-keyed personality and is known as a hard worker. Before being appointed acting executive deputy last week, replacing Mr. Blount, Mr. Hart was one of five deputy chiefs. The five had been appointed in August 1974. He was given command of the department headquarters bureau, a division of more than 1,500 employees involved in vice and intelligence matters. He started with the department as a patrolman at the John R. Bethune precinct on the city's east side.

The appointment of Mr. Hart by Mayor Young was not an easy task.

Although Mr. Tannian was a holdover from the administration of former Mayor Roman S. Gribbs, he was considered loyal to Mr. Young in implementing his objectives.

But Mayor Young's feelings about the department's leadership changed considerably early this year, according to sources. At first it was the emergence of repeated conflicts between Mr. Tannian and Deputy Chief Blount over departmental matters and items of lesser importance, such as vacation schedules, insiders said.

Linked to Robbery, A Juror Is Dropped In Susan Saxe Case

BOSTON, Sept. 28 (UPI)—A juror in the Susan Saxe bank robbery-murder trial was dismissed from the case today following allegations that she herself had been involved in an armed robbery several years ago. Chief Justice Walter H. Mclaughlin, in Suffolk County Superior Court, said that the juror Debra Fuller, 23 years old, was dropped from the 16-member panel for "reasons sufficient to the court."

Judge McLaughlin allowed the prosecution to resume its case and gave the remaining 15 members of the jury no reason for the dismissal.

The judge ruled to dismiss Mrs. Fuller after a three-hour conference in his chambers with Suffolk County District Attorney Garrett Byrne and members of the prosecution and defense teams. They discussed a television news report that the District Attorney's office was investigating the possibility that a woman juror had been involved in an armed robbery with her husband several years ago.

Judge McLaughlin said the defense and prosecution agreed to the dismissal and Mrs. Fuller also asked not to continue as a juror.

The WNAC-TV report about the female juror, broadcast yesterday, said her husband was serving a jail term for another crime and that he volunteered the information to the authorities.

Assistant District Attorney Newman Flanagan said that today there was "some merit" to the allegation.

After the trial resumed, a prosecution witness pointed to Miss Saxe and said her lips resembled the "heavy, thick lips" of a woman who paricipated in a 1970 bank robbery in which a policeman was killed.

This testimony, by Evelyn C. Illemann, is the closest Prosecutor John T. Gaffney has come so far in getting a witness to identify the defendant as being the stocky woman dressed in purple who was with two men when the State Street Bank and Trust Company was robbed of $26,585.

One of Miss Saxe's lawyers, Thomas Shapiro, asked the witness whether she had ever been able to identify newspaper pictures of Miss Saxe as the women who robbed the bank where she worked.

"No, not that I could say," she said. "But I could tell from the lips."

"What could you tell from the lips?" Mr. Shapiro asked.

"They were heavy, thick lips."

Mr. Gaffney asked the witness if there were any lips like those in the courtroom.

"They do look like the lady in the box," she said, her voice wavering slightly. She then pointed to Miss Saxe.

Miss Illemann joined four other prosecution witnesses who have testified during the trial's first four days that the woman bank robber was between 5 feet and 5 feet 5; weighted between 125 and 140 pounds; had dark hair, and wore sunglasses and a purple garment.

Dr. Leonard Aihkins, associate Suffolk County medical examiner, testified that his autopsy on Patrolman Walter A. Schroeder showed he died of a gunshot wound in the abdominal aorta nearly 24 hours after he was shot following the holdup.

Ford Was a Corporate Golf Guest Numerous Times While in House

White House, Naming Three Additional Hosts, Denies Violation of 'Spirit' of Code of Ethics

By PHILIP SHABECOFF
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—The White House acknowledged today that President Ford had played golf as the guest of a number of mapor corporations while he was a member of the House of Representatives. But it said those activities in no way violated the House's code of ethics forbidding gifts to members from persons or companies with an interest in pending legislation.

The acknowledgement followed last week's disclosure that Mr. Ford, when still in Congress, had been the guest of the United States Steel Corporation and its chief lobbyist, William Whyte, for golfing weekends in New Jersey and at the company's lodge outside Disney World in Florida.

Jimmy Carter, the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, has apparently seized on the disclosures of Mr. Ford's acceptance of hospitality from lobbyists and big corporations as a campaign issue.

Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary, said during questioning at today's regular news briefing that Mr. Ford had gone golfing at the expense of the Firestone Rubber Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Company and the Aluminum Corporation of America.

Not Certain About Details

Mr. Nessen said that he did not know if the companies had paid for food, lodging and transportation or just for greens fees. He also said he did not know what other corporations had played host to Mr. Ford when he was a Representative.

The President told him that he had gone golfing as the guest of a number of companies and gave those four names as those he remembered, Mr. Nessen explained.

"As an avid golfer, the President over the years has accepted invitations to play with friends at different clubs around the country and has invited friends to play at his club," the press secretary said.

He repeated the statement he made last week in connection with the United States Steel disclosures that Mr. Ford "would not have accepted the invitations if he thought there was anything wrong with it."

However, since becoming Vice President in late 1973, Mr. Ford has stopped accepting such invitations, Mr. Nessen said. When asked why he had stopped if he did not think it was wrong, Mr. Nessen replied that the "circumstances" had changed.

Recent Golf With Lobbyist

Since becoming Vice President and President, Mr. Ford has played golf many times with Mr. Whyte and other friends who are lobbyists and corporate representatives. He has also played, Mr. Nessen pointed out, with nonbusinessmen, including Lee Elder, the professional golfer, and Flip Wilson, the comedian.

Mr. Nessen said that Mr. Ford felt he had lived up to the "spirit" of the code of ethics adopted by the House of Representatives in 1968, which forbids members to accept gifts of any monetary value from any persons or corporations having an interest in legislation before Congress.

On another matter, Mr. Nessen said that the White House knew nothing about an investigation being conducted by the Watergate special proscutor, Charles F. Ruff, for which the records of the Republican committee in Kent County, Mich., President Ford's home county, were subpoenaed.

"We are in a difficult position because all we know is what we read in the papers," Mr. Nessen said, adding "The President hasn't been told anything and he hasn't been asked anything."

When asked about news reports that Mr. Ford's campaign finances while a member of Congress were an object of the investigation, Mr. Nessen said, "I know of no reason I should stand here and deny anything when he has not been charged with anything."

Mondale Calls for Answers

Senator Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate, charged in a stump speech today that President Ford was "ducking" reporters' questions on the misuse of campaign funds and said that "the time has come" for the President to answer questions on the subject.

The President met in the Oval Office today with Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the Foreign Minister of West Germany. Mr. Nessen said that the President would also meet with the foreign ministers of France, Italy, Britain, the Soviet Union and other nations over the next few days.

In reply to questions, Mr. Nessen denied that the meetings were intended to help Mr. Ford prepare for his forthcoming foreign policy debate with Mr. Carter or to underscore, before the debate, the President's experience in conducting diplomacy.

The press secretary said that Mr. Ford had previously received a procession of foreign visitors before the opening of the United Nations General Assembly session in New York. He read off a list of ministers received by Mr. Ford in 1974 and 1975.

The foreign policy debate will be held in San Francisco on Oct. 6. The President plans to fly out to California a day or two earlier.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has told reporters that he expects to spend much of this weekend briefing the President on foreign policy. However, Mr. Kissinger is not expected to accompany the President to San Francisco.

Ford Hails Islamic Celebrants

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (UPI)—President Ford today extended his "warmest greetings" to Americans of Islamic faith on Id al Fitr, the special holiday ending the fasting month of Ramadan. "Celebrating the reaffirmation of your faith, this feast is a particularly happy occasion for you and a reminder to the rest of us of the vitality and strength of your heritage in our national life," Mr. Ford said.

Using wall charts, campaign workers make plans at Jimmy Carter's national campaign headquarters in Atlanta

Carter Campaign Is Still Led By Little-Known Democrats

By B. DRUMMOND AYRES Jr.
Special to The New York Times

ATLANTA, SEPT. 28—Though more than 600 persons from all 50 states have been added to Jimmy Carter's campaign payroll since the Democratic convention, the campaign remains basically an operation run by political outsiders and little-known Democrats.

Mr. Carter, who won the Democratic nomination by deliberately running as an outsider, has made no apparent effort to move to the inside by putting together a conventrion staff of well-known, mainstream Democrats.

He is in contact with most of the party's more familiar luminaries, and his rhetoric frequently echoes traditional Democratic themes. But the top people in the Carter headquarters here—the only Presidential campaign headquarters situated outside Washington in many years—are still mainly the people who were running things back in the primary days.

Staff Is One-Third Southern

The first echelon, sometimes referred to as "the Atlanta Mafia," continues to be made up of Southerners in general and Georgians in particular. Northerners and Westerners tend to be found more frequently in the second and third echelons, many having signed aboard in the post-convention stage when the Atlanta staff was doubled to almost 300 workers.

Hamilton Jordan, the 31-year-old Georgian who has directed the Carter campaign from the start, insists there was no "conscious" decision to continue running an outsider's political effort after the New York convention.

"We just kept going as we had been," he said. "Only about a third of our overall staff is now Southern.

"There were certain image advantages to running a non-Washington campaign right from the start," he continued. "But we didn't make any big strategic decision to work it out of Atlanta. This was our home, our source of money and volunteers back when Jimmy started as an unknown.

"Besides, with phones and planes what they are now, you can just about run a campaign from anywhere."

Landon Butler, a 34-year-old Tennessean who has long served as one of Mr. Jordan's top aides, said that many of the Carter workers hired after the campaign were volunteers from the primary days.

"We had a big pool to choose from," he added. "If they looked good, they usually got hired."

Some hiring was done considerably more carefully, however.

"We specifically went beyond the Eastern establishment when we expanded our section," Al Stern, an issues specialist, said. "We're not running against Washington, but we're not running out of Washington either. We went after people from all regions to make sure that we got a wide range of input for Jimmy."

Mr. Stern, who calls himself the "old man" of the Carter campaign, offers some indication that the Carter camp is an open camp.

Older Than Others

He is 48 years old, twice the age of many Carter workers. He is a native of New York rather than Dixie. And he is a veteran of Presidential campaigns tracing back to the Truman era.

The Carter field staff is regionally diverse. But it exhibits certain age and experience patterns, particularly at the top.

"Many of the state and regional coordinators are around 30 and many have had experience in state races or Congressional races," Tim Kraft, the campaign's field operations director, said. "You could say that most have 'run for sheriff.'"

Mr. Kraft, a veteran Carter campaigner, said he had recruited field workers from "just about everywhere—out of Atlanta, Washington, House and Senate staffs, the Democratic National Committee, anything."

They're mostly not "big strategists or famous names," he explained. "They have technical ability that they picked up quietly. They're young professionals who can work anywhere."

Many state coordinators have been assigned to work outside their home states.

"Anyone who has gained any significant political experience in one state is no longer 'faction pure'," Mr. Kraft said. "You try to send people to a place where they don't have any entangling alliances, no antagonisms."

A typical state coordinator is Bob Vincent.

Mr. Vincent is 33 years old and comes from Oklahoma City, where he was a legislative assistant to the state chancellor of higher education before joining the Carter campaign.

In Congressional Campaigns

His name is unfamiliar to most politicians and political reporters. Over the years, however, he has quietly but steadily gained political experience by working in Congressional campaigns in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Georgia, where he came into contact with the Carter camp.

He is especially familiar with Oklahoma politics. But Mr. Kraft assigned him to Kansas, where he is "faction pure."

Though the top echelon of the Carter camp has changed little since the start of the campaign, there are no reports of serious bickering between the old and new Carter workers. Nor is there any evidence of tension between the Carter camp and that of Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate.

The Carter headquarters here is now housed on the top three floors of a high-rise office building situated on the northern edge of the central business district.

Initially, the Carter staff worked out of a small, suburban office building. But when the post-convention expansion came, new quarters were leased.

There is an atmosphere of impermanence at the headquarters, which Mr. Carter has visited only once or twice.

"It's as if we set up a multimillion dollar corporation that will work itself out of business in less than two months," Mrs. Butler said.

CARTER IS TRYING OUT ROUGHER STUMP STYLE

ter went on, "he said he was not a Lincoln, but a Ford, and he told the truth, I'll give him credit for that."

"Ford is a good automobile," the Democratic standard bearer said. "It's not doing too well in the White House. Stuck in the mud, four flat tires, out of gas, gears locked in reverse. If it ever does move again, which I doubt, I'm sure we're going to try to back into the future."

But there was more than rather heavy-handed ridicule in Mr. Carter's new quiver of political arrows. The Democratic candidate made clear on several occasions over the weekend that he felt he had made a grievous error in last Thursday's televised debate with Mr. Ford in showing "excessive deference" to the President and by being too unaggressive. The corrected political action took several forms yesterday.

As he had done in Portland earlier in the day, Mr. Carter seemed to try to draw public attention to Mr. Ford's long association with William Whyte, the United States Steel Company lobbyist who recently acknowledged that he had paid for golfing outings for Mr. Ford when the President was a member of the House of Representatives.

"Sometimes our government is not fair," Mr. Carter told the Evansville audience. In flawed grammar Mr. Carter added, "But someone who's been in Washington 25 or 30 years, they get to be a close interrelationship. You scratch my back, I'll scratch your back. Public officials, lobbyists, special interest groups belong tothe same private clubs. They go to the same restaurants, they play golf on the same golf courses."

Mr. Carter is unlikely to stay rigidly with any speech or single style, but the enthusiastic response he got yesterday, when contrasted to the tepid reception given earlier efforts, may encourage him to continue on this line of attack during the last five weeks of the Presidential campaign.

Mr. Carters' maternal grandfather was a passionate admirer of Senator Tom Watson, the Georgia Populist, and Mr. Carter has often indicated that he has learned a lot from Alabama Governor George C. Wallace about judging the mood of voters. Stylistically, Mr. Carter has seldom used the rhythms or tones of such Southern politicians, but yesterday he showed he had the versatility to do so. In Portland he spoke of a closeness of "Washington" politicians and lobbyists and said "they communicate with one another." Only an extraordinarily skillful political speaker could make that sentence sound ominous, but Mr. Carter succeeded in doing so with his rapt Portland audience.

In Evansville, he did it another way, saying politicians and lobbyists "learn about unemployment, inflation, housing problems from staff reports of bureaucrats."

"They avoid direct contact with people," he said. "They don't go into people's homes."

Again, he managed to achieve the tone of an indictment.

In the first week of the campaign he had painted Mr. Ford as a "decent, well-intentioned man" but a timid and ineffective leader. At Evansville, the method was to picture Mr. Ford as a worse President than Richard M. Nixon, whose resignation in disgrace brought Mr. Ford to the White House.

Louder Tones Used

"Richard Nixon had a Democratic Congress," Mr. Carter said in louder, firmer tones than he usually employs. "Gerald Ford has vetoed four times as many bills per year as Richard Nixon."

At another point Mr. Carter said in a booming voice, "Richard Nixon was bad enough. It's been worse the past two years."

In many ways the new speech that Mr. Carter unveiled last night was a continuation of the first televised debate, an effort to prolong the arguments made then and to serve as a further rebuttal.

Mr. Ford had argued that his frequent vetoes of Congressional legislation had saved a great deal of public spending. Mr. Carter said last night, "The bills vetoed have not been designed to save money; they've been designed to keep people out of work, to cut down veterans' benefits, to keep us from educating and training nurses to prevent an opening up of secrets of our own government."

Another assessment made in recent days by Mr. Carter and his advisers is that he was best in the debate when he spoke in "human terms" of the impact of domestic problems, and this, too, was a theme of his talks yesterday.

President's New TV Commercials Portray Him As Father Figure Who Inspires Quiet Confidence

By JOSEPH LELYVELD
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—In the first batch of television commercials to be broadcast this fall for President Ford, he is portrayed as a dependable father figure who quietly inspires feelings of serenity in his family, his official circle and the country at large.

The new commercials represent a striking departure from the approach taken in the Ford television spots that were shown during the President's various primary tussles with Ronald Reagan last spring. In those, Mr. Ford was always the President, a solemn figure who stayed buttoned up, figuratively, as well as sartorially. In the rare instances when he was shown speaking, it was always in an oratorical mode on high state occasions. Never did he speak conversationally.

In his new commercials, the President shows up in an open-neck shirt, reminiscing about his children or chatting in the same calm and fatherly tones about running the Government. Instead of being stressed at every instance, the White House environment is sometimes understated.

Focus Is on the Man

A detail of decorative molding in one commercial suggests that the conversation is taking place in the Oval Office. In another, where the President is shown sitting outdoors, a rose in a corner of the screen hints that the setting is probably not just any rose garden. But in both instances, the focus is more on the man than the institution he embodies.

With the homey new approach, Mr. Ford joins battle in the imagery war with Jimmy Carter on ground that the Democratic nominee has occupied almost exclusively since the start of the year, when the first Carter commercials, used in the early primary states, showed him chatting amiably, in a variety of open-neck shirts, about his family and views.

In Mr. Ford's case, the emphasis on family as a vehicle for portraying character is so pronounced that the President almost appears to be riding the coattails of his attractive children and wife. A new Ford campaign poster now shows Mrs. Ford in the foreground beside her husband, and a new five-minute commercial takes as its organizing theme the thought that "sometimes a man's family can say a lot about a man."

Sons Talk About Father

Steven, Jack and Michael Ford are then shown speaking about their father. In each case, cut in with the film of the son are some proudly paternal comments from Mr. Ford in the garden setting. Finally, Susan Ford is shown hugging her father from in back and an announcer pronounces the Fords "a close, loving American family."

Of the comments by the three sons, perhaps the most striking and significant in terms of the campaign comes from the eldest, Michael, a divinity student who has received less press attention than his siblings.

He talks about the place of religious values in his family's life and declares his parents to be "very devout." The President then speaks of the satisfaction he derives from his son's commitment to the ministry.

The effect of this interlude in the commercial is to balance out the attention that has been paid in the campaign to Mr. Carter's religious views. Two different Carter commercials show the candidate in what appears to be the setting of a pulpit, but his words are secular and the subject of religion is never raised in the Carter advertising.

The second of the five-minute Ford commercials that started showing on network television this week again tries to portray the President's character and values in a comforting context. In this case, the focus is on his qualities as a leader.

Making a potentially delicate point for a Republican candidate, the commercial seeks to remind viewers of the dismal situation the country was in when Mr. Ford came to office.

Reminder of Watergate

In asserting that he has "worked to restore the honor of the White House," the commercial reminds viewers of the Watergate affair without using the word. In further declaring that Mr. Ford's "quiet style of leadership" has ended "a decade of tension between the American people and their Presidents," the commercial deftly suggests that the problems that arose in the Administration of Mr. Ford's unmentioned predecessor could be traced back to the Democratic Administration that preceded it.

"We've certainly created in the Ford Administration a nonimperial Presidency," Mr. Ford himself declares.

The Ford campaign is given a musical elaboration in the first 60-second spot the Ford forces have shown on television. The commercial starts out with appealing scenes of America at work and play and an upbeat jingle of the same genre as the Pepsi-Cola song. "There's a change that's come over America," the lyric begins, "a change that's great to see. . ."

'Peace With Freedom'

The President is shown in the Oval Office and then a baby appears in a stroller. "Peace with freedom," an announcer says over the jingle's final chords. "Is there anything more important that that?"

The commercials are the work of the President's new advertising consultants, John Deardourff and Douglas Bailey, who were not hired until the day of Mr. Ford's nomination last month.

The effort to convey a sense of good feeling about the country and its Government obviously clashes with a main theme of the Carter advertising: the assertion that standards of morality and competence are lower in Washington than they are in the country as a whole, that trust has yet to be restored. Thus, in terms of their advertising, both campaigns seem to see trust as the main issue.

The first Carter commercials were shown on network television more than three weeks ago.

In the speech, the President pledged a "crusade" against crime and took a share of the credit for a decline in the rate of increase of crime in the nation.

According to statistics gathered by the F.B.I., the rate of serious crimes last year was 5,282 for each 100,000 of the nation's population. That rate was 8.9 percent higher than that of 1974; the increase between 1973 and 1974 was nearly twice that, or 16.8 percent.

The same F.B.I. statistics showed that the number of murders in the United States declined last year.

Drop in Crimes Reported

In a compilation of figures that the F.B.I. released in Washington last week, the number of violent crimes reported by the nation's police departments dropped somewhat during the first six months of this year, compared with that of a similar period last year, but theft and other crimes against property increased.

Altogether, reports of "serious crimes" this year were up by 3 percent, although major statistical experts believe that official crime figures do not accurately reflect the amount of crime in the country.

Suspect in Ford Threat Seized

MIAMI, Sept. 28 (UPI)—A Cincinnati, Ohio, man accused of threatening President Ford's life during Mr. Ford's visit to Miami was being held at the Dade County Jail today, awaiting transfer by United States marshals. The Secret Service in Washington said that Sean Kevin O'Leary, 43 years old, called the Miami Secret Service office about 2:40 A.M. yesterday and threatened Mr. Ford's life. "He also told people where he was calling from," a spokesman said, and was arrested a short time later.

Second Debate Set For San Francisco At Palace Theater

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—The second debate between President Ford and Jimmy Carter will take place Oct. 6 in San Francisco's Palace of Fine Arts Theater, the League of Women Voters announced today.

The theater, at the approach to the Golden Gate Bridge, is an ornate, domed building, the only one remaining from the 1915 Panama-Pacific Exposition. The exposition celebrated the opening of the Panama Canal and the rebuilding of San Francisco, which had been devastated by the 1906 earthquake.

The league, which is sponsoring three debates between the Democratic and Republican contenders for the Presidency and one between their running mates, announced that the Vice-Presidential debate would be broadcast Oct. 15 from a still undetermined location.

The site of the third Presidential debate, scheduled for Oct. 22, has not been officially announced. But the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate, Senator Robert J. Dole, said yesterday that it would take place in Williamsburg, Va., the Colonial capital of Virginia, which has been restored through the influence and largesse of the Rockefeller family.

Mr. Dole has challenged his Democratic counterpart, Senator Walter F. Mondale, to hold the debate in the South and has said that he thought Birmingham, Ala., would be a good setting.

The second debate is to be on foreign policy and defense issues, and the league said that San Francisco "is a most fitting location for a foreign affairs debate in light of the fact that the U.N. Charter was signed there in 1945."

Both the second Presidential debate and the Vice-Presidential debate are scheduled to begin at 9:30 P.M. Eastern daylight time and run for 90 minutes, the league said. The first debate, last Thursday, was scheduled for the same time and duration, but a breakdown in the sound transmission caused a 27-minute interruption near the end of the debate.

Connally Calls Carter Remarks on Johnson an 'Insult'

By CHRISTOPHER LYDON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Robert S. Strauss, the Democratic party chairman, says that John B. Connally will play Jimmy Carter's outburst against the late Lyndon B. Johnson (whom the Democratic Presidential nominee accused in Playboy magazine of "lying, cheating and distorting the truth") the way Jascha Heifetz plays a Stradivarius, and sure enough, Mr. Connally is tuning up.

Campaign Notes

"I am no longer a member of President Johnson's party," Mr. Connally, the former Governor and former Democrat, told his fellow Texans over the weekend, "but my admiration and affection for him were not buried in the grave over which I delivered the eulogy at Johnson City. I am deeply offended by this gratuitous insult."

The 1976 remake of Mr. Connally's 1972 Democrats for Nixon is called Texans for Ford, and it is led by Frank C. Erwin Jr., longtime chairman of the Regents of the University of Texas, a mighty political establishment in itself. "As far as I am concerned," Mr. Erwin announced, "Jimmy Carter has forfeited all right to the support of any Johnson Democrats in Texas."

Mr. Carter had been talking to Playboy about the Johnson policy in Vietnam, but Mr. Erwin unsubtly turned the subject, saying: "The black and brown people of Texas never had a better friend then Lyndon Johnson, and if they have an ounce of gratitude in them they will demand a retraction and apology for Carter's outrageous statement."

Sam Houston Johnson, who made some unflattering observations in his book, "My Brother Lyndon," was nonetheless upset that Mr. Carter was joining in. When Playboy interviewed him years ago, Mr. Johnson recalled pointedly, the magazine gave him a chance to check the transcript for misstatements. "If he ever had a chance of carrying Texas he lost it there," he said.

George Christian, once press secretary for both President Johnson and Governor Connally, has not joined Texans for Ford but sees Mr. Carter in deep trouble.

"The reaction on Carter now is very, very negative," Mr. Christian commented in a telephone interview today. "He started way ahead, but that's all vanished."

Doris Kearns, the Johnson biographer who has done character sketches of Mr. Carter and Mr. Ford for the forthcoming issue of The Ladies' Home Journal, recalled today that Mr. Carter spoke to her (as to Playboy) about adultery and lust. She never supposed it was the headline stuff it has become. "To lose several weeks laughing over lust is just sad," she commented.

In her interview, as in Playboy's, the discussion began with a question whether Mr. Carter imposed his personal moral code on others. Miss Kearns offered extramarital sex as an example. Mr. Carter's short answer was no, but the real problem, he said, was not sex or extramarital sex but "the battle against lust," as Miss Kearns remembered his phrase.

"I got the feeling," she said, "that the reason he was bringing it up was not so much to say, 'I'm better' or 'I'm one of the boys' either. I thought he was saying, 'I have these problems: derogating an opponent, lusting after a woman, and I have to ask God's forgiveness, and it's hard. The hard part is telling God you did these things.'"

The importance of Mr. Carter's religion, it seems to Miss Kearns, is being exaggerated in political discussion and neglected in personal analyses.

"I came away realizing, as I hadn't realized before, how deep the religious beliefs go," she said. "When God is your judge and the Bible is your moral code, you really do have different standards."

On the stump Jimmy Carter now embraces the Democratic tradition of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry S. Truman and John F. Kennedy, but he is keeping his distance from those Presidents' men, to the profound distress of many old professionals here.

"He's still treating Washington like a leper colony," said one seething member of the "over the hill gang." Clark Clifford, the lawyer and Truman strategist, was told that Mr. Carter would call him down to Plains, Ga., for predebate advice, but the phone has not rung yet. John Kenneth Galbraith, the economist and New Frontiersman, is said to have received a mimeographed response from Atlanta headquarters when he wrote to offer help. Arthur Schlesinger Jr., the historian of the Roosevelt and Kennedy Presidencies, finds himself utterly uninvolved in a national campaign for the first time since 1928. "The possibility can no longer be excluded that Carter may lose the election," Mr. Schlesinger says, without any show of remorse.

Alabama politicians consider it no small matter that Paul (Bear) Bryant, the legendary football coach at the University of Alabama, endorsed President Ford in Mobile over the weekend. It may only mean that for Mr. Bryant, a Democrat who campaigned for Gov. George C. Wallace's re-election in 1974, the bonds among football men like himself and Mr. Ford are stronger than partisanship. It may reflect some lobbying by Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare F. David Mathews, on leave but still president of the University of Alabama. But it may also be a signal from Governor Wallace that he is not entirely reconciled to the man who beat him for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Mr. Wallace showed up to greet Mr. Ford in Alabama on Saturday. He made it clear he was not endorsing the Republican but he introduced Bear Bryant with feeling. "I'm only Governor because Bear Bryant didn't run against me," Mr. Wallace said.

1971 BORDEAUX ON SALE

Not quite a 1970, but an excellent year. About 17 or 18 over 20. At first overshadowed by the great '70's, it is only recently that people are beginning to recognize '71 as the well balanced vintage that it is. The Bordeaux we are offering at $71.00 the case, this sale, Beychevelle, Giscours, Lascombes, Montrose, Lynch Bages, Pichon Lalande, Talbot, etc., represent the best that France has to offer. In Bordeaux these wines are selling for over one hundred dollars the case today.

	BOTTLE	CASE
Chateau Grand Puy Ducasse (Pauillac)	$4.99	$59.00
Chateau Lynch Bages (Pauillac)	5.99	71.00
Chateau Giscours (Margaux)	5.99	71.00
Chateau Lascombes (Margaux)	5.99	71.00

Chateau De Lieux (St. Emilion)	2.99	35.00
Chateau Greysac (Medoc)	3.39	35.90
Chateau Bostet (Bordeaux Superieur)	1.89	21.90
Chateau Boutet is "just" a Bordeaux Superieur but the '71 is one of the most remarkable little wines we have. Tough to beat at $1.89 the bottle.
Chateau Lahoe-Giraud (Bordeaux Superieur)	2.29	26.50
Chateau Pitray (Bordeaux Superieur)	1.99	23.75
Chateau La Gravette (Bordeaux Superieur)	2.29	26.50

1972 BORDEAUX ON SALE

'72 Bordeaux have a rating of 12 to 14 over 20. The wines will be ready in one to two years and they are the best buys available. To be able to buy such great wines as Gloria and Rausan Segla at under four dollars the bottle is what the wine business is all about.

	BOTTLE	CASE
Chateau Prieure Lichine (Margaux)	$4.49	$52.00
Chateau Rausan Segla (Margaux)	3.99	47.00
Chateau Haut Brion (Graves)	9.99	118.00

Bergman Reported Subpoenaed By a Jersey Federal Grand Jury

By RICHARD J. MEISLIN

Bernard Bergman, the nursing-home operator, has been subpoenaed to appear before a Federal grand jury in New Jersey that is believed to be investigating Medicaid fraud and abuses in that state's nursing-home industry, persons close to the investigation said yesterday.

In preparation for his appearance before the jury, Mr. Bergman was returned to the Federal Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York City yesterday afternoon from the minimum-security correctional facility in Allenwood, Pa. He has been confined in Allenwood since Sept. 16 under a four-month Federal sentence for Medicaid and tax fraud.

Meanwhile, Mr. Bergman's attorneys have filed a motion to have his Federal sentence reduced, and took steps yesterday to appeal a one-year state sentence for bribery that was imposed earlier this month by Justice Aloysius Melia in New York State Supreme Court.

Testimony Sought

Gustave H. Newman, one of Mr. Bergman's attorneys, said that the appeal of the state sentence "does not exclude any other remedies we might seek," and predicted it would be "the beginning of much, much, much legal activity" in the case.

Jonathan L. Goldstein, United States Attorney for New Jersey, would neither confirm nor deny that Mr. Bergman had been subpoenaed, or that a Federal grand jury was investigating the nursing home industry in New Jersey.

But others familiar with the case said that the grand jury was seeking Mr. Bergman's testimony on his actions regarding several nursing homes that he owned, but did not operate, in New Jersey.

Some of these homes are being scrutinized for the possibility that their operators overbilled Medicaid so as to pay large assessments to Mr. Bergman, informants said.

The office of the New Jersey Attorney General has had Mr. Bergman's nursing home holdings in that state under scrutiny since January 1975.

It could not be determined how long the New Jersey Federal investigation had been in progress.

Mr. Bergman's attorneys would not comment yesterday on the subpoena or on the reason for Mr. Bergman's return to New York City.

But Larry F. Taylor, warden of the Metropolitan Correctional Center, said yesterday that Mr. Bergman had been returned at the request of the Federal marshal's office in New Jersey.

He said he had been told that Mr. Bergman would remain in New York "at least for the duration of this week."

Poet on Trial in South Korea Demands New Panel of Judges

Special to The New York Times

SEOUL, South Korea, Sept. 28—A South Korean poet known for his satirization of President Park Chung Hee's Government asked for a new panel of judges today on the ground that he was not receiving a fair hearing.

The 36-year-old poet, Kim Chi Ha, maintained in a Seoul district court that the presiding judge, Shim Hun Jong, was rejecting most of the evidence and witnesses in his favor.

Mr. Kim is being tried on charges of breaking the anti-Communist law. He was jailed early last year after writing a series of articles defending a group of people executed earlier as North Korean spies. The trial will continue after the appellate court rules on who should try him.

The average Medicaid benefit included $914 in ambulatory services, representing visits to physicians, clinics and dentists and such costs as drugs and eyeglasses. It also included $692 for hospitalization—34.8 percent of the sampled cases had hospital care, and for them this averaged $1,990.

Virtually every welfare family participated in the food stamp program. The average bonus they received for buying food stamps was put at $501.

The overall average cited only $128 for day care. This was a benefit received by only 8.8 percent of the families, but it meant an average of $1,449.

The study also showed some outside income—an average of $197 in earnings and $263 in other nonwelfare receipts such as Social Security, unemployment insurance, disability payments, help from relatives and dependency allotments. Only 7.9 percent had earnings—and for them, these averaged $2,492 in the year.

The Rand researchers observed that the higher the total income from various benefits, "the more attractive it may become to substitute leisure for work." The overall system they said, "may dampen work incentives and increase incentives for maintaining a female-headed household."

If a mother and three children are on the Aid to Dependent Children rolls and a father is separated from them but receiving home relief, the study said they could all "receive higher total benefits than if the father were to rejoin the family.

Because benefits are reduced as earnings are increased, the study said a welfare family with $2,500 income from earnings "is only realizing $1,000 more in total income than a family without working members—an average benefit-loss rate on earnings of 60 percent."

The Rand study said that any effort to simplify the welfare allowances by a flat grant would be complicated by the wide variations that occurred in reality in shelter, health care and outside income.

Alternative Strategy Suggested

The Rand group suggested that an alternative strategy might separate Medicaid and shelter allowances from the basic grant.

If each welfare family had a health insurance policy, it might get the same benefits as with Medicaid, the study said. Because more families would be covered by insurance than are on welfare, it added, "the premiums would probably be somewhat lower than $1,600 per welfare case."

Not covered in the Rand calculations were other potential benefits, such as job training and programs offered by various agencies to the welfare poor, including foster care, legal services, lunch programs, counseling, in-home care, and emergency assistance.

Nor was there any allowance for what the study called "housing subsidies," such as benefits from rent control, rent stabilization and public housing. The Rand team said "every income group in the city shares to some extent in the benefits of a heavily controlled housing stock."

The study reported the average case in its sample had been on welfare rolls for 30.5 months. Sixty-six percent had lasted three or more years, 26 percent had averaged 18-month stays and 8 percent were on intermittently for an average of 27 months.

Authors of the 199-page Rand study, entitled "Multiple Welfare Benefits in New York City" are Dr. Lyon, Dr. James R. Hosek, Philip A. Armstrong and Dr. John J. McCall. Copies are available from the Rand Corporation's publications department at 1700 Main Street, Santa Monica, Calif. 90406, for $7 apiece.

Two other states have estimated multiple benefits for welfare families. The Rand group said Michigan had used actual case records, and on the same services as in the New York study came out to an average benefit of $5,979 in cash and services during 1974.

California estimated the package only potentially, adding welfare grants, food stamps, Medicaid and social services up to a theoretical $6,946—above the $6,595 found for the four-person family in New York by the Rand study.

How One Mother Makes Do, Or Doesn't Make Do, on Welfare

Elisa Fuentes is a welfare mother with three daughters. She benefits by Medicaid help every other week for her baby. She has been buying food stamps, but not right now because welfare records apparently got snarled when she moved from the Bronx to East Harlem.

The living's not easy for the mother behind the cold overall statistics of welfare, including a new Rand Corporation study yesterday that reported that combined cash and services let most welfare families here meet "minimal household requirements."

If she were getting her full welfare check, Mrs. Fuentes would average about $8.60 a day in cash for food, clothing and other nonrent expenses for herself and the three children.

Mrs. Fuentes said she coped by skipping most breakfasts. The two older girls, Sonia, 12, and Maria, 10, get lunch at school. For other lunches and supper, the menu is generally rice and beans, Mr. Fuentes said—meat, like pork chops, available twice a week, unless chicken goes down to 45 cents a pound on sale.

There is no table, there are no chairs, so the family eats meals on the floor or a bed in the bare but neat fourth-floor apartment at 334 East 105th Street.

There is one twin bed for Mrs. Fuentes. The older girls sleep together in one bed in a 7-by-8-foot room made out of part of the living room. Clarisa, born in March, 1975, has a crib.

There is no washbasin in the bathroom; everybody uses a kitchen sink. There are dishes and utensils; there is a floor fan, a radio-phonograph, a 14-inch television.

Mrs. Fuentes, who became 31 years old last Jan. 14, was born in Puerto Rico. She has a seventh-grade education. She said she had been working in a brassiere factory in Rio Grande, P. R., at $90 a week until "I saw my friends come back from New York to visit in Puerto Rico, and how well they looked, and they told me there were good jobs."

So she came to New York eight years ago, and for two years, she said, she worked as a packer getting $140 a week until her factory closed. She got unemployment insurance of $42 a week along with welfare supplements for her two daughters then.

She has been on welfare since August 15, 1973. She said she had separated from her husband, and welfare investigators were trying to find him to help get child support.

Mrs. Fuentes, 5 feet tall and reed-thin, is "a very quiet, accepting person," as Mrs. Dorothy Andrews, assistant director of the Community Service Society's Access project at 1441 Park Avenue, at 106th Street, put it.

Mrs. Fuentes had been referred to the project by the East End welfare center last Sept. 13 when she was unable to pay a sudden $123.43 Consolidated Edison Company bill.

It turned out this was a cumulative bill for five months that arrived after no utility bills were received from the time Mrs. Fuentes moved from the Bronx. The welfare center then agreed to pay the bill, but it said it would recoup by deducting $10.30 from each semimonthly check.

Mrs. Fuentes receives $5,304 a year, in a semimonthly check of $204—$129 as a basic grant, $75 as semimonthly rent. She was already having $20.40 deducted from each check to make up for the unrecovered Bronx rent security deposit.

As a welfare recipient, Mrs. Fuentes is entitled to stretch her food money by buying $83 in food stamps twice a month, paying $47.50. This month she said she did not get her purchase authorization, so she used her first semi-monthly check's rent money for food and clothing and paid the full $150 monthly rent from the second check.

With this leaving her only $23.30, the Access project said yesterday it would give her food money a week at a time from the Community Service Society's funds to help her catch up.

There was no immediate explanation for the sudden announcement of the projected overrun. The Budget Division has adopted the policy of telling the financial community of every possible change in the state's fiscal picture, and Peter C. Goldmark Jr., the Budget Director, immediately issued an amendment to the prospectus of the recently issued Housing Finance Agency bonds, warning potential investors of the new projection.

Budget officials denied that the release of the figures had anything to do with an expected partisan dispute over the revenue figures the Budget Division will put out next week covering the first six months of the fiscal year. In the past, it has been to the administration's political advantage to stress negative developments to offset the Republican assertion that revenues were running higher than expected.

TAKE OFF WITH FLYING COLORS

Robert Louis Stevenson said: "To travel hopefully is a better thing than to arrive." He was talking about the start-of-something-new feeling that comes when a great plane lifts you off the ground and soars into the sky.

We think you will have that feeling when you—take off with Flying Colors!

It means the happy anticipation of a successful business meeting, a family reunion, a long-awaited visit with a friend, or a well-earned vacation.

It means you travel relaxed, with a sense of well-being. That's why you may never want to take off any other way.

BUCKLEY IS STRESSING HIS QUEST FOR FUNDS

paign was that he was "casting a larger net"—using more and not so specialized mailing lists and going to the same people more than once. The Senator has been seeking funds by mail for two years.

A study of the Buckley campaign financial reports dating to early 1974 when the campaign quietly began shows huge expenditures for money-raising.

A fund-raising consultant, Marvin Liebman Inc. of 95 Madison Avenue, has been paid $3,000 a month plus expenses for the last 21 months.

One of the biggest beneficiaries of the Buckley fund-raising is a mailing concern that is a subsidiary of the Buckley-family-owned National Review magazine. The subsidiary, Ultra Arts Inc., of 150 East 35th Street, the same address as the magazine's, has received at least $119,578 from the campaign for mailing costs and fees.

In addition, National Review was paid $5,051 for the rental of its mailing lists.

Leonard Saffir, the Buckley campaign manager, said he saw no conflict of interest in the Buckley campaign's contracting with the Buckley family's private enterprises. "They have the best conservative mailing lists in town," said Mr. Saffir of the magazine and Ultra Arts.

Results From Mailings

The prodigious cost of the mailings is evident in the financial reports. In August, for example, at least $72,000 was spent for mailings around the country. Most of the mail fund-raising companies are based in New York, but two are in Dallas and in North Palm Beach, Fla. The mailings have produced as much money from non-New Yorkers as from New Yorkers.

Buckley campaign aides said that about half the 22,322 individual contributors to the campaign as of late August were out-of-staters. The proportion was even larger in the case of contributors of $100 or more whose names and addresses are listed in the financial reports filed with the Secretary of the Senate.

In the three quarterly reports filed so far for this year, 519 of 999 contributors of $100 or more are out-of-staters. A total of 258 persons, many of them non-New Yorkers, have contributed the maximum $1,000 to Mr. Buckley since the financial part of the campaign began in 1974. As far as could be determined, the Senator's wealthy family has contributed a total of only $1,300.

Mr. Buckley's Democratic opponent, Mr. Moynihan, raised about $375,000 as of late August but only $50,000 of it represented the proceeds from mailings to subscribrs of Commentary magazine and supporters of Senator Henry M. Jackson, a close ally of Mr. Moynihan. Aides of the candidate said that most of the people on both lists were Jewish. Commentary charged $960 for the rental of its list; the Jackson list was provided without charge.

The total cost of the Moynihan mailings was, according to George Agree, the campaign's fund-raiser, about $15,000—a 70 percent return in contrast to the slightly better than 40 percent return for Mr. Buckley. Mr. Agree is paid $3,000 a month, but only since late July.

Mr. Clark, who pioneered mail fund-raising in his 1974 campaign for the Senate and limited contributions to a $100 maximum, spent about $150,000 for fund-raising in this year's primary and collected a total of $390,000, for a return of about 60 percent on the dollar, according to Ken Lerer, his campaign consultant.

In addition to fund-raising, other major Buckley campaign expenditures as of the end of last month were $326,200 to the Keenan & McLaughlin advertising agency for radio and television advertising and campaign-brochure design; $60,000 to F. Clifton White for campaign consulting; $48,000 to Mr. White's concern, DirAction Services, for polls; $31,050 for telephone deposits and bills; $21,000 for rents and advances to local storefronts and $5,371 for the purchase of a station wagon for the campaign.

GOOD SAMARITAN AWARD WILL BE USED BY GOLDIN

Comptroller Harrison J. Goldin said yesterday that he would recommend that the New York City Board of Estimate approve a Good Samaritan claim filed by Gloria Pirone, whose husband died last year after he intervened in a fight to rescue a 12-year-old girl.

Mrs. Pirone's husband, Frederick, was driving home with his family last Dec. 11 after doing some Christmas shopping when he spotted a young girl who was being beaten by a group of older girls on Union Turnpike near 249th Street, in the Bellerose section of Queens.

After extricating the girl from the crowd, Mr. Pirone sent her away with his wife, his daughter and his daughter's friend. Mr. Pirone was found dead an hour later, the victim of a heart attack. First report said that he, too, had been beaten, but the police later concluded that the reports were unfounded.

Although Mr. Pirone had been a subway token clerk at the time of his death, a spokesman for the Comptroller's office said that his widow was not entitled to a pension.

Mr. Goldin will recommend to the Oct. 7 meeting of the Board of Estimate that it approve an award of $8,582.43 a year until Mrs. Pirone's death or remarriage, plus $2,100 for funeral expenses.

Moynihan Continues To Teach at Harvard

Protecting his academic tenure, Daniel P. Moynihan will spend parts of three days each week teaching at Harvard instead of campaigning for the Senate.

Mr. Moynihan will teach one-hour classes on Mondays and Wednesdays and two-hour seminars on Tuesdays. With, daily commuting time included, the candidate will lose about five hours of campaigning each teaching day.

Yesterday the Democratic candidate did not make either the seminar or the campaigning. At his Manhattan apartment he was nursing a strained neck, which resulted, he said, when a small plane hit a turbulent area as it was taking him from Oneonta to Olean last Saturday.

That's one of the hazards of being 6 feet 5 and traveling around New York in a small plane," said Mr. Moynihan's wife, Elizabeth.

Aides of Mr. Moynihan said that he wanted to protect his tenure at Harvard in case he lost the Senate race. His campaign manager, Meyer S. Frucher, noted that the candidate had personally guaranteed a $50,000 loan for his campaign.

A research aide of the candidate, Susan Weaver, also is teaching three days a week. She is at Yale.

Restrictions on C-5 Plane Lifted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—The Air Force today lifted flight restrictions on its fleet of C-5 transport planes. The 77 giant C-5's were ordered limited to unpressurized training flights and special missions on Sept. 1, after a transport plane experienced pressure loss on a flight from the United States to West Germany.

POLICE KILL MOTHER OF 4; SELF-DEFENSE IS ALLEGED

The mother of four small children was shot and killed on the Lower East Side yesterday morning by a police officer who said that she had pointed a gun at him and had pulled the trigger several times, but that the weapon had misfired.

The police officer, Sal Martellaro, was checking a report of a woman chasing a man with a gun in the vicinity of the La Guardia Houses, a project near the scene of the shooting, which was at the corner of Pike and Madison Streets.

The dead woman was identified as 26-year-old Blanca Lee, who lived in the housing project with three sons and a daughter, ranging in age from 3 to 9 years.

An employee of the housing project said that Mrs. Lee, who reportedly was divorced, had complained to the management on Monday that other tenants were throwing refuse out of windows.

The dead woman's gun contained five bullets and ballistic tests were under way to see if it had been fired or was capable of being fired.

The police began an investigation into the shooting, which occurred at 7:40 A.M. when the woman reportedly was en route home from a social club. An autopsy was expected to determine whether she was intoxicated at the time.

Belgian Wives Gain Legal Rights

BRUSSELS, Sept. 28 (AP)—Belgian wives gained equality in marriage today as new laws replaced those dating to the 18th century. Wives no longer need their husbands' agreement to go to court, open a bank account, rent a safe-deposit box, apply for a job or cash their paychecks. Husbands lost the exclusive right to decide on the family's place of residence and to manage its property.

City Opera Struck by Musicia Seeking Extension of Work

By DONAL HENAHAN

Pickets marched outside the New York State Theater and a stalemate prevailed yesterday in the contract dispute between the New York City Opera Management and the musicians' union. The union, Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians, which represents the opera company's orchestra, went on strike over the players' demand for a guarantee of 11 weks of work in addition to the regular opera season.

Both John S. White, the company's managing director, and Leonard Leibowitz, a lawyer representing the orchestra players, reported that negotiations had been broken off and that they knew of no plans for resumption of discussions.

"We are subject to the call of the state mediator, Solomon Kreitman, however," Mr. Leibowitz said. He added that it was possible that Vincent D. McDonnell, chairman of the New York State Mediation Board, might enter the case before long. "Nobody wants to sweat out a long strike," Mr. Liebowitz said. "Everybody wants to settle it quickly."

All Rehearsals Stopped

Mr. White said that the State Theater was quiet inside yesterday and that all rehearsals had been stopped. "The staff pianists belong to the musicians union, of course," he said, "so they can't work. And while our chorus voted last night not to join the strike, its union, A.G.M.A., suggested that its member not cross the picket lines."

Mr. White said that the company's contract with A.G.M.A., the American Guild of Musical Artists, w negotiated, and that the ch a wage increase. Estate Will Auction Hughes Movie Rights

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28 (UPI)—The Howard R. Hughes estate will auction off the rights to three of the late billionaire's movies, including "The Outlaw," for which Mr. Hughes designed a special brassiere for Jane Russell.

Richard Gano, a Hughes cousin and temporary administrator of his California assets, yesterday announced that the estate would also auction the rights to "The Conqueror" and "Jet Pilot."

"The Outlaw," which introduced and made a star of Miss Russell, was regarded as a racy film when it was released in 1943. "The Conqueror" starred John Wayne and Susan Hayward and "Jet Pilot" featured Mr. Wayne and Janet Leigh.

The sale includes the films' exhibition, remake, sequel, television, stage, and publication rights, along with negatives, positive prints, scripts and advertising material.

Tribute to Robeson At Carnegie Oct. 18

"An Artists' Tribute to the Life of Paul Robeson" will be held in Carnegie Hall on Oct. 18 to memorialize the well-known singer, actor and black activist who died last January.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Robeson Archives. The archives is a program to gather and catalogue the extensive material relating to the life and career of the singer. The proceeds from the concert will go to the archives.

Tickets may be obtained from the archives office at 137 West 57th Street.

Clamma Dale Sing Way to Top And Seeks Out New Challenges

By MEL GUSSOW

Sitting in her upper West Side apartment, accepting congratulatory telephone calls and bouquets of roses testifying to her Broadway success as Bess in "Porgy and Bess," Clamma Dale remembered a crucial day in the eighth grade in her all-black junior high school in Chester, Pa.

"The students were singing and the teacher interrupted to say, 'There's a strange voice in the class,'" recalled Miss Dale. "She was determined to find out who owned that voice." At the teacher's request, each child sang individually. "Finally she came to me."

It was the first of many times that the extraordinary Clamma (as in "drama") Dale has been discovered. A voice that a teacher admired in a vocally untrained teen-ager, after years of study, is now exciting audiences, critics and musicians. At 28 years of age, Miss Dale, a Naumburg Foundation award winner, a member of the New York City Opera, and now a Broadway star, is on the verge of a major career as an opera singer and dramatic actress — and she knows it.

Draws Line at Junk

Talking about operas that she would like to sing, plays she would like to act in, and the possibility of a movie career—she is strikingly beautiful as well as talented—she said, "I would like to do anything that is artistic, that is of the quality that deserves me. I will not do junk. My experience on stage is just as important for me as it is for you."

Such confidence and seriousness of purpose began even before she was a teen-ager. "I don't think I've been a naïve person—ever," she said. "I didn't grow up in an atmosphere that allowed that. I was considered an outstanding child, but being bright was not enough —at least not for a black girl in Chester. You had to be bright and something special."

Her father, a jazz musician (he died five years ago), gave her, she said, a sense of pride and direction. "He always worked with me on the premise that you don't have time to waste. We were of that Martin Luther King era: If you're going to be a street sweeper, then be the best street sweeper." And if you're going to be an opera singer, be the best opera singer.

Actually her first musical love was the clarinet (she also plays the piano, cello, saxophone and guitar). "My father taught me that music was interpretation. When I played the clarinet, he always asked what it felt like: Was I thinking of a flower, a fly, hate, love?"

At 14, Miss Dale began studying voice, with no knowledge of opera singers of the past. "In my yearbook, someone wrote, 'I hope you become as great a star as Maria Callas.' I didn't know who she [Miss Callas] was."

She went to Philadelphia's Settlement Music School and then to Juilliard. Looking back on her early days in New York, she said, "I was fearless. At 18, I felt I could accomplish anything I wanted to. I still do."

Decries Lowering Standards

Juilliard and, in fact, all of her institutional education, she marks down as a disappointment. For one thing, she said, they taught her nothing about other arts, and, more particularly, nothing about acting. "Opera is drama," she said. "Without drama, it might as well be a concert." Then she reconsidered her words, "Even in a concert, every song has a poetic statement."

She is extremely critical of traditional opera casting. "If you have a lovely voice, you don't have to look the part or act well. Most people don't have standards that are high enough."

Miss Dale feels that she began broadening herself after she left Juilliard. To support herself as a singer, she taught music to first-graders in Brooklyn, and music, painting and poetry (everything from Stevie Wonder to Goethe and Schiller) to prison inmates on Riker's Island.

Her success dates from June 1975, when she auditioned for the New York City Opera. Immediately after Miss Dale finished singing, an aide to Julius Rudel, head of the City Opera, asked, "Miss Dale, are you free in the fall?" Last fall the soprano made her debut as Antonia in "Tales of Hoffmann," and, though an unknown, received a standing ovation.

Two Different Treatments

In 1974, she had played Bess in a Los Angeles Civic Light Opera production of "Porgy and Bess," which, to her dissatisfaction, treated the opera as if it were merely a musical. The current "Porgy and Bess" at the Uris Theater—she is one of three singers who rotate as Bess—to her satisfaction, is all opera. The recitatives and all the music have been restored. For Miss Dale, this only makes the opera more dramatic.

Though she is not trained as an actress, she approached the role with an actress's method, trying to understand Catfish Row as well as the wanton Bess. "You must have sympathy with what these people are about," she asserted. "You must know why Gershwin put in street cries, what the fabric of the community is like. This was once a very lovely mansion. Now it's inhabited by poor black people. Bess is a threat to that society. It's a love-hate relationship. The women admire her for her freedom. At the same time, they hate her because she can turn their men on. What makes her sensual is not the way she walks. It's her character that makes her sexy."

The Stanislavsky Method

Playing Bess, Miss Dale makes use of her own life, particularly one recent personal experience that caused her anguish. "I meditated on my pain. Finally, I was grateful for it because it got me in touch with the last scene on Catfish Row. That's the same pain that Bess would feel."

Whatever she is doing, it is, she insisted, a total commitment. Miss Dale, who is single, has devoted the last 10 years to her career. Speaking of the audience, she said: "I honestly give them me. Here I am—100 percent every performance."

Looking ahead to her future, she talked about the opera roles she wanted to play: Mimi in "La Bohème," Desdemona in "Otello," Marguerite in "Faust." She said confidently, "I'm going to be singing major operas in major productions because people want me to do them."

She would also like to act on stage—Nora in "A Doll's House" ("That's a role absolutely made for me in heaven") and Blanche Du Bois in "A Streetcar Named Desire." "Bess is in some ways similar to Blanche," she said, adding that were she to play Blanche, "I would have to contend with becoming white. Black women are not Southern belles."

Clearly, Miss Dale is setting no limits on her "mushrooming" career. "There's no rush," she said, and added joyfully, "I'm going to be here a long time!"

Lillian Hellman Denies Having Played a Role In Little Brown's Rejection of Trilling Book

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

Lillian Hellman, the author, said yesterday that she had played no role whatever in the decision of Little Brown Company not to publish a book by Diana Trilling, the critic, that contained several passages critical of Miss Hellman.

Roger Donald, chief editor of Little Brown, acknowledged yesterday that publication of Mrs. Trilling's work had been canceled. He had been unavailable for comment Monday, when the publisher's decision was first made public.

Mr. Donald said that after reading an essay by Mrs. Trilling that was to be included in the book, he had felt it would be "improper for us to publish it because it contained personal attacks on one of our authors."

The 69-year-old Miss Hellman said in a statement:

"I have never seen or heard the passages that Little Brown objected to. Nor did I know anything about their conversations with Mrs. Trilling until two weeks after they took place.

"As a matter of record," the statement went on, "Mrs. Trilling told me last summer that she intended to answer 'Scoundrel Time' and Garry Wills, who wrote the introduction. Mrs. Trilling will, of course, testify that I immediately agreed that she must print anything, anywhere and at any time that is the truth."

Although no one connected with the squabble would comment on the nature of Mrs. Trilling's passages, sources familiar with the dispute said the passages were in reply to Miss Hellman's critical references to Mrs. Trilling and her late husband, Lionel, an internationally known literary critic, in "Scoundrel Time," her memoir of the McCarthy period of the 1950's.

The book, a current best-seller, was also published by Little Brown. The Boston-based house is the publisher of several other works by Miss Hellman, including "An Unfinished Woman," "Pentimento," and "The Collected Plays."

"Miss Hellman is one of our leading successful authors," said Arthur Thornhill, president of Little Brown, yesterday. "She's not one of the big so-called money-makers, but she's up there where we enjoy the revenue."

Passages Submitted Later

According to Mr. Donald, the editor at Little Brown, the passages critical of Miss Hellman were contained in an essay called "Liberal Anti-Communism Revisited" that Mrs. Trilling submitted for her untitled book of essays and commentary shortly after Labor Day, after most of her manuscript had already been edited and approved.

"I was told that it contained a hysterical personal attack on me," Miss Hellman said. "This is deeply puzzling to me. Diana and I are old friends, and we spent the summer on the same island—Martha's Vineyard. Our houses were within a mile of each other, and she came a number of times for dinner and lunches. I thought everything had been straightened out."

Miss Hellman, who was blacklisted in the McCarthy period after refusing before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, on Fifth Amendment grounds, to answer questions about her acquaintances, indicated yesterday there had been some bad feelings between her and Mrs. Trilling after "Scoundrel Time" came out.

In the book, Miss Hellman criticized the favorable attitude of Professor Trilling toward Whittaker Chamber, the chief accuser of Alger Hiss in a case that was a liberal cause célèbre during the Red hunts of the 1950's. Miss Hellman also said in the book that she asked herself "how Diana and Lionel Trilling, old, respected friends, could have come out of the same age and time with uch different political and social views from my own."

Mrs. Trilling called the publishers' action "censorship," and said that her contract had been canceled because she had refused to delete four passages about Miss Hellman. "I agreed to clarify one," she said, "but I would not change the other three."

She said that she did not plan legal action for the alleged breach of contract, but that she did not plan to return the advance payment that Little Brown had made for the book.

"The telephone has been ringing all morning with publishers calling me to ask if they can publish the manuscript," Mrs. Trilling said. "It's a very publishable manuscript, and I'm sure I will have no trouble getting it into print."

PEOPLE LOVE THIS MOVIE

Director George Stevens' vistas are but one of the glories of 'America At The Movies', so diverse and perennially exciting are the riches from which it draws. —Molly Haskell, Village Voice

'America At The Movies' is a dandy. — UPI

—Mary McGeachy, NBC News

More than a very entertaining movie. Through its film stars, it offers a special insight into our people and country.
—Harold Clurman, The Nation

The selection, presentation and pacing of the 92 scenes from 83 movies is excellent. It is exhilarating to have demonstrated by the nearly two hours of compelling entertainment that our film heritage is so diverse, vigorous and audacious.
—Joseph Gelmis, Newsday

Fascinating and fun.
—Martin Mitchell, After Dark

A glowing tribute to the dream that is America and a marvelous opportunity to see, once again, some classic scenes from movies that were movies and stars that truly glittered.
—Aaron Schindler, Family Circle

A staggering film, warm and wonderful to behold for audiences of all ages.

By CLIVE BARNES

Presumably it was Igor Moiseyev who started it all when, before World War II, he founded his celebrated Moiseyev Folk Ensemble in Soviet Russia. Since, the theatrical possibilities of folklore, both in song and dance, have been thoroughly explored. Our latest folklorist visitor opened a week's engagement Monday night at the Palace Theater and is called "Siamsa," The National Folk Theater of Ireland. It is as beguiling as a troupe of emerald-green leprechauns emerging unexpectedly out of a Celtic mist.

The troupe was formed in 1968 by a Catholic priest, Pat Ahern, who hails from a farm in North Kerry. Father Ahern was obviously concerned that some of the folk traditions, specifically the Celtic traditions, of Ireland were in danger of being forgotten and, therefore, lost. Slowly the present company was built up. It now has a cast of just under 30, with an age span of 9 to 68. That age span is mightily important, for what Father Ahern is attempting here is to give the total impression of a small Celtic village en fête, as it were, the audience having been invited to drop by.

The word "siamsa" is seemingly untranslatable from Celtic, but it appears to denote an evening's visiting at a friend's house, a time for warmth and celebration. And this is precisely what the show is.

The dance traditions of Ireland can really be summed up in one word: the jig. And if that is two words, that is merely because it is an Irishism. Yet the jig is a much more complex dance form than is generally recognized, and although its patterns are formal enough, its individual variations can be infinite. It is a dance form with something of the variety, if a very different emotional coloring, of Spanish flamenco. These Irish dancers, ranging from the old to the young, are absolutely superb.

There are old instruments, old songs, and a spirit of such warmth and geneality that it just made me want to catch the next plane back to Dublin. It is an absolutely delightful show, simple, unpretentious and yet totally honest in its rustic charms. All Irishmen should flock to this simple pride of Erin, and anyone worth knowing is at the very least an honorary Irishman.

The Cullums Try Something Old

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

John Cullum is an actor and the star of "Shenandoah." Emily Frankel is a dancer and choreographer. They are married to each other and are now presenting an evening in the theater that attempts its own marriage of dance and drama.

"Kings," their three-part program, opened Monday night at the Alvin Theater and will be performed again every Monday evening through Oct. 18. The project is ambitious—a treatment of Greek myth through three independent one-act works.

The first part is "Oedipus," really a condensed adaptation of Sophocles' "Oedipus Rex" by Mr. Cullum, that has been directed by Miss Frankel. It is not so much a playlet as a closeup of a crucial episode in the original drama.

The second piece is "Medea," a dance work that Norman Walker choreographed for Miss Frankel last summer at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. After one drama and one dance, the stars of the show join forces in the third work, "Theseus & Hippolyta," in which Miss Frankel dances to Mr. Cullum's acting.

Devoting a whole evening to adaptations of Greek myth is an unusual concept at this time, but its creators have not really lived up to their ambitions. Essentially, they are story-tellers, and if they have aimed to retell the familiar material in anything but a straightforward manner, this is not apparent. What is missing is the extra and original dimension that can give a classic a new interpretation.

Perhaps the clue to the Cullums' approach lies in the fact that they based their own view of Theseus and Hippolyta on Mary Renault's historical novel, "The Bull from the Sea." Miss Renault's popularized versions of Greek myth have been highly praised, and the Cullums may merely be attempting to offer a popularized view of Greek myth in the theater.

Certainly, they do not probe very deeply. "Oedipus" comes closest to seeking out the universal symbolism that these myths can provide through Mr. Cullum's self-questioning homilies in the title role. Unfortunately, the chorus, drawn from the cast of "Shenandoah," does not have the ability for classical acting that Mr. Cullum demonstrates.

As for "Medea," its staging is impressive, but Miss Frankel is so out of condition that it is difficult to tell whether the choreography is really weak or is blurred by her undefined movements. David Anderson had the thankless role of Jason.

In "Theseus & Hippolyta," Mr. Cullum's Theseus does all the talking, recalling his love affair with the Amazon queen, portrayed silently with mermaid charm by Miss Frankel. There are moments of feeling, but they are few.

'How Funny Can Sex Be?' Opens at Trans-Lux East

HOW FUNNY CAN SEX BE? (Sesso Matto), directed by Dino Risi; screenplay (Italian with English subtitles) by Mr. Risi and Ruggero Maccari; director of photography, Alfio Contini; music, Armando Trovaioli, Alberto Gallitti; produced by Dean Films and Cinefirenze; distributed by In-Frame Films. Running time: 97 minutes. At the Trans-Lux East Theater, Third Avenue at 58th Street. This film has been rated R.
A butler, a young executive, a groom, a laborer, a donor, a provincial man, a corpse, an employee .... Giancarlo Giannini
A rich woman, an ignored wife, a bride, a laborer's wife, a nun .... Laura Antonelli
Gilda .... Alberto Lionello

By VINCENT CANBY

Watching Dino Risi's "How Funny Can Sex Be?" (Italian title: "Sesso Matto") is to be on the point of death and to have every Italian comedy ever made pass in front of your eyes instead of your life. It's a disappointment not easily remedied.

The film, which opened yesterday at the Trans-Lux East, stars Giancarlo Giannini and Laura Antonelli in eight sketches that parody Italian sexual manners in ways that run the gamut from harmless to painfully predictable to slightly nasty, as in the sketch in which he plays a young man hopelessly attracted to elderly women, the older and uglier the better.

With the kind of witty material that Lina Wertmuller gives him, Mr. Giannini is an immensely gifted character actor. In this Risi film, we can see remnants of some of those other performances in the Groucho-like walk, the dainty pursuit of lust, the radar-like eyes that can detect and chart a fine bust at a distance of 50 feet.

The material written by Mr. Risi and his partner, Ruggero Maccari, is so exhausted, though, that long before we get through a pointless sketch called "Wild Gooseberries," spoken in imitation Swedish, we notice that the film has become a series of masquerades that allow Mr. Giannini to wear a lot of supposedly funny hair-pieces and glasses.

Among the topics touched on but never successfully sent up are the impotence of a village Romeo, a premeditated murder effected by over-indulgence in sex, and artificial insemination.

Laura Antonelli, a stunning beauty and a talented comedienne, also wastes her talents, though the unadorned sight of her helps the time pass more quickly.

Ruling Aids Part-Time Farmers

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI)—An economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service says a recent Texas Supreme Court decision could save part-time farmers and ranchers tax money. The court ruled that farmers and ranchers qualified for agricultural tax exemptions on farm real estate even if they earned more than half their income from other sources.

Carla Hubner Offers Piano Recital

By ALLEN HUGHES

Carla Hübner, a Chilean-born pianist whose previous New York recitals have been devoted to 20th-century music, came to Alice Tully Hall on Monday night to play Schumann's "Abegg" Variations, Three Romances (Op. 28) and Sonata No. 2, Liszt's "St. Francis of Assisi Preaching to the Birds" and Ballade in B minor and Messiaen's "Le Traquet Stapazin" and "Ile de Feu" I and II.

Miss Hübner made her best impression with the Messiaen pieces, perhaps because their effects are so adroitly built into the scene that correct execution of the notes guarantees a certain measure of success. Since playing Messiaen's music respectably is no mean feat, Miss Hubner's accomplishments in this regard should not be underrated.

Her fluent pianism also found good employment in the Liszt music, and when facility and gentle sensitivity were about all the music demanded for apt interpretation, she was effective.

But in the forceful passages, and in much of the Schumann music, which is more complex than Liszt's, Miss Hübner's playing lacked strength and concentration. At times, her tone sounded shallow and dry and lacked color. There were, too, some memory slips that could not be overlooked.

In short, it seemed that the problems posed by Romantic music are not easily solved by Miss Hübner's particular set of skills and talents, and that she is most comfortable with contemporary music.

Exciting Improvisations by 2 Chicagoans' at Environ

Constant experimentation regarding unusual combinations of instruments has been one of the most striking qualities of New York loft jazz in the last few years. There have been solo saxophone concerts, trios of saxophone, trumpet and drums, "choirs" of bassists, and other new approaches to instrumentation too numerous to mention.

Monday evening at Environ, an 11th-floor loft on Broadway, a trio consisting of a violinist, a pianist and a drummer made some of the most intense and spellbinding music this reviewer has heard this year. The abilities of the musicians had more to do with the music's success than the instrumentation, of course. Richard Abrams, the pianist, has been in the forefront of jazz activity in Chicago for 10 years, although his exposure here has only recently begun to catch up with his imposing reputation. Leroy Jenkins, another Chicagoan, has established himself as the foremost violin stylist in contemporary improvisational music since moving here at the beginning of the 1970's. Jerome Cooper, the drummer, has been associated with Mr. Jenkins in the Revolutionary Ensemble.

Only a firm, confident drummer with exemplary control of dynamics could have underpinned the music of Mr. Abrams and Mr. Jenkins without obliterating its nuances, and Mr. Cooper was an excellent choice. He also contributed a jaunty opening theme that launched a series of interestingly developmental solos.

Mr. Abrams foraged up and down the keyboard voraciously, manipulating shifting densities, now thick and crashing, now delicate, almost rtansparent. Mr. Jenkins used every conventional bowing and plucking technique along with a few of his own invention to produce an equally mercurial effusion of lines and textures. The two instruments blended together into a hypnotic cascade of sound while the drums punctuated and rumbled beneath.

OTIS BLACKWELL PERFORMS WITH BAND AT OTHER END

Otis Blackwell has come to the Other End, where he is appearing through tomorrow, with all the trappings of a legend. Unfortunately, he doesn't perform like one.

Mr. Blackwell has written some of the great rhythm-and-blues and rockabilly songs of the last 25 years—"Don't Be Cruel," "Great Balls of Fire," "Fever" and "Burning Love," to name four. But although he performed in the early 1950's, he didn't record much, if at all. And in the last two decades, he has largely confined himself to songwriting, from which he reportedly earns a comfortable income.

But this last summer he sat in with Billy Swan at the Other End for a well-received set, and now he has put together a band of four young men called the Grand Union. The five opened a six-day run at the club on Saturday.

Opening night, Mr. Blackwell apparently had problems with the sound system, which weren't entirely solved by the Sunday early show—the microphone speaker kept emitting raspy noises. But a greater problem was the band, four-square and competent, but little more, and a greater problem still was Mr. Blackwell's voice, which sagged in pitch alarmingly in the numerous slow songs that he sang. The great untempo numbers are still spat out with swagger and style. But, although style is nearly all in this sort of singing, it isn't everything. This is one legend that might better have remained legendary.

GOING OUT Guide

FLOWER PEOPLE Bryant Park, which has rather gone to seed in recent years, will blossom today with its eighth annual flower show. The big event, in which many, if not most, large New York botanical and flower groups participate, will fill a huge yellow and white tent, 240 by 60 feet, in the center of the park through Sunday.

There are 13 planting and floral exhibitions and lots of talks on flower arranging, herbs, terrariums and other green-thumb topics. The Parks Department has fashioned a big Big Apple out of red and yellow mums. You will see a miniature of the Elgin Gardens that once flowered where Rockefeller Center now stands. The New York Racing Association's gardeners will be off and running with a large, miniature woodland scene, with brook.

Open daily from 10 A.M. to 5:30 P.M., the show has free admission. Information is at 472-1003.

NEIGHBORS The Brooklyn Museum is at 188 Eastern Parkway, near Prospect Park's northern end, and not far from one of the world's largest concentrations of Hasidic Jews in the world; the Lubavitch group has its headquarters not too far down Eastern Parkway at No. 770. The museum and the Hasidim usually have little relationship with each other.

But now the museum has a second-floor gallery filled with 80 recent photographs taken by Mal Washaw, a New York photographer and film maker who spent three years taking pictures of Hasidic life in Crown Heights.

The exhibition, "Tradition: Photographs of the Lubavitch in Brooklyn," depicts this Orthodox style of life in synagogues, at festivals, in raising children and in making a living—kosher pizzerias, kosher vitamins, kosher Chinese food. The photographs are from Mr. Washaw's new book, "Tradition: Orthodox Jewish Life in America," published by Schocken in paperback for the exhibition and sold only through the museum; a hard-cover will be out in the middle of next month.

Open Wednesdays through Saturdays from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. and Sundays from noon to 6 P.M., the show has free admission. For information, call 638-5000.

COUNTER CULTURE Sloan's supermarket at 748 Second Avenue, near 40th Street, will be carrying a new line briefly, at 11 o'clock this morning. Four of the store's seven checkouts will be closed to make room for the Chamber Orchestra of the Mannes College of Music. The ensemble will be giving a bargain-price—free—economy-size concert.

The one-shot supermarket debut by the 38-member orchestra, conducted by Sung Kwak, will run to classical music. Risë Stevens, president of Mannes, will be in the audience, but will not sing.

It all has to do with a promotion by Funk & Wagnalls, which is putting classical-music record albums for sale in metropolitan supermarkets. But you are invited to come in to the concert just to listen, with no obligation to buy unless, of course, you see something good in the appetizers department.

Free coffee and cake will be served after the music. It's all very new for this supermarket, not to mention the musicians. Information is at 688-1200.

FILM TALKER John Schlesinger, the director of such films as "Far From the Madding Crowd," "Midnight Cowboy" and "Sunday Bloody Sunday," will be the centerpiece of this evening's program about him at the School of Visual Arts at 209 East 23d Street (679-7350).

This is another installment of the school's lecture series, "Film Maker's Dialogue," and Mr. Schlesinger will be interviewed by Ralph Appelbaum.

The program gets under way at 6 P.M. and the conversation will begin after the showing of "Midnight Cowboy" and clips of Mr. Schlesinger's latest work, "Marathon Man," which stars Dustin Hoffman and Laurence Olivier. There are a limited number of tickets for the public—the students come first—and they may be bought at the door for $3 before the program.

In "The Days of Wine and Roses," he so effectively portrayed a man caught between thirst and despair that the role has become a classic.

He brilliantly displayed his genius for comedy in such hits as "Some Like It Hot" and "The Odd Couple."

His versatile career culminated in his outstanding performance in "Save the Tiger," which earned him a long-deserved Academy Award.

Now Jack Lemmon teams with one of today's most arrestingly beautiful stars, Genevieve Bujold, in a story as warm and touching as it is unique.

to be determined at tomorrow's meeting.

Last night's excitement followed Sal Bando's leadoff homer off Dennis Leonard in the sixth, making the score 5-3. Leonard's next pitch hit Baylor on the back of the shoulder.

Baylor and Bill Haller, the plate umpire, started for the mound—Haller to issue a warning to Leonard, because he deemed the pitch deliberate, and Baylor to take things into his own hands, for the same reason.

As soon as Haller realized what Baylor had in mind, he tried to head him off, only to be flung aside. But that was enough of a delay to let some of the speedy A's from the dugout beat Baylor and the other Royals to Leonard. In a moment, there was a tangle of about 60 uniformed figures, a few fighters and a lot of peacemakers, and the most excitable of them appeared to be Cláudell Washington.

Leonard, struck once, managed to get fairly secure at the bottom of the pile, but Cookie Rojas, the Royals's second baseman, suffered a facial cut. Baylor was the only one ejected from the game by the umpires, but Leonard was removed by his manager, Whitey Herzog.

Rivals' 3d Meeting Has Record Gate, Raucous Crowd

By DAVE ANDERSON

In a 54-degree chill, Muhammad Ali opposed Ken Norton for the world heavyweight championship at Yankee Stadium last night before an estimated 42,000 spectators who created a record boxing live gate of about $3.5 million.

Ali won by a unanimous decision and retained his title. There was no knockdowns.

Ali's first title appearance in New York in five years was responsible for the record gate, which surpassed the $2.6 million for the second Gene Tunney-Jack Dempsey heavyweight title fight at Soldier Field, Chicago, in 1927.

Ali's arrival at the ball park was delayed because throngs of youngsters attempted to storm the gates and police ringed the Stadium. The bout was delayed until, by the order of the State Athletic Commissioner, all the aisles were cleared of spectators who had cluttered thm for a better view.

Arthur Mercante, who handled the first Ali-Joe Frazier bout in 1971, was the referee. Harold Lderman and Barney Smith were the judges.

Norton Keeps Warm

Norton was th efirst to appear in the ring. Wearing a blue velvet robe with a lion's head on the back, the challenger had a blue towel across his throat. While he waited for Ali, he spared momentarily with Bill Slayton, his trainer, presumably to keep warm in the breezy chill.

About five minutes later, Ali arrived to cheers of "Ali Ali, Ali." He was wearing a long white robe with his name in blue letters on the back and he immediately walked over to where Norton was standing near the ropes. Ali mouthed at him and Norton stared back as the spectators buzzed.

Ali, waving his right arm, then got the crowd chanting, "Norton must fall," but moments later, Mercante called the gladiators together for the midring instructions. When the instructions ended, Ali pretended to chase Norton, but his handlers held him back.

At the bell, Ali, after waving his right arm like a windmill, moved out quickly in a flat-footed stance and dropped an overhand right. The voices in Ali's corner were yelling, "Don't play with him" and "Stick him with the left" a sthe challenger crouched, looking for an opening.

Between rounds, Ali resumed the chant while standing in his corner. Norton also stood, disdaining his stool.

Windmill and Rope-a-Dope

In the second round, after Ali again used his windmill to liven the crowd, Norton moved in, jabbing and throwing right hands to the body. Ali occasionally held Norton's head with his left glove, prompting Mercante to warn the champion against that illegal tactic.

Covering up in midring, Ali let Norton hit him in a rope-a-dope without the ropes, then opened up with both hands in a flurry. When the bell ended the round, Ali said something and Norton flared.

In the third, Ali remained flat-footed, apparently going for the knockout "inside fve rounds" that he had predicted. Norton was bobbing and weaving but moving forward, often into Ali's jab. Norton landed a heavy right-hand swat to Ali's head, but moments later Ali was saying, "C'mon Norton."

Ali Lands a Flurry

As the fouth round began, Ali said, "I'm going to destroy you" and landed a flurry of combinations that backed Norton against the ropes momentarily. Norton then missed a wild right, but later landed with a long overhand right. Mercante again warned Ali to "stop holding" with his gloves.

Norton's right eye appeared to be

Off-duty police oficers, protesting new work schedules and the city's failure to give them an awarded pay raise, demonstrating outside Yankee Stadium last night before the start of the Ali-Norton title bout.

Unruly Mob Mars Scene Before Gates

By STEVE CADY

As one security man at last night's title fight in Yankee Stadium put it, "The off-duty cops picked a hell of a time to demonstrate."

This was at 8:30, two hours before Muhammad Ali climbed into the ring to defend his heavyweight crown against Ken Norton. An unruly mob outside the Stadium had already tried to storm one gate, and a management executive was saying, "Every hoodlum in the city is up here tonight."

Even Ali had trouble getting into the renovated Stadium, rebuilt by the city at a cost of $100 million. Shortly before 9:30, a spokesman for Madison Square Garden, co-promoter of the fight, announced that the champion's car had been blocked by a gang of youths. He finally got into the building about five minutes later.

Pay Up to $200

With 1,000 off-duty New York City policemen shouting, blowing whistles, banging drums and blocking traffic, in a labor protest against the Beame administration, crowds outside the Stadium that otherwise might have been restrained tended to get unruly. Limousines were rocked, and a number of celebrities were pummeled as they made their way toward the special entrance reserved for them.

Spectators inside the Stadium, occupying seats that cost from $25 to $200, complained about the apparent reluctance of 1,000 uniformed policemen on duty to interfere with their off-duty colleagues.

"It created a lot of confusion," said Rafael Buschaglia, a retired Puerto Rican government official who flew here from San Juan Monday with his son, Carlos. "Some people thought it was a s trike of the ballpark's employees."

Buschaglia and his son occupied $100 seats in the box section behind the first-base line. Even from there, he was using binoculars.

Up in the peanut gallery, near the top of the Stadium's upper deck, 69-year-old Jimmy Thomas of Newark needed binoculars even more. From the $25 seats there, the fighters in the ring, situated over second base, looked like windup toys on a living-room floor.

"This isn't bad, though," said Thomas, an old-time fight fan who has seen most of the major title bouts in the last half-century.

As he spoke, two young men passed his seat, just to the left of home plate, on their way to higher altitudes.

"Hey, man," one of the youths asked his companion, "where you goin'? To the top of the mountain?

At least one gate had to be closed, barricaded by a garage-type door that was rolled down, to prevent gate-crashers from breaking through. Earlier, celebrities such as Joe DiMaggio

It's Rough, but the Price Is Right

At Yankee Stadium workmen were laying a plywood floor on real estate hallowed through the summer by the spikes of Mickey Rivers, Graig Nettles and Thurman Munson, then setting up funeral-parlor chairs around a ring already pitched on the infield. Come evening, those chairs would support the bottoms of devotees of the Sweet Science who were paying $200 each to see for themselves whether Ken Norton could punch Muhammad Ali loose from the heavyweight championship of the world. This was the first prize-fight of any description in the rebuilt stadium, it was Ali's 16th defense of his crown, the seventh of his second administration as champion, the 20th title fight of his career, and the first outdoor match of heavyweights in New York since Floyd Patterson flattened Ingemar Johannson in the Polo Grounds June 20, 1960.

Sports of The Times

In the Essex House in midtown, Mike Burke was saying that he expected a crowd of about 40,000 to disgorge approximately $3.5 million at the box office, making this the richest "live" gate for boxing since James Figg, the first heavyweight champion, began swatting profiles for profit two and a half centuries ago. Burke, the president of Madison Square Garden, predicted that ancillary income, mostly from closed-circuit television, would bring the total revenue to $8 million or so, which would mean about $6.5 million for Ali.

Up to his first encounter with Ali in 1973, Norton's biggest purse was $7,500. He collected $50,000 for giving Ali a whipping and a broken jaw. Later that year he earned $250,000 losing a split decision in their second fight. For their third tryst last night, he expected to get $1.5 million, proving that persistence pays off, if it proves anything.

The Clerk of Scales

While Burke was talking for the promotion, something like 800 parishioners were clawing their way into a room called Casino in the Park, which might accommodate 500 in reasonable comfort. They were there to witness the most meaningless ritual in boxing, the weigh-in of combatants in a division that has no maximum weight limit. The ceremony was scheduled for 11 A.M. Half an hour after that time neither fighter had shown up and the Garden's John Condon was telling the crowd that Norton's chauffeur had got lost but the challenger was now headed in the right direction.

It turned out later that Don Johnson, the driver, knows his way around New York as surely as Norton knows his around a ring. From the Tuscany Hotel on 39th Street, he had driven Norton downtown to the boxing commission office because nobody had told him that the site of the weigh-in had been changed to Central Park South.

When Norton did arrive, Jim Farley Jr., the commission chairman, peered at the scale, announced the weight as 216 pounds, peered again and made it 217½.

"I think," a bystander said, "that Jim weighs fighters as well as any commissioner we have had."

Harry Markson, the Garden's promoter emeritus, shook his head. "Gen. John Phelan was my man," he said, "although it took him a while to learn which side of that sliding indicator on the balance arm to read. Sound man, Gen. Phelan. Once he made the sensible ruling that no bout in New York involving the heavyweight champion could be billed as an exhibition because, with no overweight match possible, the champion's title was on the line every time he got in the ring. Soon after that Joe Louis was booked for an exhibition in Buffalo and somebody asked the General how come. That's when Phelan discovered Buffalo was in New York."

Senor Stevenson Next?

"I have never been more confident," Bob Biron, Norton's proprietor, was telling a friend. "I guarantee this will be no Caracas"—where a nervous Norton was knocked out by George Foreman in the second round. "Ken is psyched up and really ready."

The challenger's demeanor seemed to support this. Stepping off the scale, he strolled over to a battery of microphones looking altogether at ease. His hands were thrust casually in the pockets of his royal blue dressing gown and his mustache curled up in a smile. He laughed when somebody asked how he thought the bout would go.

"Good question," he said. "I expect it to be a very good fight from end to end. If it goes 10 rounds it'll be a tough fight. If it goes 15 it will be tough all the way."

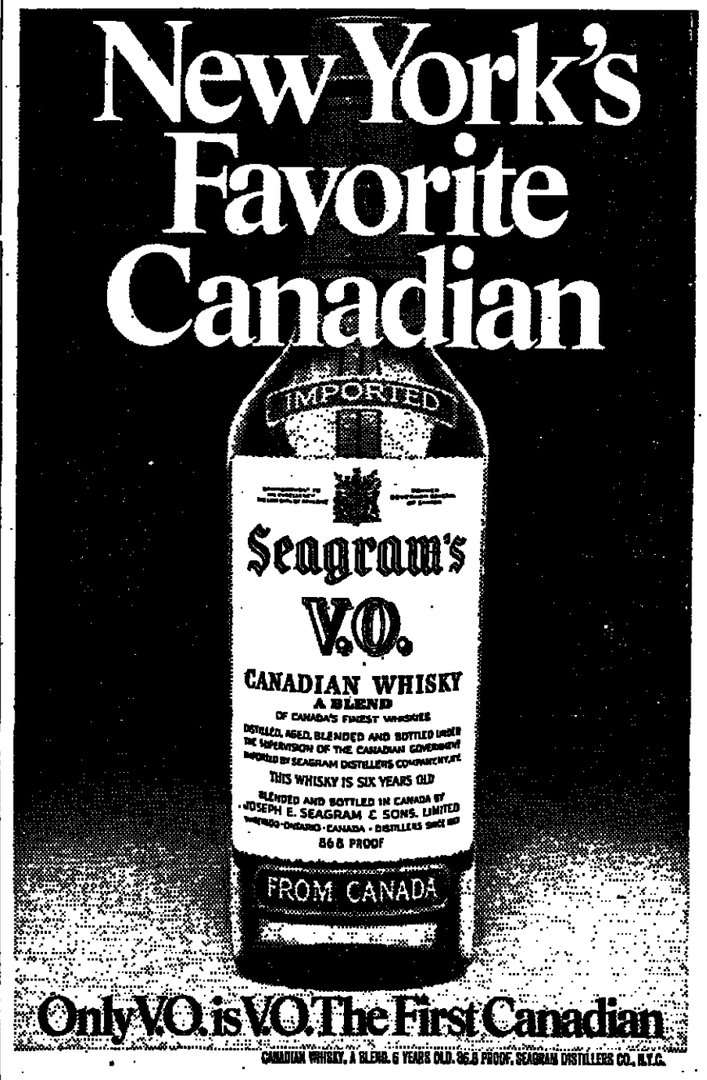
Someone else asked what his strategy would be "against the $6 million man."

"Fight like hell," he said pleasantly.

If he won, would he give Ali a return bout?

"Can you imagine what the price would be for a rematch?" he said. He did not mention that talks had already begun about a match between last night's winner and Teofilo Stevenson, the two-time Olympic champion from Cuba. Lucien Chin, who has a string of gambling houses in Kingston, Jamaica, and had a hand in the promotion when Foreman knocked out Joe Frazier there, hopes to make this match for late January on the island. According to one source, Michael Manley, Jamaica's prime minister, has initiated discussions with Fidel Castro.

Norton had left the room before the champion arrived. Ali weighed 221. The years have blurred the boyish quality of his features. He is 34 and his waistline shows it. Still, time does not wither nor custom stale his infinite loquacity. Advancing relentlessly on the microphones, he launched into a monologue that went 19 minutes by the clock.



Mets Top Expos, 5-4, and Bow, 4-2

The Mets continued their September drive toward second place with a 5-4 victory over the Montreal Expos in the first game of a twilight-night doubleheader last night.

That gap widened to three games quickly, as the Mets lost the second game with the Expos, 4-2.

Ed Kranepool homered for the tying run in the eighth inning and singled home the winning run in the ninth.

The victory was the Mets' sixth in a row, raised their September record to 20-7 and temporarily moved the New Yorkers within two games of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who are in second place in the National League's Eastern Division. However, the Pirates defeated the Chicago Cubs, 5-1, at Pittsburgh, so that the Mets' deficit was stretched to 2½ games before their second contest was completed.

Kranepool, 31-year-old "elder statesman" of the Mets, overcame a 4-3 deficit leading off the eighth inning of the first game by smashing his 10th home run, into the right-field bull pen.

With two out in the home half of the ninth, Bruce Boisclair breathed new life into the Mets with a single. Jim Dwyer pinch-hit for Felix Millan, who is suffering from a bruised right wrist, and kept things going with a single to center.

Joe Kerrigan, who was to lose the game, then walked John Milner on four pitches, bringing Kranepool to the plate. Steady Eddie, as he is known to his teammates, singled sharply to right to end the game.

Despite giving up an eighth-inning single that enabled the Expos to take a 4-3 lead, Skip Lockwood wound up with his 10th victory, against seven defeats.

Relieving Nino Espinosa, the Met starter, in the eighth after Tim Foli had singled and Andre Dawson doubled, Lockwood was clipped fort he single by Ellis Valentine, and it erased a 3-2 New York lead.

Singles by Pepe Frias, Dawson and Valentine, along with a throwing error by Roy Staiger, had enabled the Expos to score two unearned runs in the third.

The Mets came back with three in the fourth, two of which were unearned. Two walks, a single by Millan and a throwing error by Barry Foote, the Montreal catcher, accounted for the three runs. Two scored on Foote's error, a wild throw past third into left field.

In the second game, Montreal took an early 3-0 lead. Larry Parrish's second-inning home run provided one run. In the third, Bob Myrick, New York's starting pitcher, struck out the first two batters. But Del Unser beat out an infield hit. Dawson flied to left for what should have been the third out. Pepe Mangual dropped the ball, and Valentine followed with a two-run single.

Myrick lasted into the fourth, when he loaded the bases on a walk to Parrish and singles by Frias and Gerald Hannahs, the Expos' starting pitcher. Foli brought a run home with a sacrifice fly against Rick Baldwin, Met relief pitcher. The Expos now led by 4-0.

Aided by Earl Williams's throwing error, the Mets scored an unearned run in the fourth. In the seventh, after Mangual had singled, Tannahs was replaced by Woodie Fryman, who gave up a double to Bud Harrelson. After Dave Kingman had walked, filling the bases, Lee Mazzilli scored Mangual with a sacrifice fly.

Speier drove in a pair of runs with a double and Bobby Murcer drilled a solo home run to power the San Francisco Giants to a 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves tonight.

Speier's bases-loaded double in the seventh inning helped a rookie left-hander, Bob Knepper, register his first major league victory. Knepper, 1-2, scattered five hits and one run in six innings before being lifted for a pinch-hitter.

The Giants scored an unearned run in third off the loser, Frank LaCorte, 3-11, on Speier's infield single, an error and Knepper's single. Murcer added his 23d home run of the season in the fourth.

Tom Paciorek drove home the Braves' run in the sixth with a double.

Umpire Bill Haller tried unsuccessfully to hold back Don Baylor as the sixth-inning rhubarb got Oakland, Monday night. Buck Martinez, catcher, for the visiting Kansas City Royals, clings to Ba some of the Royals went back to their bull pen area in foul territory in right field, and the fans there started in on them verbally. Presently, a huge spray of beer cascaded at the players, followed by smaller amounts of beer and paper cups, and the wiser ones restrained the enraged ones from climbing into the stands, while the fans showed at least enough sense not to come out on the field. So a serious riot situation was averted, and the game was resumed.

But it now developed that Steve Mingori, the relief pitcher Herzog had chosen, was a casualty of the melee. He had been hit on the knee somehow, and although he promptly picked Baylor's pinch runner off first, he couldn't pitch naturally.

Five Pitchers Used in Inning

So Herzog brought in Bob McClure, and before the inning was over, he had used a total of five pitchers in the inning. The A's got three more runs and made Vida Blue's 18th victory secure.

"I don't think anybody was throwing at anybody, we're just here to play baseball," said Chuck Tanner, the Oakland manager, radiating innocence. When the teams had opened a three-game series in Kansas a pitch by Stan Bahnse Otis, and earlier in thi had hit Billy North, w up in time to avoid t in his face.

"We have a lot of problems drubs at home and a lot of boys are killing each other. It's terrible. People are hoping that if they see me win, they will think more about baseball and not as much about drugs. Maybe then they will leave drugs alone."

The Yankees tried to help Figueroa reach his goal, taking a 4-3 lead in the third inning. The biggest help came from Otto Velez, also a Puerto Rican, who singled across a run in the second and two runs in the third. In his previous 90 at-bats this season, he had driven in only six runs.

Unable to Hold Lead

But Figueroa, who was trying to surpass the 19 victories posted several years ago by Juan Pizarro, a Puerto Rican, couldn't hold the lead, which Thurman Munson also had helped to build with his 17th home run. Figgy got two outs in the fourth with a runner at first, but Rick Burleson doubled, Denny Doyle tripled both runners home and Rick Miller singled Doyle across, giving Boston a 6-4 lead.

A double by Graig Nettles, a sacrifice bunt and Oscar Gamble's groundout brought the Yankees to 6-5. But Tom Murphy, in rel ger, permitted only in each of the final

Garland Gains His 20th Vic As Orioles Beat Brewers

BALTIMORE, Sept 29 (UPI)—Wayne Garland became a 20-game winner for the first time in his career tonight when Bobby Grich hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning to give the Baltimore Orioles a 7-5 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers in the first game of a doubleheader.

In the second game, Reggie Jackson's 26th homer of the season capped a five-run first inning and the Orioles won 7-3.

Garland, in only his third major league season, was rocked for 15 hits, including three apiece by a rookie, Jim Gantner, and Sixto Lezcano. However, he managed to reach the

Norton's Rest Before Fight Is Guarded by His Friends

By GERALD ESKENAZI

In the hours before the fight the people in front of Ken Norton's dressing room spoke in whispers. Every few minutes someone would stick his head out and say, "he's resting."

Because he was resting before attempting to become heavyweight champion of the world, his people turned away visitors.

"Can I go in there?" asked a short man, who had a fighter's face.

"No," replied Don Johnson, who describes himself as Norton's "personal assistant."

"Okay. Tell him Carmen Basilio said hello."

Another visitor said, "My name's Newton. Our names are alike. I want to go in."

About 30 feet away another man was smoking.

"Sir, would you put that cigarette out," said Johnson. "Whenever we open the door, the smoke goes in."

Bandages Are Checked

Then Drew (Bundini) Brown, whose contribution to the arts in America is secure because of his phrase "float like a butterfly, sting like a bee," walked in purposefully. He was permitted to enter.

Why was Brown, the oldest member of Muhammad Ali's entourage, permitted inside.

"He's checking the bandaging," explained Bobby Goodman of the promoter's staff. "Before every fight someone from the other side is allowed into the dressing room to watch that the bandages are legal."

Also, someone from the State Athletic Commission is in attendance at these rituals. When the taping is finished, the commissioner stamps the fighter's bandages with an official seal.

Joe Frazier also was permitted an audience with Norton. But he stopped smiling when he saw some of Ali's people outside Norton's room.

"You know, Joe, it won't be the same not seeing you on the other side of the ring," said Dr. Ferdie Pacheco, Ali's physician. Pacheco was refused entry.

Guards Made Dry Run

As fight time approached, the half-dozen guards at thne door, which included two New York police officers, took a dry run tward the ring.

"How's the aisle?" asked one.

"No problem. A little narrow with a turn. But it's okay."

One of them smiled. "Did you hear, Ali can't find his way in? All the entrances are blocked."

"They're just not as efficient as we are," said Johnson.

When Norton finally prepared to go out, the police took no chances. They gave their wallets to friends who were inside the stadium to hold for them. Then they surrounded Norton and charged to the ring.

count would be in effect; the bout is automatically ended if one boxer is knocked down three times in a round.

Asked if he agreed with the rule, Ali said, "I like it because I don't want to kill nobody."

With clear and cool weather forecast, the Garden promoters were hoping for a crowd of about 40,000, which would produce a $3.5 million gate for the first boxing event at Yankee Stadium since Ingemar Johansson dethroned Floyd Patterson in 1959. Patterson won their rematch at the now-leveled Polo Grounds the next year.

Michael Burke, president of Madison Square Garden Center, forecast $12 million in gross revenue from both the live gate and world television. There were 43 closed-circuit TV locations in the New York metropolitan area.

"If that $12-million materializes," Burke said, "Ali would get $6.5 million."

Ali has been guaranteed $6 million, with a percentage of revenues exceeding $9 million. Norton will receive $1 million and also a percentage of what exceeds $9 million.

Ali had a 52-2 won-lost record, with 37 knockouts. Norton was 37-3 with 30 knockouts.

Hawks Tie Bruins, 2-2

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 28 (AP)—Grant Mulvey scored from close in late in the third period tonight, giving the Chicago Black Hawks a 2-2 tie with the Boston Bruins in a National Hockey League exhibition game. The Hawks arrived without Bobby Orr, even though the game had been billed as Orr's first appearance against his former team.

Tiger Farm Picks Moss

DETROIT, Sept. 28 (UPI)—Les Moss was promoted today to manager of the Evansville Triplets of the American Association by their parent team, the Detroit Tigers. The clubs renewed their working agreement for three more years. The 51-year-old Moss succeeds Fred Hatfield, recently promoted to replace Joe Schultz as a coach with the Tigers next season.

Shavers Knocks Out Clark in 2d

Earnie Shavers, who once retired briefly after a knockout by Jerry Quarry, returned to prominence among the heavyweight contenders last night by registering a second-round knockout of Henry Clark in the feature preliminary to the Ali-Norton title bout at Yankee Stadium.

Shavers, 213 pounds, of Warren, Ohio, pummelled Clark, 222, of San Francisco from the opening bell. Johnny LoBianco, the referee, stopped the scheduled 10-round bout after 2 minutes 18 seconds of the second round with Clark sagging against the ropes in his corner.

"We want Ali," shouted Shavers's handlers. "Get us Ali."

In a scheduled 10-round middleweight bout, Mike Rossman, 165½, of Turnersville, N. J., stopped Christy Elliott, 165, of Dublin, Ireland, at 1:59 of the third round. Elliott was defenseless in a corner when the referee, Herbie Kronowitz, waved his arms, stopping the fight.

James J. Woody, once a popular main-event heavyweight at the Garden, also was a third-round loser in a scheduled four-round bout. Woody, 207, of the Bronx, was stopped by Bernardo Mercado, 215, of Paso, Nev.

Gilbert Acuna, 205, of Costa Rica was impressive in registering a first-round knockout aver Peter Muller, 224, of Brooklyn after 78 seconds. Kronowitz invoked the three-knockdown rule, automatically ending the bout.

In other scheduled four-round bouts, Bill Sharkey, 191½, of Long Island, was awarded a decision over Joe Maye, 195, of Hartford, Conn., and Otie Gordon, 172, also of Hartford, stopped Kevin Smith, 175½, of Jersey City, after 2:08 of the first round.

Extensive Repairs Set For Old Tiger Stadium

DETROIT, Sept. 28 (UPI) — The Detroit Tigers, unable to get governmental help in fixing their aging ballpark, announced an extensive modernization plan for Tiger Stadium today. It will take from 7 to 10 years and will begin with new lights for next season.

The club made no estimate on the cost of renovating the structure, which has stood in its present form at its downtown Detroit site since 1938. John E. Fetzer has spent between $10 and $12 million in maintenance, repair and taxes on it in the twenty years he has owned the American League baseball team.

"Our hopes for a new stadium are by the boards at the present time," general manager Jim Campbell of the Tigers said. "We're doing it alone."

St. Cloud Forfeits 4 Games

ST. CLOUD, Minn., Sept. 8 (UPI)—Noel Olson, the athletic director at St. Cloud State University said today he had learned that one of the school's football players, Steve Kovach, a sophomore, was ineligible and that the team had forfeited its first four games. St. Cloud had a 4-0 record and is now 0-4. Kovach did not have enough credit hours for the last two quarters, Olson said.

Canada Foresees Threats To Commonwealth Games

By ROBERT TRUMBULL

Special to The New York Times

EDMONTON, Alberta, Sept. 26—Two months after the event, the political aroma of the summer Olympic Games in Montreal surround the preparations for the next big international sports event scheduled in Canada, the Commonwealth Games to be held here Aug. 3-12, 1978.

The Commonwealth Games, bringing together athletes from more than 40 countries in what was formerly known as the British Empire, may lack Olympic glamour, but they can produce dramatic moments like the historic confrontation between John Bannister of Britain and John Landy of New Zealand in the one-mile run in Vancouver in 1954, the last time the games were held in Canada. They were called the British Empire Games at that time.

Bannister, the first man to run the mile in less than 4 minutes, had to do it again to beat Landy on Aug. 7, 1954. The Englishman was clocked in 3:58.8 and Landy in 3:59.6—the first time two men bettered 4 minutes in one race. It was the third sub 4-minute mile. Landy held the world record at the time of 3:57.9.

The same agitation, centering around New Zealand, that led to the withdrawal of 29 African nations from the Montreal Olympics is being repeated here.

The walkout at the Olympics followed unsuccessful demands for the suspension of New Zealand from participation in the Games because of that country's athletic relations with South Africa, which practices apartheid, or racial separation.

Boycott Is Threatened

Anti-apartheid groups are threatening to promote a similar boycott by the African, Asian and Caribbean members of the Commonwealth at the Edmonton Games if New Zealand is admitted.

Neither the controversy in the Olympics nor the agitation here has involved South Africa directly, since that country was expelled from the Olympic movement and withdrew from the Commonwealth over racial policies.

However, a crowd, led by members of a South African expatriate organization opposed to apartheid, invaded a cricket ground a few days ago where Canadians were playing against a British team that had toured South Africa. Police arrested 61 of the demonstrators in a wild scene and charged them with trespassing.

"We will invite all countries of the Commonwealth family," Dr. Maury Van Vliet, the head of the Edmonton Commonwealth Games Foundation, said in an interview.

"It is extremely difficult to anticipate the situation one and a half to two years from now," added Van Vliet, the dean of the Department of Physical Education at the University of Alberta and a former star quarterback at the University of Oregon.

Meanwhile, plans for an event that will significantly upgrade the sporting and recreational facilities in this growing center of Canadian petroleum, natural gas, farming, cattle raising and manufacturing enterprises are going ahead, with none of the other difficulties that plagued the staging of the Olympics in Montreal.

Projected Price Sliced

Where the expenses of holding the Olympic Games escalated to nearly five times the origina projection in Montreal, reaching a record of $1.5 billion in the end, the budget for the less-elaborate Commonwealth Games has been substantially reduced from the earlier estimates.

Instead of the $43.4 million first projected, the whole construction package for the 1978 games will cost only $36 million, according to the planners. The lower figure includes a cushion of $1 million for contingencies.

For this relatively modest amount, the City of Edmonton will have new sports facilities, including a 55,000-seat stadium and associated athletic and other body-building facilities, costing $20.9 million; a new aquatic complex with four swimming pools, for $8.5 million; a new velodrome and venues for such sports as shooting and lawn bowling, the latter a popular pastime throughout the Commonwealth.

Edmonton has likewise been spared the funding problems that plagued Montreal.

The Federal Government, which refused to contribute directly to the Montreal Olympics, has allotted $1.2 million to Edmonton; the city is putting up $11.6 million; the province of Alberta, of which Edmonton is the capital, has pledged $7.9 million, and the drive for private donations to cover the rest has been highly satisfactory, the planners say.

Vaughn-Squires Lawsuit Transferred to Virginia

A suit involving David Vaughn, former pro basketball player, and the now-defunct Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association was transferred to the Eastern District Virginia Federal Court yesterday.

Federal Judge Morris E. Lasker ruled in New York to transfer the suit because Vaughn and several witnesses in the case live in Virginia.

Vaughn is suing the Squires and the rest of the former American Basketball Association for breach of employment and injury to his reputation. He contends his $1.2 million, six-year contract was terminated unjustly by the Squires early this year.

Vaughn was arrested in July 1975 in Virginia after an incident in which he allegedly refused to pay for gasoline and became involved in a high-speed car chase with policemen. He was convicted of "technical automobile offenses," including damage to city property, reckless driving, disregard of a red light and assault.

McRae Continues to Lead dh Category With .331

Hal McRae of Kansas City continues to lead the American League in the designated-hitter category with a .331 batting average through Sept. 27, the league president, Lee MacPhail, announced yesterday.

McRae also is leading the league in hitting with a .335 average.

Rico Carty of the Cleveland Indians is in second among designated hitters, batting .313, which also puts him among the top ten in the A.L. in hitting.

Following McRae and Carty are Steve Braun of the Minnesota Twins, .276, and Willie Horton of the Detroit Tigers, .263.

Led by Carty, Cleveland's designated hitters are batting at a .303 clip. Throughout the league, designated hitters were batting a composite .256 with 1,810 hits, 157 home runs and 907 runs batted in.

THIS SUIT AT FINE STORES NATIONWIDE $260
AT THE NEW YORK MANUFACTURER $149

Less than one year ago, Saint Laurie, a fine men's clothing manufacturer for 63 years, introduced a unique selling concept in New York.

What started as a gratifying response, has built into an ever growing legion of extraordinarily dressed, true believers.

The concept is simple: Saint Laurie sells their exquisitely tailored classic American and European cut suits to the most expensive stores throughout the country.

They will continue to sell to stores in New York, but not under the Saint Laurie label, and offer their vast collection (over 25,000 suits) direct to the consumer.

Nothing like Saint Laurie exists in New York. To our knowledge, anywhere.

The enormous selection, impeccable tailoring, costliest fabrics with prices at the factory ranging from $115 to $210, turns the most critical shopper into a delighted customer.

If smashing suits are important to your business or personal life and you've been spending $275 to $300 for them at better stores, come to Saint Laurie and see what feeling and looking good is all about.

Stockton Battles Back For Victory in Tennis

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28 (UPI)—The $125,000 fireman's found tennis tournament continued today with sixth-seeded Dick Stockon fighting off Alan Stone, an Australian, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.

In another close battle, John Lloyd of Britain downed Bill Scanlon of Dallas, 6-7, 6-3, 6-4. Geoff Masters of Australia, had an easier time with Dick Bohrnstedt of Redlands, Calif., 6-3, 6-2.

The first prize is $20,000, with the final on Monday.

Gottfried Captures Final

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28 (UPI)—Brian Gottfried didn't think his victory was a giant step, but it was good enough.

"It's a stepping stone for me to get to the top," said the Floridian after he had beaten Arthur Ashe, 6-2, 6-2, to capture the singles title in the $125,000 Pacific Southwest open tennis championships last night.

It was the first tournament he had won this year, and it brought him $20,000.

Stan Smith and Bob Lutz defeted Ashe and Charles Pasarell, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, for the doubles crown.

"Arthur didn't play as well as he usually does," Gottfried said. "He was having trouble with his first serve, so I jumped on his second."

Gottfried outplayed Ashe in every department of the game. He took charge with passing shots and cross-court drives, keeping Ashe off balance and on the run.

"Against players like Ashe, I'm not intimidated like I first was when I came on the tour," said the 24-year-old victor. "I feel I can step out on the court with anybody."

Miss Barker Joins Field

HILTON HEAD, S.C., Sept. 28 (AP)—Sue Barker of Britain was added today to the field for the $195,000 World Invitation Tennis Classic Oct. 11 to 15 at the Sea Pines Racquet Club.

She joins Rod Laver, Evonne Goolagong, Ilie Nastase, Virginia Wade, Arthur Ashe and Bjorn Borg. One more woman is to be named.

The players will compete on a point-system basis in a weeklong series of singles, doubles and mixed doubles

Giants' Rookie 'Spaceman' Enjo[ys] Knocking Down Foes, Gets Rew[ard]

By MICHAEL KATZ
Special to The New York Times

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y., Sept. 28—Terry Metcalf doesn't do the kickoff and punt returns for the Cardinals anymore, so the chances are he won't meet the Spaceman in St. Louis Sunday.

Don Lloyd doesn't care whom he knocks down, Metcalf or his runback replacements with the Cardinals—Pat Tilley, Wayne Morris and Jerry Latin. The Spaceman is a rookie linebacker with the Giants who doesn't get to do much linebacking. He made the 43-man squad not because he was a sixth-round draft choice out of the University of Washington, not because he could some day be a star linebacker in the National Football League.

The Spaceman made the roster because he knocks people down and because nearly 20 percent of the opportunities to knock people down occurs in "special-team" situations—punts, kickoffs, extra-point and field-goal attempts.

"It may be the only factor as to why I'm here," the 22-year-old rookie said today after the first day of practice for the game at St. Louis. "They had six linebackers they wanted to go with and I think my work with the 'specials' decided it for me."

The Giants traded one of the six linebackers, Andy Selfridge, to Miami for a draft choice, thus making room for Lloyd. The 6-foot-2-inch, 225-pound youngster responded with fierceness.

"I'm not looking for a place to hide out there," said Lloyd. "I'm looking for a place to stand out."

Lloyd's work on the specials was so outstanding that Coach Bill Arnsparger named the rookie one of the Co-captains for last Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Rams.

"You're inteested to see what a young guy'll do when you name him a captain," Arnsparger said. "Dan re*sponded."*

Lloyd understands he must put in his time with football's kamikaze squads. "This is my first year here, and there's some good people ahead of me at linebacker," he said. "I'm just happy about being here at all."

Lots of Time for Television

The Spaceman—his nickname derives from the specially padded helmet he wears "because my head has a funny shape"—will be even happier when his wife, Vicki, leaves her secretarial job in Settle this week and rejoins him here Friday.

"Let me tell you, I've watched a lot of television in the last few weeks," Lloyd said. "I think 'Baa, Baa, Black Sheep' is my new favorite. Most of the stuff you watch is just to take up time."

Lloyd is spending part ofhis time learning not only the nuances of strongside linebacking—he is the backup for Brad Van Pelt, while at Washington he was all Pacific-8 at middle linebacker—but also those of coaching. "Just the other night I sat outside and watched the Pace coaches," he said. The Pace University football club uses the Giants' practice field; it is, after all, on the school's grounds.

Van Pelt may be first-team linebacker, but Lloyd knows his place. "On some of the specials Brad is my backup, on others it's Pat Hughes [the starting weakside linebacker]," Lloyd said.

Does that mean he considers himself first-team, the others second? "It's a fact," he said. "They are."

Metcalf Refuses Duty

Coach Don Coryell of the Cardinals said by phone that his rookie replacements for Metcalf on the return teams were doing good jobs, Tilley averaging 11.7 yards on punt returns, Morris 25.4 on kickoffs. Metcalf, the all-purpose back, refused return duty this season unless he received more money.

*"I don't know if there's anybody bet*ter in the league than Metcalf," said Coryell. "But he's pretty good from scrimmage, too, and he' much this year. I just some bad advice from hi renegotiating a new contr

Defense Bails Out Redskins in Overtime

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 28 (AP)—Billy Kilmer took it all in stride. The 37-year-old Washington Redskin quarterback, a 15-year veteran of the National Football League wars, completed just 11 of 33 passes for 96 yards and had three intercepted in last night's 20-17 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

What made it easy for Kilmer to forget one of his worst nights was that his unbeaten Washington team managed to hang on for a victory in sudden-death and tie the Dallas Cowboys for first place in the National Conference East. Each has won three games.

The Skins won the nationally televised game 12 minutes 49 seconds into the sudden-death period on a 29-yard field goal by Mark Moseley. The score was set up by an interception by Eddie Brown that placed the ball at the Eagles' 32-yard line.

"I was just too cautious out there tonight," said the 204-pound Kilmer. "You could say I was very cautious, and I don't play good football when I'm cautious."

Kilmer said he had a few things in the back of his mind that subdued the gambler in him. One was the artificial surface in Veterans Stadium. The Skins had lost 12 of their last 14 games on the rugs. The other was what the quarterback referred to as the Philadelphia jinx. The Eagles had beaten the Skins twice last year.

"I didn't like the wet conditions out there," said Kilmer of rain that stopped at halftime. "I just kept getting the ball on their fingertips. There were some dropped balls and a lot of things go wrong when the conditions are wet like that."

Kilmer said the credit for George Allen's 100th pro coaching victory should go to the defense. "They were super, and it's a good thing because the offense was much too inconsistent tonight."

Allen, whose quick judgment in calling a timeout with 12 seconds left in the first half led to a Washington touchdown, joined Kilmer in saying the offense had a long way to go.

The Washington defense intercepted five passes and recovered one fumble. The Eagles piled up a lot of yardage—418 yards—but the Skins refused to budge when it counted deep in their territory. Two Eagles passes were intercepted in the end zone and one at the 1-yard line. Joe Lavender, the former Eagles' defensive back, had two of them.

The Eagles quickly jumped to a 10-0 lead on a 22-yard first-period field goal by Horst Muhlmann and a 16-yard touchdown run by Art Malone in the second quarter. With 3:17 left in the first half the Eagles led, 10-0. But in 62 seconds, the Skins scored on a 27-yard Mosely field goal and a 32-yard touchdown return of a fumble by Brad Dusek, a linebacker.

Thomas sent the Redskins ahead, 17-10, early in the fourth period on a 27-yard run. Philadelphia tied it with 1:07 remaining in regulation time on a 41-yard pass from Mike Boryla to Charlie Smith.

Auto Company's Backing A[ids] Firmer Footing for U.S. Sk[i]

By MICHAEL STRAUSS

The lack of adequate financing, a major annual concern of the United States national Alpine and Nordic ski squad, will not pose a problem for this winter's competitive and training programs.

Sponsorship of the ski squads by Subaru of America to the tune of approximately $250,000—in cash as well as team automobiles—has eliminated potential financial problems for the 1976-77 campaign.

Subaru's involvement in the fund drive, which this year is aiming for $1½ million, was announced yesterday during a luncheon held atop the World Trade Center in downtown Manhattan. Present were a dozen members of the team that left for Italy last night for training.

The American company which markets cars manufactured in Japan, is one of several that will be offering to pay next season's bills. Also contributing, but toi a lesser extent than Subaru, will be such companies as Pan American World Airways, Dannon Yogurt, Wella-Balsam and Sears, Roebuck & Company, and Paul Masson Wines division of Seagram's.

More Funds Expected

"Of course our financing program for the winter will not officially go over the top until we have received additional help from funds realized from the many dinners and other gatherings that have been scheduled from coast to coast for later this year," said Warren Hellman. Horse Drugging Inquiry Continuing at Monmouth

Special to The New York Times

OCEANPORT, N. J., Sept. 28 — The fourth case in the last month in which a horse was found to have medication in his system after a race was disclosed today at Monmouth Park. It raised the number of cases in the state this year to 18.

Shrewd Dealer, trained by George Handy, was found to have the analgesic, Butazolidin, in his system after winning the third race exacta on Sept. 18 by two lengths at odds of 5-1.

The stewards took no action in the case pending the completion of an in*vestigation. However, they did order* the customary redistribution of the purse.

Yacht-Title for Cudmore

TRIESTE, Italy, Sept. 28 (Reuters)—H. Cudmore of Ireland, at the helm of his yacht Silver Shamrock, was confirmed today as world Half Ton Class yachting champion at the end of the five-race series here after protests had been heard and settled.

...rs rank 27th in rush-...m National Football ...last in the American Conference after picking up 268 yards in three games. The only team worse in running is Green Bay.

Davis may be the Jets' statistical leader, but that does not amount to much on this team, which has lost all three of its games. He has gained 106 yards on 28 carries for an average of 3.8 a carry.

The second-leading rusher is Marinaro, with 64 yards in the three games. Gresham has carried four times and gained 6 yards. Davis will now be the backup at fullback to Marinaro.

In his first season with the Jets last year, Gresham was the star of the exhibition game. But he fumbled on the first two drives in the season opener at Buffalo, was benched, then got injured and was in eclipse the rest of the campaign.

Gresham's backup at halfback will be the rookie, Louie Giammona, who has rushed for 15 yards on five carries. Over all, the Jets average 3.6 yards a run.

The American Conference's second-worst team in rushing is Buffalo, which has O.J. Simpson. The new Tampa Bay Buccaneers are ahead of the Bills in the run.

Because the Jets have not established a ground game, they have yielded the ball rather quickly. That has forced the defense to play most of the time. And the defense is the Jets' major weakness.

In the three games the defense has been on the field for 44 more plays than the offense. Last Sunday it had to remain under a 93-degree Miami sun about 70 percent of the time.

In the last 8½ quarters the Jets have not had a touchdown. Their longest run has been 20 yards.

But they rank among the leaders in punting (Duane Carrell has averaged 41.9 yards) and kickoff returns (Giammona is averaging 27.1). Those are two areas in which they have received an extraordinary amount of game experience.

Weaver Rehired by Orioles; Howe to Play This Season

The Baltimore Orioles ended speculation about Manager Earl Weaver yesterday. Weaver was rehired for the 1977 American League baseball season. Hank Peters, the club's general manager, made the announcement.

The 46-year-old Weaver, completing his 20th season in the Baltimore organization, signed a one-year contract. The terms were not disclosed, although it is believed that Weaver worked for about $80,000 this season.

Gordie Howe is about to start one more season of professional hockey, his 29th, at age 48. Howe, the sport's leading career scorer, had announced his retirement at the end of each of the last three seasons with the Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association.

Yesterday Howe announced that he would play another league campaign. He also resigned as president of the club after one season in a dual capacity.

"I want to limit myself to one job, and that's skating," Howe said. "Therefore, I have resigned as president. To have the best year, I want to concentrate on playing."

Having played 25 seasons with the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, beginning in 1946-47, Howe came out of retirement in 1972 to join the Aeros. The Aeros won two successive titles before bowing to the Winnipeg Jets, the eventual champions, in the playoffs last season.

Manhattan College has established a scholarship in the name of Junius A. Kellogg, now deputy commissioner with New York City's Community Development Agency.

In 1951, when he was a star of Manhattan's basketball team, Kellogg revealed that he had been approached by a gambler who offered him $1,000 to "throw" a game between Manhattan and De Paul.

Kellogg feigned interest, and reported the offer to Ken Norton, then basketball coach and now Manhattan's athletic director. Manhattan College officials then reported it to the Bronx District Attorney.

Kellogg's undercover activity led to the apprehension of the "fixers" and helped to expose the 1951 basketball scandal.

Kellogg, after service in the Army, returned to Manhattan and graduated. His spine was severely injured in an automobile accident, and he has been confined to a wheelchair. He has been a leading exponent of wheelchair basketball.

Bernard King, a basketball start at the University of Tennessee, was fined $50 in Knoxville City Court for possession of marijuana. His attorney said the case would be appealed.

King, from Brooklyn, was arrested Sept. 11 in a nightclub parking lot. Dwight Loop, a police officer, testified that he had found 2.2 grams of "plant material" in a napkin on the car floorboard.

Yesterday was the first day of his new job for John Hanna, coach of the Springfield (Mass.) Indians of the American Hockey League. Hanna, 41, became lost while looking for the club's training camp at the nearby Williston Academy.

Having spotted a police officer, Hanna stepped from his car on the main street in East Hampton, Mass., to ask directions, and walked into the path of a truck. Hanna was reported in good condition at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northhampton, suffering from a broken hip. The players, unaware of Hanna's injury, conducted their own workout.

Slager, Irish Passer, Voted Back of Week

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 28 (AP)—Rick Slager, who set a Notre Dame record last Saturday by completing 12 of 14 passes for 231 yards and three touchdowns, was named national college back of the week today by The Associated Press.

The 5-foot-1-inch, 190-pound senior from Columbus, Ohio, had completed only nine of 29 atteempts for 114 yards with three interceptions in the first two games, a 31-10 loss to Pitt and a 23-0 victory over Purdue. But his 12-of-14 effort in a 48-0 rout of Northwestern gave him a single-game completion percentage of 85.7, breaking the former Notre Dame mark of 81.3, set by Bob Williams against Michigan State in 1949.

McDonald Answers Call In Big Way for Chargers

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE

Three weeks ago Dwight McDonald, a wide receiver, was released by the San Diego Chargers, for whom he had been a regular last session, and no other team picked him up. The 25-year-old McDonald, a San Diego native, refused to believe that this was the end of a career, not an untypical reaction of final cuts in the National Football League. So he played tennis every day and waited for the phone to ring. Some wait forever.

About Pro Football

Gary Garrison, for years the Chargers' top receiver, was hurt in the second game and declared out for the season. McDonald's phone did ring. He rejoined the team and caught two touchdown passes last Sunday as the Chargers upset the Cardinals, 43-24. "It sure beats playing tennis every day," said McDonald.

That was the best rag-to-riches story of the campaign so far but it need not be the last one. The N.F.L. teams are playing with 43-man squads this season and without the customary nonroster reserves of taxi squad in case of injuries. The way around that has been to have an on-call list of free agents, such as McDonald, or in some cases to have a mini-taxi squad stashed away in a nearby motel, all expenses paid, which is against league rules.

Since a team can play only 11 men at once, a squad of 43 might seem sufficient. The usual breakdown is 23 offensive players and 20 for defense as follows: three quarterbacks, four wide receivers, two tight ends, eight interior linemen, five running backs and a kicker for offense; seven linemen, six linebackers, six backs and a punter for defense. If there are two or more injuries at one of these positions, the general manager or personnel director pulls out his little black book and starts phoning free agents.

The Jets, who have had as much player turnover as any team this month, do not hide out players. But they think they have found a team that does and Al Ward, the general manager, is annoyed.

With Billy Newsome and Carl Barzilauskas injured, the Jets need help in the defensive line. They know of a free agent who would fill the bill, but the athlete has been in another city negotiating with the team there and staying in a motel with his wife. N.F.L. rules permit teams to give one-day tryouts to free agents before signing them or rejecting them.

This athlete's one-day tryout has now extended to eight days, without his being activated, and it could go on all season unless someone blows the whistle to Jan Van Duser, the N.F.L. director of personnel.

Van Duser operates out of league offices on Park Avenue and he is not prepared to check motel guest lists throughout the country. He says, "We don't want a police state within the N.F.L., but the problem of evading the player limit comes up every time. Team fines by the commissioner are common. We find out from complaints of other teams, from the newspapers or from the players themselves."

Ward points out that the team freezing the athlete the Jets could use, possibly by paying him cash clandestinely, has established an unfair competitive advantage by depriving the New York team, which has lost three straight and is somewhat desperate. Ward says the other team is a playoff contender in the Jets' division and he will go no further.

The one-day trial rule is widely abused. The athlete trying out is not supposed to work out with the others or to put on pads. The practice, however, is to get the free agent to sign an injury waiver, put on the pads and hit with the roster players for one, two or three days to see what he can offer. Football players will endure any number of indignities for a weekly $1,500 game salary.

Speaking of 11 men on the field at one time, the Jets ran into 12 at Miami on Sunday. A fifth Dolphin defensive back raced onto the field as a key third down play began for the Jets, but the linebacker he was replacing did not leave. Joe Namath found all his receivers buttoned up tight so he threw the ball away.

Lou Holtz, the coach, discovered the 12th man when reviewing films Monday and he was disappointed that the officials had not made the discovery. "Miami didn't do it on purpose," he said. "But we have a tough enough time playing against 11 men. Twelve is impossible."

Eagles Home Game Oct. 10 Is Switched to St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28 (AP)—The site of a scheduled National Football League game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Eagles on Oct. 10 was switched today to St. Louis.

The move was made necessary when the Philadelphia Phillies clinched the National League East championship. The first two games of the baseball playoffs are scheduled in Philadelphia Oct. 9-10. Both the Phillies and the Eagles use Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia.

The Cardinal-Eagles N.F.L. game scheduled for St. Louis Nov. 7 was switched from St. Louis to Philadelphia.

Challenge Avis.

See if our car service network will work better for you.

Avis has three challenging questions you should ask before you sign any car lease which includes service.
How convenient are the locations?
How national is the service network?
How good is the service?
After you hear the answers, find out if we can give you better ones. We've got a reputation for trying harder. Make us live up to it.

PEUGEOT MEANS METEOR MOTORS

Meteor Motors' commitment to reliable service, integrity and equitable pricing began 31 years ago and continues in that same tradition today.

Our Service and Parts Dept. are staffed by people whose combined experience total over 100 years of expertise. At Meteor, we know how to fix it right the first time, and that is our attitude, combined with our experience that makes us the envy of others.

The purchase of a car can either be a pleasant experience or an expensive mistake. We know that you are looking for the right price. If you come in and see our full line of new Peugeots we can arrange the type of deal you want. Last year over 75% of our customers who either purchased, leased or financed cars through us, did so by the recommendation of a previous Meteor Motors customer.

At present, we have a good number of brand new '76 Peugeots, with a full choice of models and colors, all at huge savings. Come talk to us.

POLICE PROTEST LAID TO DECLINE OF P.B.A.

Many Officers Feel That Internal Strife Led to Lack of Control of the Union Membership

By SELWYN RAAB

The decline of the once-powerful Patrolmen's Benevolent Association's influence at City Hall was described yesterday as one of the chief factors behind the current street demonstrations by thousands of off-duty police officers.

In addition, many officers familiar with the internal problems of the P.B.A. agree that the union has been so badly torn apart recently by internal rivalries that effective control of the membership has virtually vanished.

"We're a vacuum looking for a leader," one police officer explained. "We've got all these problems with the city and we literally don't know to whom or where to turn to in the P.B.A."

On a picket line yesterday, another off-duty officer, asserted: "Demonstrations seem to be the only way we put pressure on City Hall, the public and the P.B.A. leadership."

Howard Morse, a public relations counselor to Douglas Weaving, the P.B.A. president who is in charge of the union's negotiations with the city, denied that the organization was rudderless.

"The insurgents can do anything they please without worrying about responsibility," Mr. Morse said. "The P.B.A. is not rudderless, but the captain is at the helm and he has no time to wave the flag like some of his competitors."

Once a Powerful Union

The outward grievances of the 18,000 officers represented by the P.B.A. center largely on a deferred wage increase and new work schedules that go into effect on Sunday. But the dissension within the union dates to the early 1970's.

Until then, the P.B.A. was considered one of the most powerful municipal labor unions, with its support eagerly sought by many politicians. In exchange, the union in the late 1960's and early 1970's won large wage increases and attractive fringe benefits.

For decades, until the 1970's, the mantle of P.B.A. leadership usually had been transferred peacefully, without any bitter elections.

In 1974, however, Ken McFeeley was elected president in a rough, uphill fight against an incumbent administration. He had campaigned briskly on a platform of restoring morale and prestige to a force that had been bruised by corruption scandals and vast organizational changes.

Within a year of Mr. McFeeley's election the city was lashed by a financial crisis and the P.B.A. looked on helplessly as more than 2,000 officers were laid off, salaries were frozen and promotions discontinued.

Not only did the top police officer's wage scale of $16,870 a year fall behind those of other cities, but older policemen who thought they had secure staff jobs found themselves back on patrol.

With 40 percent of the police force now living outside of the city there also appeared to be a growing alienation between the force, which is 90 percent white, and New York City's growing black and Hispanic population.

Bitterness Voiced

Further resentment among the union's membership arose last spring when jobs and promotions were restored to other city agencies, including the Fire and Sanitation Departments.

"The only time the city remembered us in the last year is when one of us got killed in the line of duty," one officer said bitterly.

As the police failed to regain any of the lost benefits, Mr. McFeeley, in an unexpected move, resigned last May. He was succeeded by Mr. Weaving, a vice president. But almost immediately Mr. McFeeley and three others announced they would challenge Mr. Weaving for the presidency next, May. That's when the election fusillades began.

"No one really has any widespread support," one longtime policeman commented yesterday. "A lot of guys believe McFeeley betrayed them, Weaving hasn't done anything for them and those other candidates are just stirring up trouble to get elected."

Many officers interviewed yesterday said they were opposed to a wildcat strike but would participate in what they described as the spontaneous rallies organized by different groups of officers. Except for "informational picketing" at station houses, the P.B.A. has not authorized the street rallies or demonstrations at Gracie Mansion.

For the last few days, officers who a few months ago muttered oaths at striking municipal hospital workers who used bongo drums and shrill whistles on picket lines outside hospitals have adopted the same noisy tactics.

"It worked for the hospital workers," an off-duty officer said. "The city didn't complain about them. So why all the protests against us when we do it to express our frustrations?"

ing officer of the Manhattan North area had been transferred because, the Commissioner said, the disruptions in his jurisdiction "could have been dealt with in another way." Mayor Beame was said to feel that the protesters should have been dealt with more severely.

The transferred officer, Assistant Chief Charles E. McCarthy, 56 years old, commanded an area that includes the Upper East Side, where off-duty policemen, for three nights in a row, had noisily marched in the vicinity of Gracie Mansion, drawing complaints from hundreds of residents, but no arrests or other action by the uniformed policemen on duty. The pickets were back at Gracie Mansion last night for a quiet, orderly demonstration.

Chief McCarthy, who is 56 years old and now has been assigned to an administrative position in the Office of the Chief of Operations, was not available for comment. He was replaced yesterday in Manhattan North by Assistant Chief Harold Schryver, an executive aide to the chief of the Organized Crime Control Bureau. Chief Schryver is also 56.

The announcements by Commissioner Codd came as city officials met with representatives of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association in an effort to break the deadlock that reportedly has set in over the question of the new work schedules and a 6 percent deferred salary increase for the policemen.

At a news conference yesterday afternoon at City Hall, Mayor Beame reiterated the city's position that it would "immediately" grant policemen a 6 percent wage increase effective last week, as well as a cost-of-living raise, if only the P.B.A. would agree to drop a lawsuit to win the salary increase retroactive to July 1, 1975.

He again emphasized, as he has done several times during the last few days, that the city would not consent to a modification of the proposed work schedules under which policemen would be required to work an additional 10 days each year. These schedules are to go into effect next Sunday.

"We're not going to give up on that," the Mayor said, his voice rising. "The people of this city are entitled to proper police protection."

'Scapegoat' Feeling

But Mayor Beame appeared to inject a conciliatory note when he praised New York City policemen for their "goodwill" during such recent events as the Bicentennial celebrations and the Democratic National Convention. "I am asking them to show the same kind of goodwill and help in bringing about a rapid resolution to the matter," he said.

Late this evening, a spokesman for the P.B.A. said that "some progress" had been made in the negotiations, but he declined to elaborate.

Meanwhile, off-duty policemen continued their picketing yesterday at nearly all of the city's 73 station houses.

They extended their picketing to West 43d Street, between Broadway and Eighth Avenue. About 300 demonstrators, waving placards, gathered in front of The New York Times between 4 P.M. and 6 P.M.

They picketed silently for the most part, but for about 10 minutes they broke into chants.

"New York Times, support us for a change," they chanted, with gusto.

"Commissioner Codd, support us for a change," was another chant.

Despite the burst of chanting, it was a peaceful demonstration, unlike the ones earlier yesterday morning on York Avenue between 86th and 87th Streets, when off-duty policemen in civilian clothes banged on garbage cans, blew on whistles and set off firecrackers.

As the policemen picketed in front of The Times, they were watched by 450 uniformed officers.

"The guys feel they've been the scapegoats of society for a long time," said Philip Caruso, a P.B.A. trustee, who was among the picketers. "We've had to absorb the scorn of society as we did our jobs. Now we feel the city should deal with us equitably.

"The Times is the major force for shaping public opinion in the world," Mr. Caruso said. "We are not here to demonstrate against The Times, but to enlist its support."

There appeared to be considerable camaraderie between the picketers and the uniformed policemen at the scene. One demonstrator beckoned to a uniformed officer and requested a match to light a cigarette, and the officer complied with a smile.

Another uniformed officer said: "We deserve an even break. If I were off-duty, I'd be over there. There's no animosity. We wear the same uniform. Just we're on duty and they're off."

Earlier yesterday, about two dozen women who identified themselves as wives of policemen gathered in front of City Hall. Some of them brought their children; nearly all of them carried placards that denounced the new work schedules.

"These schedules will contribute toward the break-up of our families," one woman said, alluding to the contention of many policemen that the schedules would give them less time at home.

Even as their protest was going on, Justice Edward J. Greenfield of State Supreme Court in Manhattan issued a preliminary injunction restricting the number of off-duty picketers at or near Gracie Mansion, the Mayor's official residence.

The injunction yesterday in effect extended a ban imposed late Monday evening by Justice Hyman Korn under which picketers would be limited to 100 in the daylight hours in front of Gracie Mansion and 50 during the night.

Yesterday, in a 13-page opinion, Justice Greenfield criticized earlier demonstrations of off-duty policemen. And he banned "excessive noise, including but not limited to amplified sound, shouting, banging of pans, honking of horns, and blowing of whistles."

A P.B.A. spokesman declined to comment on the court opinion, but he pointed out again yesterday that his organization had authorized only the picketing in front of the station houses. He again disclaimed any responsibility for the demonstrations that have occurred around the city during the last few days.

These demonstrations have drawn citizen complaints, not only because of the late hours during which they were conducted but also because of the angry gestures of the marchers, many of whom clearly carried guns in holsters.

Demonstrators, Youths and Fans Make Up Mob Scene at Stadium

Elegantly dressed ringsiders stalled in a traffic jam of limousines, teenagers tried to crash the gates and 2,000 whistle-blowing, off-duty police officers turned the area around Yankee Stadium into a scene of mass confusion last night. The high-spirited crowd outside the stadium—fans, policemen and teen-agers—all but upstaged the heavyweight title fight inside.

Through it all a force of 500 uniformed police officers did their best to keep order, but their sympathies were more with their protesting colleagues, who marched around the stadium behind an American flag and a sign reading, "Beame, Take Your Chart and Sit on It."

Sharing their colleagues' feelings against the "Chart"—the heavier work schedule ordered by Mayor Beame—the uniformed officers smiled at the demonstrators, shook their hands, slapped them on the back and cheered them as they surged into the surrounding streets, blocking cars bearing fans to the fight.

Muhammad Ali Is Blocked

At one point, Muhammad Ali's own limousine was surrounded by cheering young fans and a few off-duty officers but after about 15 minutes a team of uniformed officers struggled through and cleared the way.

Another stalled limousine was quickly surrounded by the off-duty demonstrators when the lone passenger, Telly Savalas, was recognized. Mr. Savalas, the star of the "Kojak" television series, was not stalled for long. Smiling broadly, the actor was pulled from the car by the demonstrating officers and carried some 50 feet through the cheering protesters.

Although they ignored instructions to keep out of the streets, the police demonstrators were less of a problem than packs of teen-agers who swarmed over the area, picking pockets—according to complaints from scores of fans—and breaking into cars parked at the stadium garage.

One man, David Ohlaussen of Chicago, said someone had reached around him in the crush and snatched two $50 tickets from his hand.

One youth was arrested in the garage. When he resisted, he was pummeled and kicked by three police officers.

The scene outside the stadium produced a number of sharp contrasts. There were celebrities such as the former heavyweight champion Joe Louis, wearing a brown felt cowboy hat and a long leather coat, and an unidentified woman wearing silver lamé pants tucked into silver lamé boots, both jostling through the crush of teen-agers and demonstartors.

Some distance away an off-duty police officer walked up to a police van, banged on the door, waved to the officers inside and then proceeded to urinate on the grille of the van.

His colleagues cheered when he walked back to their ranks.

Bridge: Swedish Stars Hold a In Play in European C

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

Tournaments in most parts of Europe, unlike those in the United States, are professional in the sense that cash prizes are awarded. However, only a few players emerge with a profit after paying their expenses.

A serious attempt to promote a European circuit, comparable to golf or tennis, has been made in the last few years. Philip Morris promotes and sponsors the European Cup, awarded to the pair with the best overall performance on the circuit. The prizes are substantial, beginning with $4,000 for the winners.

Leaders in the current competition, after three tournaments, are the Swedish international stars Anders Brunzell and Jorgen Lindqvist.

However, they did not compete in the third tournament, which ended 10 days ago in Osteid, Belgium. The winners there, now among several pairs pursuing the Swedes, were two veteran Belgians, Rubin and Spaenhoven.

An Optimistic Slam

On the diagrammed deal, the Belgian winners brought home an optimistic slam when their opponents failed to find the most effective defense. East and West were Yeshayahu Levit and Schmuel Lev, two brilliant young players who are regular members of the Israeli team in international competiton.

Once South had opened one spade, Rubin as North brushed aside the two-club overcall and drove to slam, using Blackwood en route to check for aces.

Levit was now in a peculiar position. He felt sure he could defeat the contract if his partner led a club, but a double would have been the Lightner variety calling for an unexpected lead, certainly not a club. What he needed was an anti-Lightner double, demanding that partner make the normal lead of his own suit.

Levit therefore passed, hoping that his partner would lead a club, but Lev led a spade. The failure to lead a club was not necessarily fatal, but there was a crisis at the second trick when Spaenhoven won in dummy and led the singleton diamond.

Issues in Police Officer Dispute

PARTICIPANTS: The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, which represents 18,000 police officers, and the Beame administration, whose chief negotiator in the talks, which began almost five months ago, has been the First Deputy Mayor John E. Zuccotti.

BACKGROUND: Early last year, a three-man arbitration panel rejected a bid by the P.B.A. to break the pay parity of police officers with firemen and to increase further the existing 10 percent differential above sanitationmen. Instead, the panel recommended that the city's police officers be given the same 8 percent salary increase retroactive to July 1, 1974, and a further 6 percent increase to be effective July 1, 1975, raising the base pay of a police officer from $15,250 to $16,470 retroactive to July 1, 1974, and to $17,458 as of July 1, 1975.

CITY'S ROLE: The Beame administration failed to comply with the award, reportedly because of the deteriorating financial condition of the city. The P.B.A. then won from Justice George Starke of State Supreme Court confirmation of the award in June 1975. On Dec. 30, 1975, Justice Starke granted the P.B.A.'s motion to enforce the judgment it had obtained in State Supreme Court confirming the award. He said that the one-year wage-freeze agreement that the Beame administration had received from various city unions did not apply to a court judgment. On April 26, 1976, the Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court by 5 to 0 upheld Justice Starke, and the city took the case to the Court of Appeals, the state's highest court, which has scheduled a hearing on Oct. 12.

THE ARGUMENTS: The P.B.A. says it wants the city to give police officers the 6 percent raise retroactive to July 1, 1975, and wants a commitment from Mayor Beame to alter new work schedules that are supposed to go into effect Oct. 3 so that each police officer will not lose up to 10 days a year in days off as is now proposed. And the P.B.A. does not want the one-man radio car patrols that Mr. Beame says are necessary because the city cannot hire back the 3,000 laid-off officers. The city insists it will give the P.B.A. a 6 percent raise as of last Sept. 1 as well as a cost-of-living increase—such as received by other city unions that signed last year's one-year wage freeze—only if the P.B.A. agrees to drop its lawsuit for raises retroactive to July 1, 1975. There is mounting disagreement within P.B.A. leadership whether to accept the city's offer. The city has also rejected outright any trimming of the new work schedule.

The Sociologist and Artist

By ANATOLE BROYARD

SOCIOLOGY AS AN ART FORM. By Robert Nisbet. 145 pages. Oxford. $8.95 cloth; $2.50 paper.

"Scientists Marx, Weber, Durkheim and Simmel were without question. But they were also artists, and had they not been artists, had they contented themselves with demonstrating solely what had been arrived at through aseptic problem design, through meticulous verification, and through constructions of theory which would pass muster in a graduate course in methodology of sociology today, the entire world of thought would be much poorer." What Robert Nisbet is pleading for in this passage, and in "Sociology as an Art Form" in general, is a recognition by the sociologist of the artist in himself and of his reciprocal relation to the art of his time. Mr. Nisbet attempts to encourage the sociologist to cultivate his intuition, to give freer play to his imagination, by pointing out that this is precisely what the giants of 19th- and early 20th-century social thought have done.

In Mr. Nisbet's opinion, the "logic of discovery" has too often been subordinated to "the logic of demonstration." "The great harm of the present consecration of method, including theory construction, is that it persuades students that a small idea abundantly verified is worth more than a large idea still insusceptible to textbook techniques of verification." He quotes a science historian, Thomas Kuhn, to the effect that "conventional science" is made up of "answers to what are at bottom only puzzles." In a witticism based on Descartes's fidelity to deduction, Willard Libby, the scientist, calls essential scientific method "rape followed by seduction," which might be translated as an intuitive leap that is later rationalized.

False Absolutes

A faith in "theory" and "system," according to Mr. Nisbet, amounts almost to a superstition among some social scientists. He sees these concepts as often inhibiting the evidence of the senses, as if a sociologist were to evolve his theories in a laboratory, rather than in the immediate context of human behavior. He finds this tendency at its worst in government-sponsored, massively organized research, as when one official agency or another "declares war" on poverty, on discrimination or on some other widespread public problem. It is no more probable, the author says, than that scientific achievement can be "legislated or decreed into being" and that a great novel, symphony or painting can be so created.

In "Sociology as an Art Form," Mr. Nisbet shows how social science deals in themes and styles much as art does. The feeling tone, or zeitgeist, of a culture is its style. The main themes of sociology are the same stuff of which literature is also made: "community, authority, status, the sacred and alienation." Thomas Hardy and George Eliot were certainly concerned with the effects of community on individual lives; Dostoyevski was obsessed with authority; Dickens and Balzac with status; almost all of these writers dealt with the sacred, and a multitude of authors after Dostoyevski with alienation.

Continuing his art-science parallel, Mr. Nisbet points out that, in the 19th century, a time of large-scale social upheaval, sociologists saw human "landscapes." People were perceived "panoramically" as "the masses." Instead of organically related communities, social thinkers observed "aggregates" of isolated individuals, much like the family of acrobats in one of Picasso's blue-period paintings—all of them bemusedly gazing in different directions. Max Weber's notion of "rationalization, the conversion of traditional and personal types of authority into those based upon the rational ends-means schema," settled like a suffocating smog over the social landscape of the new bureaucracy.

The landscape of the city was almost immediately condemned as soul-destroying by artists and sociologists alike, though most of them lived and worked there. The pastoral scene, which Marx dismissed as "the idiocy of rural life" and which certainly contained its own brutal realities, now became a landscape as idyllic as a painting by Constable, proving that sociology was as susceptible to nostalgia as fiction, poetry or painting.

Inheriting Peasantry

In sociological portraiture, Marx was the equal of any novelist in depicting the bourgeois, and Max Weber's bureaucrat might have been a forerunner of Kafka's. The worker, that ambiguous creature, inherited for a while all the alleged virtues of the "innocent" peasant. Social thinkers showed themselves to be unexpectedly Romantic, a trait that persists, still largely unrecognized, in them today.

The last chapter of "Sociology as an Art Form" is called "The Rust of Progress," and here Mr. Nisbet shows, even more vividly than in the preceding chapters, what an artist he is. His account of the price we have paid for progress amounts to a sociological translator of T. S. Eliot's "The Wasteland" or W. B. Yeats's "The Second Coming."

Sociologists, he says, have become no less disillusioned than artists: In fact, many of them seem to have turned into poets in their descriptions of 19th- and 20th-century society. Durkheim writes of "the malady of infinite aspiration"; Simmel says that the modern individual "has too much to hide" to be able to risk true friendship. Perhaps most poetic, and prophetic, of all is Felicite Robert de Lamennais, who wrote this as far back as 1819: "As man moves away from order, anguish presses around him. He is the king of his own misery, a degraded sovereign in revolt against himself, without duties, without bonds, without society. Alone in the midst of the universe, he runs, or rather he seeks to run, into nothingness."

THE WOMAN WARRIOR. Memoirs of a Girlhood Among Ghosts. By Maxine Hong Kingston. 209 pages. Alfred A. Knopf. $7.95.

Those rumbles you hear on the horizon are the big guns of autumn lining up, the howitzers of Vonnegut and Updike and Cheever and Mailer, the books that will be making loud noises for the next several months. But listen: this week a remarkable book has been quietly published; it is one of the best I've read in years.

"The Woman Warrior" is itself anything but quiet. It is fierce intelligence, all sinew, prowling among the emotions. As a portrait of village life in pre-Mao China, it is about as sentimental as Celine: As an account of growing up female and Chinese-American in California, in a laundry of course, it is antinostalgic: it burns the fat right out of the mind. As a dream—of the "female avenger"—it is dizzying, elemental, a poem turned into a sword.

For Maxine Hong Kingston, who was born in Stockton, Calif., there are two sets of ghosts. One set is Chinese legends, traditions, folklore, and always the unwanted girl-child. The other set is Western, American, barbarian, the machine-myths of the Occident. Somewhere in between, like the poet Ts'ai Yen, she is a hostage. And it isn't clear whether there is a place for her to return to, with her songs "from the savage lands."

"The Warrior Woman" trafficks back and forth between sets of ghosts, re-imagining the past with such dark beauty, such precision and anger and sadness, that you feel you have saddled the Tao dragon and see all through the fiery eye of God. Then, suddenly, you are dumped into the mundane, into scenes so carefully observed, so balanced on a knife-edge of hope and humiliation, that you don't know whether to laugh or cry. Other writers come to mind — Garcia Marquez, who also knows how to dress myth up in living flesh: or, thinking about warrior women, Monique Witting, if she had a sense of humor and before she lapsed into balderdash.

But this shuttling, on an electric line of prose, between fantasy and specificity, is wonderfully original. I can't remember when a young writer walked up to and into every important scene in a book and dealt with it outright, as Mrs. Kingston does, without any evasions whatsoever. Or an old writer, for that matter: they have their avoidance tricks. It wearies a writer always having to be in the best form, compromising the least with difficult material, unruly characters. It doesn't weary Mrs. Kingston. And Brave Orchid, the mother to end all mothers, in this book, is more real to me than most of the people I see every day.

Who is Maxine Hong Kingston? Nobody at Knopf seems to know. They have never laid eyes on her. She lives in Honolulu, nicely situated between Occident and Orient, with a husband and small son. She teaches English and creative writing. There is no one more qualified to teach English and creative writing.

SOUTH AFRICA RADIO SAYS ANGOLANS GAIN IN SOUTH

JOHANNESBURG, Sept. 28 (Reuters)—The South African radio said today that Cuban-led Angolan troops had wiped out whole villages in southern Angola and that hundreds of refugees were fleeing for their lives.

Five hundred people have been reported murdered since the weekend by "pillaging" troops, it said. More than 1,000 refugees have swarmed across the border into South-West Africa since the weekend, the state-owned radio added.

In Windhoek, capital of South-West Africa, it was believed that Angolan Government forces were engaged in an operation to clear southern Angola of guerrilla units.

An electric power official in Windhoek said earlier today that South African workers had been withdrawn from the Caluque hydroelectric project in southern Angola, and the plant was now being guarded by Angolan forces.

Britain Will Not Recognize Transkei

LONDON, Sept. 28 (Reuters)—Britain announced today that it would not recognize the black homeland of Transkei when its independence from South Africa is proclaimed on Oct. 26. Foreign Secretary Anthony Crosland said in a statement: "It is clear that the Transkei will not fulfill our well established legal criteria for recognition as an independent state."

A NOVEL BY BRIAN MOORE

"A brilliant account of an extraordinary business success"
—ROBERT MURPHY, Chairman of the Board, Corning Glass Works

Starting in bombed-out Tokyo just after the war, with less than $1,000 capital, Sony has become in less than a generation one of the world's greatest companies. How was it done? Who did it? The Sony story is a compound of courage, ingenuity, planning and vision. It's an absolutely absorbing story, with people as fascinating as any characters in a novel and a host of dramatic incidents that are surprising and moving.

"A most impressive piece of work...It represents a wealth of information and inspiration for business managers and investors."
—ROBERT G. CZERIL, Cyrus J. Lawrence, Inc.

Germany to the Polls

The recent ouster of Sweden's Social Democratic Party after 44 years in power has encouraged conservative forces all over Europe, particularly in West Germany. Helmut Kohl, leader of the opposition Christian Democratic Union, called the outcome in Sweden "a signal for Europe not to deliver our continent over to the Socialist International."

On Sunday, 41 million West German voters will provide a measure of the potency of that "signal" from Stockholm as they decide whether to retain Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's coalition of Social and Free Democrats in Bonn or to restore power to Mr. Kohl's C.D.U. and its Bavarian partner, the Christian Social Union. In fact, this indication of how strongly the conservative tide is flowing in Europe will be very nearly the only issue decided by the Bundestag election, apart from the question of who shall govern for the next four years.

In other words, there are no burning issues in either foreign or home-front policy that divide Mr. Schmidt's forces from those of Mr. Kohl. It has been a campaign waged mostly on differences in emphasis rather than of basic policy, and most observers believe the results will hinge heavily on the reaction of the voters to the personalities of the four principals: the two coalition leaders and their chief partners—Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher for the Free Democrats in the Government tandem and former Defense and Finance Minister Franz-Josef Strauss for the Christian Social Union.

Mr. Kohl's slogan, "Freedom Instead of Socialism," is ludicrous when applied to Chancellor Schmidt, who has dealt harshly with the Social Democratic left wing since he succeeded Willy Brandt in 1974, and has directed Western Europe's most effective anti-inflation and economic recovery programs, using such respectable conservative instruments as budget cutbacks followed by an $8 billion tax cut and lower interest rates. Any other Western European head of government would be happy to face the voters with West Germany's current inflation and unemployment rates—both around 4 percent.

If Mr. Kohl leads the Christian Union parties back to power it will not be because he has effectively attacked the Government on the issues—although Germans with memories of the post-World War I inflation worry more about a 4 percent rate than other Europeans do about one three times as high. It will be rather that Mr. Kohl has correctly perceived a conservative tide and has emerged as a surprisingly effective campaigner whose appeals to traditional middle-class values have evoked enthusiastic responses almost everywhere.

It is obvious that the Government coalition failed to take Mr. Kohl seriously enough at the start of the campaign and has been unsuccessful in its attempt to picture him as simply a provincial Governor of Rhineland-Palatinate who would be out of his depth as Federal Chancellor and a front man for the impetuous, often irresponsible, Mr. Strauss. The Christian Union's liability in the closing days of the campaign is not Mr. Kohl but Mr. Strauss, who has shamelessly hinted that the Social Democrats—many of whom suffered horribly under Hitler—are really "of the same family" as the Nazis.

Despite Mr. Strauss's excesses, Bonn's partners and allies have little to worry about in this election of the eighth Bundestag. Anchored securely in the West, the Federal Republic will continue to play major roles in NATO and the European Community and, however the election comes out, the next Government will continue—cautiously and without illusions—the effort, launched by Willy Brandt, to build more normal relationships with the Soviet bloc. These certainties help explain why other Western governments are taking Bonn's current election campaign very much in stride.

Chaos on Arms

The controversy over the sale to Saudi Arabia of 650 air-to-ground Maverick missiles illustrates the grave risks that flow from this country's reckless arms trade with the rest of the (non-Communist) world. In the absence of a carefully designed policy of restraint governing the export of sophisticated weapons, the United States is following the chaotic course that was set when President Nixon on an overnight stopover in Teheran in 1972 told Iran in a spur-of-the-moment gesture that it could buy virtually anything it wanted.

That impetuous Presidential commitment unleashed what can only be called the inundation with American arms of an unstable and inflammable region. The latest order from Saudi Arabia, which has already bought $6 billion worth of American arms and recently has outstripped the dangerously excessive Iranian purchases, is only the latest wave in a continuing tide. The Congressional effort to block this particular missiles order could hardly be described as a move to strip a relatively friendly Middle-Eastern nation of its capacity to defend itself against outside attack; it would be more accurate to say that this was an attempt to apply some needed controls to the increasingly dangerous proliferation of American weapons in the Middle East.

Reports of behind-the-scenes threats prove, despite denials from official Saudi Arabian and American sources, that uncontrolled American arms sales have exposed the United States needlessly to international blackmail. In its frantic—and yesterday successful—attempt to head off the Congressional move to block the Mavericks' delivery, the Ford Administration leaked dark hints that Saudi Arabia's displeasure (already incurred by a toughening Congressional stand against the Arabs' effort to impose an illegal secondary boycott in the United States) might trigger another oil embargo.

The spongelike American policy on arms exports effectively takes decision-making out of Washington's hands and delivers it to foreign governments in coalition with their own and American special-interest lobbies. Under such circumstances, Congressional action is a natural response to abdication by the White House of its fundamental responsibility to control the arms trade wherever it threatens to stimulate international conflict in troubled areas of the world.

Lynching

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is engaged in a desperate effort to raise $1.6 million to post as a bond in order to appeal a $1.2 million judgment entered against it by a court in Mississippi. It is a sad and undeserved plight for one of America's most distinguished institutions.

In the 67 years since it was established by a biracial group of citizens who were troubled by the 1908 racial riots, it fought against lynching when it was common for scores of blacks to be lynched annually; it fought losing and dispiriting legal battles when Earl Warren was still a young man; it began integrating ballot boxes and schools all over the nation in the 50's and its Oklahoma City youth group conducted sit-ins two years before the famous student movement began in North Carolina in 1960.

During the 60's, in addition to its own direct programs in the field, the N.A.A.C.P. put up bonds for other black activists who were jailed all over the South, worked quietly with the executive branch in developing civil rights policy and lobbied effectively for new laws up on Capitol Hill. One of its direct-action programs during those years was a boycott against merchants of Port Gibson, Miss., who refused to give jobs to blacks. One of those merchants was elected to the State Legislature, and was instrumental in the passage, after the boycott was under way, of the law under which the suit was brought which threatens to squeeze the life out of the N.A.A.C.P.

Now, a decade later, while it is still reeling from the requirement of another Mississippi court that it post a bond in excess of a quarter of a million dollars in an unrelated case, a chancery court judge imperiled this rich tradition of social struggle by finding that the merchants had been damaged to the tune of $1.2 million. Unless the organization is able to find several hundred thousand dollars by the end of this week, the nation will have witnessed the judicial equivalent of an old-fashioned Mississippi lynching.

The Plans for Gateway

It took vision, in Congress and out of it, to conceive of the Gateway National Recreation Area, that remarkable complex of parks and seashores projected as a unified whole stretching from Sandy Hook to Queens. Once legislated, it needed vision to make specific plans for this first Federal park in an urban setting—the most concentrated urban setting in the country.

Six months ago the National Park Service offered the public three options and asked for advice on which way to go. It took advice from expert consultants as well as from the general public and has come up with a draft plan that is imaginative, promising—and expensive.

To appreciate what the Park Service has done, one has to bear in mind that Gateway presented it with problems wholly absent from its experience. In the great national parks of the West the problem has been to expose the public—that part of it fortunate enough to afford the travel—to huge areas of largely untouched lands, tracts of forest and unspoiled streams. The emphasis was, as it ought to have been, on keeping the parks as virginal and free of organized recreation facilities as possible, an objective to which the Park Service unfortunately has not always adhered in recent years.

With Gateway, however, the objective is educational and recreational, a necessarily organized exposure of a large population to coastal areas, at the doorstep of the megalopolis, that are still relatively intact or that can be restored.

Perhaps surprising to those from outside the metropolitan region, significant tracts bordering on New York harbor still retain their natural integrity—Sandy Hook's wild strip of ocean front, for one example, and the unique bird sanctuary in Jamaica Bay for another. The Park Service's plan would maintain their integrity while elsewhere setting up complexes of an educational as well as recreational nature—so-called "Gateway Villages" which would serve as eye-openers to the wonders of ecology.

In addition, beaches would be rehabilitated, trails would be maintained, trained guides provided, and centers established for lectures, music and folk dancing. The Park Service, working with the city, would be responsible for transporting people to and from the string of gems that make up Gateway and adorn New York harbor.

There are still major obstacles ahead. The city has to do far more than it has yet indicated to help assure the needed transportation system. Congress has to move from its early authorization of $90 million to actual appropriations of $300 million if Gateway is to measure up to the plans now drawn up for it.

But those plans have at last taken shape. If they materialize, the results would do more for the city's reviving spirit than any project or combination of projects now in sight.

Housing: The President's Plan

To the Editor:

Your lead editorial of Sept. 19 says that President Ford "called for [housing] subsidies that would substantially reduce the required downpayment on homes." The editorial also suggests that the President's proposal contradicts his veto of the 1975 emergency housing act.

This inaccurately describes both the President's housing proposals and their relationship to his veto.

The President has not called for any subsidies.

Rather, he asks for a reduction of up to 53 percent in the required downpayments on homes purchased with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration. He proposes, too, lower initial mortgage payments. The payments would go up for a decade when a home buyer's earning power could be expected to rise as well, and cover the payments more easily.

Neither initiative calls for a subsidy. Each offers a federally guaranteed loan by a private lender to a private home buyer. There is no budget outlay.

Congress, however, did call for a subsidy. In the vetoed version of the 1975 bill, the taxpayer would have paid the difference between 6 percent and prevailing mortgage interest rates of more than 9 percent on home mortgages of middle-income home buyers.

The President's veto was sustained with the support of the most knowledgeable Democratic members of Congress, including Housing Subcommittee Chairman Lud Ashley of Ohio, who characterized the vetoed bill as "a turkey that could never fly."

The bill would have used tax dollars to force down interest rates for many who could afford to pay more and to force up interest rates for everyone else. It would have fanned inflation.

What has happened since demonstrates the wisdom of President Ford's economic leadership as well as his veto of that "turkey that could never fly."

The supply of mortgage credit has increased. The taxpayer is saved another layer of bureaucracy. The rate of inflation has been halved. New housing starts have risen dramatically.

Report From Redwood Country

To the Editor:

My family and I traveled by car to Washington and Oregon this summer, to see the land. We marveled at the tranquil beauty of the mountains, covered with snow, often hidden by their own clouds, surrounded by tremendous stands of evergreens, and trembled at the endless encroachment of roads, structures and tourists, including ourselves.

On every road, it seemed, there were logging trucks, tractors with double trailers hauling redwoods and huge trees from some improvised dirt road to other centrally located fabrication and distribution points. From early morning to sundown, the trucks raced up and down the secondary roads we traveled, passing every car in sight while fully loaded and going even faster on the return trip with empty trailers double-stacked on the tractor, to get back to the cutting stand for another load and another trip.

Where are all the trees coming from, and where are they going?

"Sierra Club Kiss My Axe" reads the bumper sticker. "Preserving our natural forests is for the unemployed and for the wealthy," reads the local editorial page. When the trees are all gone, where do we get new ones? No problem, say the loggers, we plant new ones, like corn or potatoes, and in a few hundred years they'll be just as before.

But there is a problem. We traveled by car to Washington and Oregon this summer and saw (before the loggers became smart enough to hide their cuts from the auto traveler) acres of stumps of huge trees, blanched by the years, without a seedling in sight.

I am convinced that only an aroused public, from outside the area, can offer any resistance to the saws and the trucks. I have also learned through the years that trying to stop them everywhere can at least stop them somewhere.

What are our priorities? Where are they going with our heritage in Redwood Country just south of Oregon in California? And where is anyone building houses today?

The Medicaid 'Monster'

To the Editor:

The recent furor created by Senator Frank Moss' investigation of Medicaid underscores the efforts of the county executives in the State of New York who have been seeking urgently required reforms in the administration of the program. We have repeatedly sought support for reform from the public, the Legislature and the Governor.

Perhaps now, with the Senate's report documenting Medicaid's administrative confusion and apparent widespread fraud, there is an opportunity to take decisive action. Elected officials should be appalled at our state's lack of Medicaid management controls. We should respond to the electorate's legitimate revulsion at these abuses by cleaning our own house.

The New York State county executives have called for a special session of the Legislature to enact cost ceilings and administrative systems which are basic to solving our Medicaid problems.

Suffolk County, which I represent, along with every other responsible jurisdiction across the state, is facing disastrous choices due to the Medicaid monster. In municipal budgets being prepared at this time we must decide between layoffs of essential personnel, increased property taxes or both. We must choose such alternatives knowing that the delivery of health services to the needy will not be improved by ballooning costs but is actually threatened by the public outrage at loss of police protection, fire services, recreation facilities, consumer assistance, etc., which will be forfeited to fund uncontrolled Medicaid expenses.

Responsive elected leadership must now demonstrate the courage and common sense to tackle and resolve the Medicaid fiasco in New York State.

Of Harriman's Advice

To the Editor:

In your Sept. 21 report of Averell Harriman's visit with Leonid Brezhnev, Mr. Harriman is quoted as observing, with respect to our election campaigns, "I'm not sure I was able to persuade him that everything that was said [during a campaign] was of no importance." Since Mr. Harriman speaks with authority, as an experienced politician, I assume that we Americans should be similarly persuaded. Thus there would appear to be little point to the electorate's paying any heed to the rhetoric of the campaign or to the arguments set forth in the "great debates." Perhaps this will explain the prediction that less than half of the eligible voters will cast a ballot in November. Can our democracy survive this attitude of our politicians?

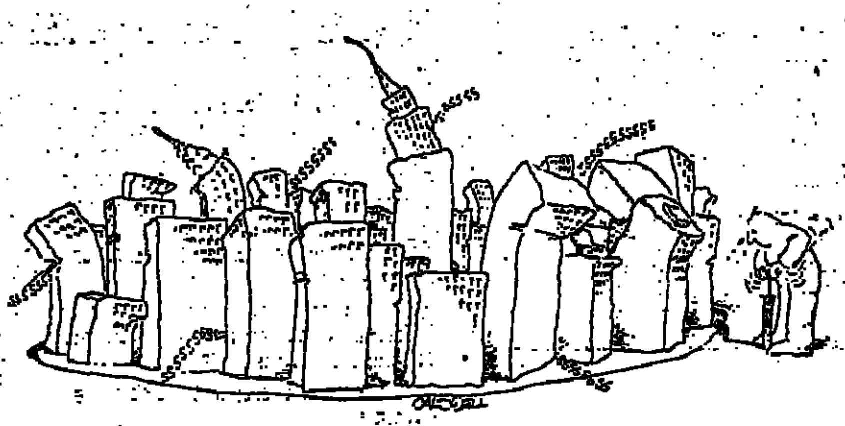
Bootstrapping It Here

By Anthony M. Scotto



The disastrous economic decline of New York City continues.

Distracted perhaps by a Bicentennial exuberance, or lulled by the euphoria of fiscal solvency, many New Yorkers believed that the extraordinary sacrifices of the last year would somehow make everything right.

But new Labor Department employment figures are depressing. Almost 350,000 people are out of work in the city. Unemployment has risen to 10.8 percent, the highest in the state. Fewer people are working in the city than at any time since the end of World War II. We have lost 600,600 jobs since 1969, including one-third of all manufacturing employment. Still the economic base continues to deteriorate.

This is the situation in spite of the unprecedented changes of the last year. Almost 60,000 municipal employees are out of work. We began a new school year with understaffed classrooms. Senior-citizen and day-care centers, hospitals and health-care centers are shut. The 130-year tradition of free tuition at our City University is gone.

While these painful cuts were being made, there seemed a sense that things would change. There was a feeling that, if we pared excess and eliminated waste, that if we did what we had to do to avoid bankruptcy, we would be rewarded.

The harsh reality is otherwise. Last year's struggle may not have been worth it. The cuts of 1975-76 may have to be repeated again and we could end as an urban Appalachia.

There are innumerable causes for our problems. Municipal inefficiency and bureaucratic incompetence are part of them. It is also true that 40-year-old Federal policies have short-changed this city and region.

The governors of the Northeast are demanding that the Federal Government correct these balances. But regional reform will be a long time coming and, meanwhile, we can't become fiscal junkies passively waiting for the next Federal fix. Continued economic decline is not irreversible. There is plenty we can do for ourselves.

We must invest public funds so that they will generate recurring revenues. We must shore up traditional sources of productive work and wealth at the same time that we develop new sources of financial growth. Some argue that every spare dime should be used to again fund programs that have been cut. I disagree. We need day-care and senior-citizens centers and public housing, but most of all we need people working at productive jobs.

There are three opportunities that we can move on that could have positive effects on our local economies. They would create thousands of jobs and create sources of recurring public revenues. They would not require the use of any current city funds.

1. The convention center should be built.

Felix G. Rohatyn has suggested using Municipal Assistance Corporation money to finance a new convention center. It's a good idea. Tourism is our second-largest industry. It directly and indirectly employs 400,000 people. Sixteen million visitors last year spent $1.675 billion, which generated almost $100 million in city and state taxes. All of this in spite of the fact that we do not have a major convention center.

The construction of the center would put more than 5,000 unemployed workers back on the job, and $150 million in new wages would be generated during the two and a half years of construction. Almost 25,000 new jobs could be generated by increased convention volume.

2. The Westway should be constructed.

This replacement for the West Side Highway could create 194 new acres around the abandoned Manhattan waterfront. An underground interstate highway would carry traffic out of sight and hearing. A 114-acre park above would give New Yorkers access to the waterfront. Another 71 acres would be available for housing and commercial use.

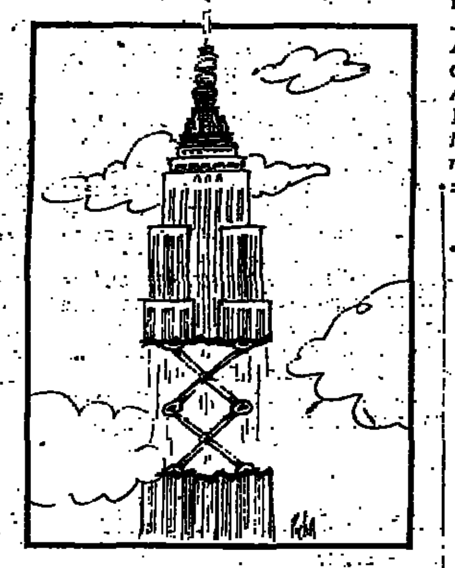
Ninety percent of the rehabilitation costs would come from the Federal Government and the remainder from the state. It would generate thousands of jobs. The city would be paid $100 million as owner of the right-of-way.

3. If President Ford does not veto an appropriation for the Public Works Employment Act, New York City should receive about $115 million.

These new monies should be used to stabilize and strengthen those areas of our economy that would provide the stability for long-term recovery.

We should use some of these funds to begin rehabilitation of the overland-rail route that would give us access to the markets west of the Hudson. We should start the Red Hook containerport, in Brooklyn. We should revitalize the existing industrial and commercial areas throughout the city, repairing the streets, developing better traffic flow. In short, we should make these areas competitive.



New York City remains one of the foremost industrial and commercial cities in the nation. It continues to outrank all others in the variety and value of its total production, but it will continue to lose status unless we mobilize to help ourselves.

Anthony M. Scotto, a vice president of the International Longshoremen's Association and president of Local 1814, Brooklyn, is a member of the New York State Economic Development Board.

The Hungry Heart

By William V. Shannon

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—The heart has hungers that the real world cannot satisfy. They exist independent of politics, but politics cannot be fully comprehended without taking account of them.

Beyond the boundaries of the busy, everyday world with its reasonableness, impersonal rules and dry practicality, a person may sense the existence of and yearn for a different kind of reality, another realm of experience. This hunger takes many forms. It can be the political radical's dream of a truly just and humane society, the religious mystic's reaching out for the unknowable, or the romantic's deciphering of the universe in the flight of a seagull or the pattern of a snowflake.

It can be the tortured vision of a madman, a Van Gogh or a Blake; it can be the thunderous music first heard only in the mind of a deaf genius like Beethoven.

But genius is not required. Ordinary people, too, in their workaday lives experience moments of Epiphany and "intimations of immortality."

Throughout past ages, human beings transcended reality and the limitations of their own lives through religion and, importantly though less commonly, through art. But for many Americans today, religion is a dead or declining force in their lives and for society as a whole, religion has far less authority than it once did. Art still speaks to many, but art—no longer bulwarked by religious faith or classical tradition—reflects back to modern man his own anxiety and feared sense of nothingness.

In more modest and specific ways, recent history has mocked and frustrated the secular efforts of many Americans to give their lives a meaning beyond mere self-gratification. The reformist ideals of liberals for orderly change and gradual improvement have stumbled against the daunting reality of black slums going up in flames from Watts to Detroit to Newark and of promising programs like Medicaid and day-care centers stalemated in scandal and controversy. Who now seeks the New Frontier or celebrates a Great Society?

Conservatives who believed in a social vision of stability and prudence and integrity have been humiliated by the Nixon and Agnew scandals. Radicals who preached revolution in the 60's are wearing vests in the 70's —or pottering about on backroad farms in Vermont.

The cold warrior's dream of an American-led crusade to save the third world from Communism by economic assistance and military force died with the last Green Beret, somewhere in Vietnam. Even the businessman, that most self-confident and extroverted of Americans, has had his sense of himself dimmed by corporate corruption and giant bankruptcies.

From Mississippi to Vietnam, from Berkeley to Watergate, all crusades have furled their flags and all ideals seem dead or dishonored.

When secular dreams die, the result is disillusionment and political apathy. When an unchurched people turn away from religion, they do not lose their sense of the transcendental and their secret hungers. Instead, cults and fads rush in. This is the Age of Aquarius, the time of Esalen and yoga and acupuncture, the day of consciousness-raising and the Reverend Moon. Most of these popular interests are hardly encouraging signs for any society. Astrologers were popular at the court of Louis XVI and itinerant holy men at the court of Nicholas II.

This national election is thus being conducted amid many evidences of fatalism and apathy. It is a contest for the leadership of a society that is politically disillusioned and culturally in disarray. The Republicans could have gambled on the new leadership of Ronald Reagan and the energizing fervor of his neo-fundamentalist following, but in the end they put down the Reagan challenge as if it were an unseemly proxy fight against management. Gerald Ford's stodginess and complacency meet apathy on its own terms. His is the politics of hibernation.

The Democrats did gamble. Jimmy Carter is a newcomer. Politically, he summons the nation not to a new crusade but to a restoration of authority and a revival of mutual trust—the indispensable prerequisites to the revival of a creative politics. The risk for Mr. Carter is that they are essentially conservative themes, unfamiliar to the liberal constituency in his party.

Culturally, Mr. Carter would if elected be a powerful symbol of an old, conservative religion. Unlike the fashionable pseudo-religions that profess to offer personal fulfillment and peace of mind, he bespeaks the tradition of the Old Testament with its harsh insights on human nature and human conflict and of the New Testament with its many demands for self-sacrifice and self-discipline. He would represent a return to old roots, a symbolic return that might have subtle and incalculable effects in altering the national mood and outlook for the better.

But can the leader of a predominantly liberal party win by stressing conservative themes? Does the Age of Aquarius want a Bible-minded President in the White House?

On the Gutman Thesis

By Nathan Glazer

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Herbert G. Gutman has performed an invaluable service with his meticulous research on the black family under slavery and in freedom, which formed three articles on this page last week. The black family, his research shows, was remarkably stable under slavery and after migration to the North—at least until 1925, when his detailed studies end.

He writes that "on the eve of the Great Depression, the emerging black ghetto was not filled with broken and disorganized families." We are in his debt for radically reshaping our understanding of the black past. But if Professor Gutman is right, one has to ask: What happened? And what bearing does this rewriting of black history have for social policy today?

For something quite serious did happen. The stable black family that Mr. Gutman describes did not survive into the 1960's and the 1970's.

In 1975, 35.3 percent of black families were headed by females, up from 23.7 percent in 1965 (comparable white figures, 10.5 percent, up from 9 percent in 1965).

Only 56 percent of black children were living with both parents in 1974, down from 71 percent in 1965 (comparable white figures were 88 percent, down from 91 percent).

Something happened.

While it is perfectly proper for a historian to stop in 1925 and report to us that despite the terrible conditions of discrimination, persecution, low income and poor jobs that we know prevailed for blacks after freedom, the black family remained remarkably stable and durable, we are left with a perplexing question: Why, then, in the decade after 1965, when blacks moved massively into white-collar jobs, into better-paying jobs, into colleges and universities, when discrimination declined in the South and North and was attacked by strong national legislation and strong administrative action, did the indices of family stability turn markedly adverse?

In his forthcoming book, "The Black Family in Slavery & Freedom, 1750-1925," Professor Gutman devotes a few pages to this matter—but too few, and writes, surprisingly, that there is no "reason to believe that the poor black family crumbled in the near half century that has passed since the onset of the Great Depression." Mr. Gutman wants us to believe that just as the black family was stable under slavery—and we accept his statistics and analysis—it is doing fine now.

But this is a hard position to maintain at a time when, for example, a black leader such as Jesse Jackson insists that the high rate of illegitimacy among blacks is indeed a serious problem. Despite the wonderful adaptive power of the black family, this cannot be a good thing for the mothers or the children.

One odd conclusion seems to come out of the Gutman research. In a sense, the South is rehabilitated in its treatment of the blacks, and responsibility, strangely enough, for the black condition shifts to the North. But we are not told what happened in the North to produce the conditions that we see among poor blacks.

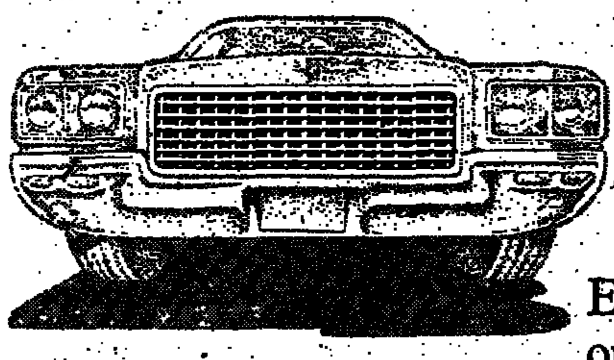
Mr. Gutman refers briefly to a new "Enclosure Movement"—the mechanization of Southern agriculture that deprived Southern rural blacks of their economic function and contributed to their mass movement to the North—and to a new "Poor Law" — that is, welfare.

But can this explain why poor blacks should have been so adversely affected by the move North? Blacks were as often unemployed and underemployed in the Southern cotton fields as in Northern cities. And how could the higher welfare payments of the North lead to such poor results for the black family?

Mr. Gutman doesn't say, but seems to be telling us that the black family could survive slavery in the South, and the harsh adversity that followed in South and North, but could not survive, as well, the more supportive climate of the last few decades.

But what does that suggest that we do about the social policies, such as welfare, that impinge on such large segments of the Northern black population?

Nathan Glazer is professor of education and sociology at Harvard and author of "Affirmative Discrimination." He was invited by the Op-Ed page to comment on the three-part series of articles by Herbert G. Gutman that appeared last week.



Can a grille improve your mileage?

Everything that saves weight on a car helps to save fuel.

This grille, made of Lustran® ABS plastic by Monsanto, is a good example of how much weight can be saved in just a single place.

It weighs 4 pounds. The one it replaces weighs 28 pounds.

You'd never guess it, because it looks just like metal. Lustran ABS can be given a bright mirror finish that doesn't crack or peel. And with a textured finish, it's the right material for interior kick panels, gearshift consoles and dashboard inserts.

To save even more weight, Monsanto makes Vydyne® R, a mineral reinforced nylon plastic that replaces heavy die-cast metal.

It adds up to significant fuel savings, when you consider the number of cars using these new materials. And it adds up to quite a demand.

We're doing all we can to meet it, by producing light weight by the ton at Monsanto the science company.

S. Plywood than for a glass company.

One tenant who thought the building was worth waiting for is the accounting firm of Ernst & Ernst.

"Our original decision to go in was based on the fact that we felt the Hancock building was going to be the finest in the city," said Paul Smith, the partner in charge of the Boston office, "and nothing has changed our opinion on that."

But Hancock did lose some tenants. Merrill Lynch Pierce, Fenner & Smith, for example, signed up early but moved to another new building last year.

It will be the courts that will assess the blame on Hancock's disasters. Right now, the architect, I. M. Pei & Partners; the glass manufacturer, Libbey-Ownes-Ford, and several contractors are all blaming one another, and John Hancock is suing them all. But what is unfortunate is that the tower will probably be long remembered as the building whose glass windows fell out, for now that Hancock stands complete it is obvious it is deserving of fairer treatment.

The Hancock tower is Boston's finest high-rise structure and the best piece of skyscraper design to have come from the office of I.M. Pei & Partners.

The all-glass skyscraper is a form that has, appropriately, been called into question of lat for social and economic reasons: it is clearly extravagant to build and maintain. But there remains powerful esthetic potential in this form, as this building shows, and if the typical client cannot afford to develop this potential to the extent done here, that is all the more reason to be grateful that the Hancock company chose to cast itself in the role of Medici. The building, even if such a series of disasters had not befallen it, would not have been cheap, but it is good.

The design was the work of Henry N. Cobb, a senior Pei partner, and it represents an attempt, Mr. Cobb says, to defer to the tower's surroundings—which include Henry Hobson Richardson's incomparable Trinity Church on one side, the elegant Copley Plaza Hotel on the other, and Charles McKim's Boston Public Library across Copley Square. To insert a 790-foot high tower into such a stately building grouping is impossible without setting into motion certain drastic change, but Mr. Cobb has kept the visual upset to a minimum.

The New York Times/Arthur Grace

Shape Defines Corner

The tower is a parallelogram, with its narrow end facing Copley Square and firmly defining the square's corner. A broader base fills out one side of the site, and on the other side the parallelogram drops to the ground, leaving open a small triangular plaza that permits a vista to the side of Trinity Church.

The parallelogram shape makes the tower appear from certain angles, including from Copley Square, as a vast, two-dimensional plane rather than as a volume, an effect that further lessens the impact of its bulk. A notch runs from top to bottom in each narrow side, cutting the sense of bulk even more.

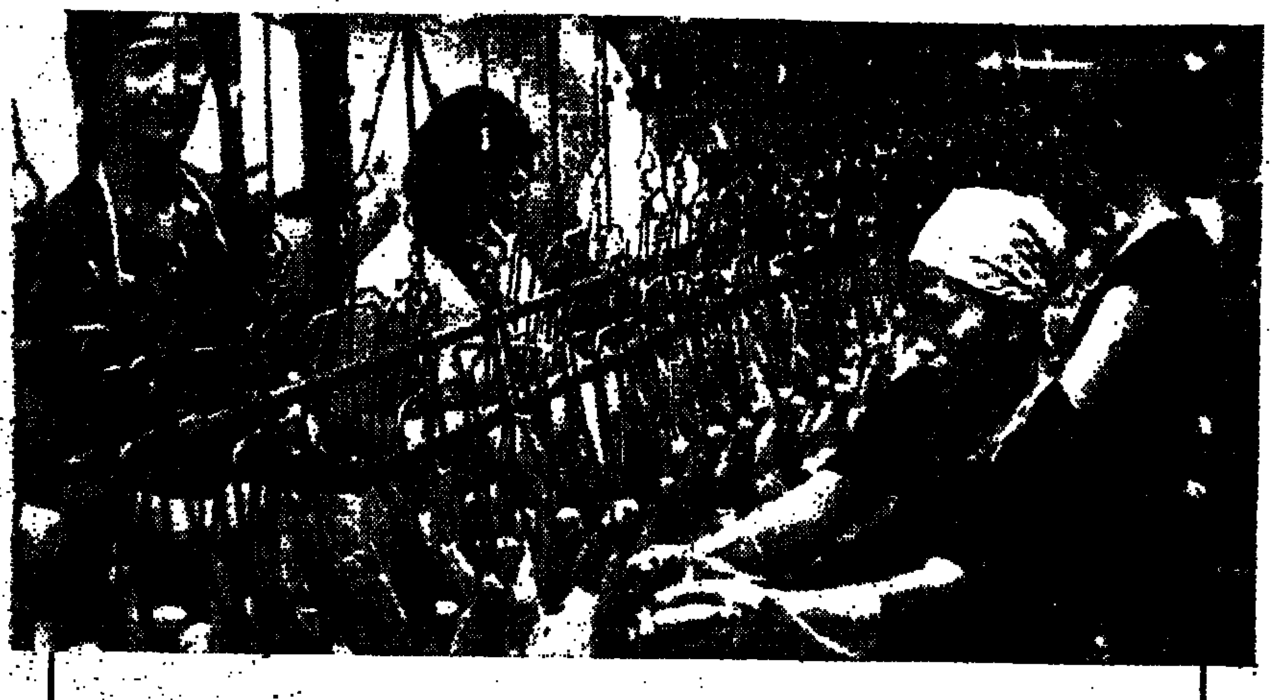
The greenish-blue glass curtain wall (a different kind of glass but almost identical in appearance to the earlier model that took to the air) is reflective. There is one panel on each floor, thus clearly articulating the building's scale.

To provide a more neutral background to Trinity Church, the curtain wall runs uninterrupted to the ground, the opposite approach to that of earlier skyscrapers that emphasized base, shaft and cornice. There are some unnecessarily decorative dome-like canopies, but otherwise, just sheer wall from ground to sky.

Not an Entire Success

The building's well-intentioned deference to Trinity Church is far from entirely successful, however. The shape is intelligently conceived, but the contrast between the weightless appearance of the glass tower and the utter solidity of Richardson's church seems to emphasize the differences between the two buildings. And the reflections of the church in the glass tend to make the church look more like an object and less like a building in an urban context.

Still, it is impossible not to feel that the real villain at Copley Square is not Hancock but the design of the square itself—or rather, the redesign as completed by Sasaki, Dawson & DeMay in 1968. It is a bad, pretentious imitation of a European piazza, almost without trees in a place that desperately needs greenery to give it cohesion.



Asians and Arkansas Hill Folk Ease Mutual Misgivings

The New York Times/Gary Settle

By ROY REED

Special to The New York Times

GRANNIS, Ark., Sept. 26—Mrs. Floy Lane, the storekeeper, has learned to like Oriental-style alimentary paste, which she cooks into a soup.

She has not tried the dried baby squid that also sits on her grocery shelves now. "I'm not going to, either," she says firmly.

The newcomers from Southeast Asia, for their part, have not got much past potatoes in their effort to adjust to the foods of their new home.

"I just can't eat American food," Hien Duc Nguyen, the teacher, confesses with a grin.

Cautious, selective acceptance has been the rule on both sides since 238 Vietnamese refugees moved here last November and instantly doubled the population of this western Arkansas hill town.

Mobile Homes for Asians

Whatever happens in the years ahead, it appears that this community will never again be the same. The coming of the Asians is forcing the white hill people of Polk County to confront an old, deep fear.

Polk is one of many traditionally all-white counties of the hill South that never allowed Negroes to move in. It was always handled unofficially. Self-appointed vigilantes simply collared any black person who happened along and told him not to let the sun set on him in that county.

Only recently, a black cook imported by a white family near here was frightened away by white men who told her to move on.

A few Mexicans and Indians have lived in Grannis in recent years. Most came from nearby Oklahoma and Texas to work in Clift Lane's poultry processing plant, a sprawling factory that sits a few yards from the new post office and across route 71 from his mother's store.

Most of those outsiders had drifted away by last fall. Mr. Lane, always looking for a steady labor force, went to the refugee relocation center at Fort Chaffee, 100 miles north of here, and brought home 238 South Vietnamese. He established them in a mobile home park at the edge of town and put most of the adults to work in the plant.

About half the Vietnamese ("Vietnese," many here call them) have left, most to join relatives in New Orleans and Oklahoma City. Part of the slack has been taken up by about 80 Laotians who arrived in the summer.

The population of Grannis is now nearly half Asian. The native Americans are ahead by about 250 to 200.

Some natives speak openly of anti-Asian prejudice. The prejudice reportedly was fanned by an outbreak of thefts in the community after the Asians arrived. Several Vietnamese

Apparently he had been fired by an enthusiastic crowd response to tougher language in Portland, Ore., and he bore down on Mr. Ford's admitted golfing association with a lobbyist from United States Steel Company. [1:1.]

President Ford's spokesman at the White House said that as a Congressman Mr. Ford had been a golfing guest of a number of major corporations besides United States Steel. He said that Mr. Ford had stopped accepting such invitations after he became Vice President in 1973. He emphasized that Mr. Ford felt he had lived up to the spirit of the House Code of Ethics of 1968 forbidding acceptance of gifts of monetary value from anyone with an interest in current legislation. [22:1-2.]

A new West Point panel of educators and former military men appointed by the Secretary of the Army met there to open a final inquiry into the cheating scandal at the Military Academy. They were asked to provide an independent analysis of the underlying causes and recommend improvements in the cadet honor system. [16:1-2.]

Metropolitan

Defying a court order, hundreds of off-duty police officers blocked traffic near Yankee Stadium and encouraged roving youths to crash the gates to the Muhammad Ali-Ken Norton heavyweight championship fight. The off-duty men protesting new work schedules and deferred raises were frequently cheered by officers on duty despite orders to arrest disorderly demonstrators. No arrests were reported. The scene was called chaotic. [1:1.]

Under new fund-raising laws limiting the size of campaign gifts, Senator James L. Buckley has had to spend nearly 60 percent of the $1.2 million he raised last month on fund-raising. The Republican-Conservative candidate for re-election has received about half this money from out-of-state backers. His Democratic challenger, Daniel P. Moynihan, had a better return of $10 for each $3 spent on the solicitation of funds by mail. [1:2-3.]

New York State's welfare budget faces an overrun of $120 million to $175 million if welfare costs go on increasing at the current rate, threatening the state's precariously balanced budget. Governor Carey ordered his Social Services Commissioner to work with county executives in preparing new legislative proposals to counteract the rise. His Budget Division said most of the overrun occurred upstate for unemployed persons living alone. [1:5.]

Business/Finance

The pound sterling fell again until buying by the Bank of England steadied it, at $1.64, an all-time low. Prime Minister James Callaghan's call for self-sacrifice in a speech to the Labor Party conference had not stopped the slide. Denis Healey, Chancellor of the Exchequer, canceled his departure for a Commonwealth meeting in Hong Kong and remained to face the critical situation in London. [1:4-5.]

Indicators are sharply down after 17 consecutive monthly increases, the Department of Commerce reported in its index for August of future economic trends. The 1.5 percent drop in the leading indicators fueled the recent judgment of some economists that there is a worrisome "pause" in the current economic recovery. Others were not upset. [61:6.]

Wall Street fears of an economic downturn sent stock prices into their worst drop in four months. The Dow Jones industrial average declined 18.20 points to 994.93. Some analysts ascribed the slide to investor nervousness about further improvement and doubted that it meant a material flattening in the recovery of the economy. [61:5-6.]

Bond prices reacted upward, and the Treasury Department was able to sell $2.5 billion of five-year notes at an average rate of 7.08 percent, better than the Government had expected. [62:3-5.] Cocoa futures moved to a new high of $1.20 4/10 before dropping to close at $1.16¼. [72:3-4.]

Quotation of the Day

"This cosy world which we were told would go on forever, where full employment would be guaranteed by a stroke of the Chancellor's pen, cutting taxes and deficit spending, is gone." —Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain, speaking at his Labor Party's conference. [69:2.]

CORRECTION

An article in yesterday's Times about the negotiations between the Metropolitan Museum and the Egyptian Government over the "Treasures of Tutankhamen" show reported that the museum had made a $2.8 million "guarantee" in return for the exhibition's tour here. Actually, the museum did not guarantee the money but told the Egyptians they could expect it from a private donor and sales of reproductions.

Marion B. Folsom Is Dead at 82; Architect of Social Security Act

By ROBERT E. TOMASSON

Marion B. Folsom, the chief drafter in the 1930's of the nation's Social Security laws and later Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Eisenhower Administration, died yesterday at his home in Rochester. He was 82 years old.

In January 1969, Mr. Folsom retired as a director of the Eastman Kodak Company, with which he had been associated except for his periods of Government service, since 1914 after his graduation from the Harvard School of Business.

From a background in rural Georgia, Mr. Folsom became the chief architect of the Social Security Act of 1935 and of later changes in the law that was to affect virtually all Americans. From Democrat to independent to Republican, he was a remarkable example of a man who underwent profound changes in his political and social thinking over the years, and who spoke about his changes with candor as being dictated by changing times.

Forceful Arguments

In 1929, just before the Depression, he wrote a forceful magazine article maintaining that old-age and other benefits was the sole responsibility of private industry, similar to a plan he had established at Eastman Kodak.

But as businesses, by the thousands foundered in the Depression, he just as forcefully argued that the Federal Government could not stand by while the economic security of milions turned to personal dispair.

On two occasions while he headed the Department of Health, Education and Welfare from 1955 to 1958, he testified before Congressional committees in favor of private, voluntary plans to provide medical care for the elderly.

In January 1961, he told the White House conference on the aging that then President-elect John F. Kennedy's plan to help the elderly pay their medical bills through Social Security was "the logical plan."

Diffidence and Confidence

Asked at the time about his changed view, Mr. Folsom replied with his characteristic combination of diffidence and confidence, that he was convinced that private agencies were not realistically equipped to handle medical expenses because of rising costs and increasing longevity.

Marion Bayard Folsom was born on Nov. 23, 1893, and grew up in McRae, Ga., which was founded by the grandfather of his wife, the former Mary Davenport, whom he married in 1918.

When he was about 12 years old, he went to work in the family's general store, where he promptly set about revising his father's bookkeeping system, an organizational trait that was to become his trademark. President Eisenhower said of Mr. Folsom, "He's the kind of a man who makes my job easy."

He was graduated with honors from the University of Georgia in 1912. Two years later, he received a graduate degree with distinction from the Harvard Business School.

Statistical Data for Eastman

During his time at Harvard, Mr. Folsom caught the eye of George Eastman, founder and head of Eastman Kodak. At the age of 19, Mr. Folsom was named statistical secretary to Mr. Eastman and began formulating statistical data for the company, including welfare programs that have remained a model of private initiative in social programs.

He served two years in the Army in World War I, attaining the rank of captain.

When Mr. Eastman died in 1932, Mr. Folsom increasingly turned his attention to socially oriented programs, not only at Eastman but also in the city of Rochester and on the state level, then finally in Washington.

Throughout this period, he rose steadily in the company. In the early 1950's he was named a director of Eastman.

In 1953, Mr. Folsom resigned from the company to serve as Under Secretary of the Treasury. Two years later, he was named Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. By this time, he had made important contributions to virtually every stage of the country's Social Security system.

'A Benevolent Principal'

Compared by one observer to "a benevolent principal of an old-fashioned, small-town high school," Mr. Folsom was regarded as a highly efficient administrator when he served in the Cabinet.

While few persons could match his knowledge of the Social Security system, which makes up the bulk of the H.E.W. budget, he readily appointed career officers in areas about which he was less familiar, including health and education.

He streamlined the department's bureaucracy, including cutting elaborate conferences with top aides that his predecessor, Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, had ritualized.

He scrapped the elaborate charts and graphs that had been used to explain the department's function to Congress and relied instead on his own verbal presentation, of which he was an acknowledged master.

He was an overseer of Harvard College and the recipient of numerous awards, including honorary degrees from the University of Rochester, Tufts, Brown, Swarthmore, Hamilton, Rollins and New York University.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Marion Jr.; a daughter, Frances; two sisters, Mrs. H. Stanley Mansfield and Mrs. Henry H. Cannon, and two grandchildren.

The funeral will be held Friday at the Fort Meyers Chapel at Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, where he will be buried.

W. PARSONS TODD DIES; MINING EXECUTIVE, 98

Joined the Quincy Mining Company in 1900—Retired Recently as Vice President

W. Parsons Todd, perhaps the oldest active executive of a publicly held American company, died yesterday at Morristown (N.J.) Memorial Hospital. He was 98 years old and a resident of Morristown.

Mr. Todd was active until a few weeks ago as president of the Quincy Mining Company of Hancock, Mich., a copper exploration company. He joined the company in 1900 as a vice president and 10 years later succeeded his late father, William Rogers Todd, as president.

A native of Brooklyn, he moved to Morristown at the age of 4 and attended the Morris Academy there.

Mr. Todd, who was a descendant of Dolly Todd Madison, wife of James Madison, the fourth President of the United States, was active in Morristown public and civic affairs.

He became a member of the Morristown Board of Education in 1913. In 1919 he was elected to the Board of Aldermen and served until 1935, when he was elected to his first term of Mayor. The following year he was re-elected to the board, and in 1951 was elected for a second term as Mayor. He retired from public life in 1954.

Mr. Todd was the founder of the MacCulloch Museum in Morristown, housed in the home of George MacCulloch, the developer of the Morris Canal. It opened to traffic in the early 19th century.

In 1964, he was given an honorary doctor of laws degree from Fairleigh Dickinson University, and two years later he received the Morris County Grand Jury Association award for outstanding civic endeavor.

In 1966 he was awarded a gold medal at the International Stamp Exhibition, and several years ago the Erie-Lackawanna Railroad honored him as the oldest between Morristown to New York five days a week for 72 years.

Mr. Todd, who was also a senior warden and the oldest living member of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer in Morristown, leaves no immediate survivors.

Funeral services will be held at 11 A.M. tomorrow at the Church of the Redeemer.

AUGUST B. HOOK

August B. Hook, a retired New York liquor industry sales executive, died Sunday at a nursing home in St. Petersburg, Fla. He was 81 years old and a resident of Tampa.

Mr. Hook, who had been affiliated with the Carstairs Brothers Distilling Company and James Barclay & Company, is survived by his wife, the former Doris Berg; a son, Norman J.; a daughter, Emmy Hook; a sister, Margaret Wischerth, and two grandchildren.

Swine Flu Shots to Start Friday In 3 Cities After Month's Delay

ATLANTA, Sept. 28 (AP)—The nationwide swine flu immunization program will get under way Friday in three cities after more than a month's delay caused by vaccine production problems and demands by manufacturers for protection from potential lawsuits over side effects.

A spokesman for the National Center for Disease Control here said today that swine flu shots would be administered to senior citizens Friday in Pontiac, Mich., at a "health fair" in Indianapolis and by the Philadelphia Health Department in that city.

He also said the vaccine would be administered in other cities beginning next Monday, but that it would be up to the state health authorities to determine which specific cities.

BELSKY—Joseph. The officers and members of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union note with deep sorrow the passing of an outstanding leader of the American labor movement. As a long-time leader of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, with which our union has long had a close relationship, Joseph Belsky made lasting contributions to the welfare not only of its own members, but of workers everywhere. It is fitting that he close out his illustrious career with a term as president of that union. He will be remembered also for his service to the community, notably through the establishment of low-cost housing developments: and for his humanitarian efforts for the welfare of the people of the State of Israel. Our deepest sympathies are extended to his family.

Councilman Frederick E. Samuel, Democrat-Liberal who represents Harlem, said that the trouble with peddlers on 125th Street was very serious, and that he hadn't heard anyone mention inviting the Uptown Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Katzman assured him it would be done.

Mr. Stern suggested that members of the public present at the meeting who were under the erroneous impression that this was to be a public hearing, be allowed to introduce themselves.

"No, no, no, Mr. Stern," Mr. Katzman said, "This meeting was not intended for the public at all."

It was finally resolved to everyone's satisfaction that the Oct. 6 meeting would be for the public. The only peddler in attendance, who refused to give his name, said the reason more peddlers hadn't shown up was because they never paid their summonses and so were afraid of drawing public attention to themselves. He also said he thought the proposed legislation was "some kind of a fix."

Since early 1974, the Beame administration has been trying to get street peddler legislation drawn up. Now, in October 1976, it will get preconsideration by the Council.

At 12:30 P.M. a meeting of the Rules, Privileges and Elections Committee was convened to give unanimous approval to the redesignation of Dr. Daniel J. Paulo as a member of the Health and Hospitals Corporation. There were several gracious speeches of approval.

The committee also unanimously approved the designation of Arlene Stringer to the City Council for the Sixth District of Manhattan. Mrs. Stringer, who won a four-way Democratic primary on Sept. 14, is to serve by Council designation until Dec. 31. If she wins the general election on Nov. 2, she will serve the remainder of the term of the late David B. Friedland. There were several more gracious speeches in committee concerning Mrs. Stringer.

At 1:15 P.M. a special meeting of the Building and Housing Committee convened. The administration had advised that there were some technical problems with Bill 806K and that it needed amendment. The committee voted 6 to 0 to recommit the bill to committee.

Technical Problem

In the hallways, some 200 of Mrs. Stringer's friends, relations and campaign workers had gathered. There were glad cries of greeting. Mrs. Stringer, a former schoolteacher and for six years Democratic district leader, is an attractive woman of considerable charm. Speaking of her future on the Council, she said, "Oh, it's going to be so exciting."

When the Council meeting got under way, 20 minutes late, there was a perfect orgy of encomiums for Mrs. Stringer. Some were humorous, most pontifical. Much was made of her being of the female persuasion. Her designation was approved, 41 to 0. Council President Paul O'Dwyer got the best laugh of the day when he recognized Borough President Percy E. Sutton of Manhattan to speak from the floor in praise of Mrs. Stringer.

"I don't know the rules of this body," Mr. Sutton began.

Sanitationmen to Spur Cleanup Of Broadway From 72d to 116th

By FRANK J. PRIAL

Sanitation Commissioner Anthony T. Vaccarello said yesterday that he would assign extra workers to clean up Broadway between 72d and 116th Streets—a section that has come to be known by West Siders as one of the filthiest in the city.

Several recent visits to the area bear out these complaints. In the upper 70's the trash is mostly in the gutters. In the 80's the sidewalks too are usually heavily littered by midday.

The heaviest accumulations are in the 90's, where the sidewalks are blanketed with garbage, the gutters are filled with refuse and the islands in the middle of Broadway are covered with beer and soda cans, empty wine and whisky bottles, broken glass and greasy containers from the dozens of fast-food stores in the neighborhood.

The Scene at the O.T.B.

Probably the worst section of the whole stretch of Broadway yesterday was the west side of Broadway between 91st and 92d Streets, a block on which there is an Offtrack Betting office and a Key Food supermarket.

Men congregating in front of the betting office tossed coffee and soda containers, empty cigarette packages and other trash onto the pavement faster than anyone from the OTB office could sweep it up. In front of the food store, papers and rotting garbage were spread from the building line out to the middle of the southbound traffic lanes in Broadway.

Commissioner Vaccarello said he was aware of the problem along Broadway, which is part of the department's District 5.

"The only excuse I can give," he said, "is that we are experimenting in that area to see if we can restructure our manpower needs and get better service."

The Commissioner said the experiments included seeing if trucks could be moved from one collection route to another without disrupting service.

He said that his truck crews could do little about roadway litter and nothing about sidewalk litter. Mechanical brooms can work on trash in gutters if motorists obey alternate-side parking rules, but sanitation workers said they rarely did.

"Sidewalks are not our responsibility," Mr. Vaccarello said. "Unfortunately, shopkeepers no longer sweep their sidewalks."

Last week a City Council committee voted out a bill that would require not only that sidewalks in front of stores and residences be swept clean, but also that the space 18 inches into the gutter be kept clean.

The existing law, which is rarely enforced, requires that sidewalks be swept to the curb. A violator can be fined $100, but courts usually mete out penalties of $1 or $2. Under the proposed measure, which is expected to be passed by the full Council, the minimum fine would be $25 and the maximum $2[illegible] and 15 days in jail.

Youth, 14, Recovers From Coma After 70 Days of Family's Prayer

By GEORGE VECSEY

Special to The New York Times

NEW HYDE PARK, L.I., Sept. 28—Lewis Sadowsky walked out of the hospital today, five months after he was carried in.

The 14-year-old youth does not remember the first 70 days at all. They were spent in a "sleeping beauty sleep," as his mother puts it—a deep, traumatic coma from which some people never recover.

But Lewis is one of the luckier patients—pulled out of his deep sleep by his family and the staff at the Long Island Jewish Hospital—and, perhaps, by the many prayers.

"We had people go to the Pope; we had people take our message to the Wall," said Rita Sadowsky, the mother who would not leave the hospital for the first five weeks. "We all prayed to the same God, and look what has happened."

The long ordeal began on April 22, near their home in Bayside Queens, when a truck collided with the family car, which was driven by 21-year-old Nadine, Lewis's sister.

Minute-by-Minute Struggle

Nadine Sadowsky suffered head and internal injuries. She remained in the hospital for six weeks, facing plastic surgery. She was told only slowly of the critical condition of her brother.

"I don't think they gave Lewis four hours to live," said his father, Abe Sadowsky.

"It was a minute-by-minute struggle," said Marvin Klein, the physician in charge of pediatric neurology. "Fragments of his skull had been driven into his brain. His condition changed so quickly. He had endocrine problems, and there was danger of his dehydrating; he had seizures, convulsions, heart stoppage. He didn't breathe well. We did not have him medically stabilized for three weeks."

When Dr. Klein informed the parents that there was no immediate danger of "losing Lewis," they still had to face the fact that he was totally unresponsive.

"My medical training told me a child has a much better chance if he responds quickly," the doctor said today. "I was frank with the parents. I made them cry many times."

Quinlan Case Recalled

As the weeks and even months dragged on, the parents had reason to recall the Karen Anne Quinlan case in New Jersey, in which a young woman has remained in a coma so long that her parents and some doctors took legal action to reduce the medical support system. But Lewis's situation never came close to that, Dr. Klein said.

The parents went home with their daughter, and they hired a registered nurse, Terry Insardi, to stay all day with the boy. There was always somebody playing the radio or talking to him, so he would be receiving stimuli.

Lewis had been a vital child, a good swimmer, a hockey fan, a boy who loved to cuddle with his dog, Jeremy. Day after day, the family saw him lying "in a blank state," as his sister put it.

On the night of July 1, Abe Sadowsky told his daughter, "I don't know how much more of this we can take."

'I Got Hysterical'

That night Nadine leaned over and told her brother, "Lewis, if you hear me, touch the plastic cup." The boy's hand slowly touched the cup in front of him. Then she told him to touch his father's face, and the boy moved his hand, proving he could see as well as hear.

"I got hysterical," Nadine recalled. "I started screaming for the doctors. There were 12 of them in that room watching it. They were all hysterical, just like me."

In the following weeks, Lewis began to differentiate colors, numbers and letters. But with a tube still in his throat, there was no indication that his speech would return.

After a month, Lewis began spelling messages by touch (the first: "I want a strawberry milkshake.")

Utters His First Words

"Each week something else improved," Mr. Sadowsky recalled. "The hospital let us take his dog to his room. They let us bring six of his friends here on his birthday, September 6. They ate six pizzas."

Three weeks ago, after the tube had been removed from his throat, Lewis uttered his first words: "How is Jeremy?" By today, he was chattering about everything, his voice slightly irregular but his observations keen: he advised a reporter to take a picture of his hospital teacher, Gail Lewis: "Take her picture, she is beautiful."

Lewis, still facing months of complex recovery at home, said a spontaneous prayer in Hebrew as people milled around him in the hospital; he looked forward to the reception when he got home, and as he struggled bravely out the door on his own, he told those around him, "Thank God I'm out of here," and the people standing in the doorway nodded their agreement.

21 Hospitals' Interns and Residents Planning a Walkout Over Contract

By DAVID BIRD

Interns and residents at 21 voluntary and municipal hospitals in New York City said yesterday that they would go on strike at 7 A.M. next Tuesday unless the hospitals signed contracts with their union.

The union, the Committee on Interns and Residents, which represents some 3,000 members in the 21 hospitals, has been in a fight for its life since the National Labor Relations Board ruled earlier this year that interns and residents, known as house staff, were really students.

The board said that because the members of the house staff were not full-fledged employees the hospitals were not required to bargain with them collectively.

Some Strong Opposition

Since the board's decision, only one hospital, the 613-bed Maimonides Medical Center in Brooklyn, has agreed, and only tentatively, to a new contract with the union.

The other hospitals that had been covered by contracts of the union before the board ruled have now taken varying degrees of resistance to the union, which represents doctors who have completed their basic medical training but are undergoing further specialized training while treating patients at the hospitals.

Some of the city's largest institutions would be involved in the walkout and some have taken strong opposition to the union now that they are no longer required to recognize it.

At the 1,300-bed Mount Sinai Hospital a notice went out to the house staff last week, saying: "We will not recognize the C.I.R. nor will we negotiate with a house staff association which is directly or indirectly affiliated with the C.I.R."

The note said discussions at the hospital were "more amenable to the collegial model."

Mount Sinai's president, Dr. Thomas C. Chalmers, said in an interview yesterday: "In an academic health center it is awfully hard to settle questions by collective bargaining. We don't believe in setting hospital disputes by strikes. They should be resolvable at the professional [collegial] level by discussion."

Dr. Chalmers said that Mount Sinai was especially opposed to the union because the union had introduced issues into the dispute that had nothing to do with Mount Sinai.

tling hospital disputes by strikes. They March for four days. Dr. Chalmers said that the issue was mainly over long working hours—house staff members in some hospitals could be scheduled on duty for as long as 130 hours a week—"but we already had agreed with our house staff not to overwork them."

"But our house staff felt they had to go out to defend the C.I.R.," he added.

Dr. Jay Dobkin, the president of the union, who announced the strike plan yesterday at the union's headquarters at 666 Third Avenue, characterized the new resistance of the hospitals as part of a "tour de force of union-busting techniques."

"They have set out to bust our contracts," said Dr. Dobkin, who is a resident in infectious diases at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx.

Elective Work Is Cited

Dr. Dobkin said that the union members would provide emergency service but would hope to halt elective work to put economic pressure on the hospitals.

"No patient is going to be held hostage," Dr. Dobkin said, explaining that striking doctors would cross the lines for emergency service.

Asked if Mount Sinai was prepared to take a strike by its house staff, Dr. Chalmers said: "If we have to, we have to, but it would be terribly painful. We'd have to cut down on research, and, no doubt, patient care would suffer. But we would take a strike to take a stand and avoid future strikes."

Although Mount Sinai and the other hospitals that oppose the union have praised the N.L.R.B. decision, the same hospitals argued earlier this year in a Federal Court suit against government efforts to cut reimbursements, because paying for students was not part of direct patient care.

In that suit the Hospital Association of New York State successfully resisted an attempt by Albany to cut reimbursement for house staff wages by 10 percent on the ground that that percentage of time actually was spent in studying and not in caring for patients.

The hospitals argued that the house staff, who under union contracts are paid from $15,400 to $21,500 a year, actually pay for their education by working long hours, averaging 80 hours a week.

Not all hospitals take the strong anti-union stand that Mount Sinai does.

Dr. Martin Cherkasky, the president of the 1,232-bed Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx, said that his institution was dealing with the house staff whether they were with the union or not. "We're excluding nothing," he said, "but most of our house officers want the C.I.R."

Catskill Land Plan

The state Department of Environmental Conservation reported a new proposal to control land management in the rich Catskills region of southeastern New York. It would be modeled after a similar plan now in effect in the Adirondack Mountains, but provide for wider participation by local governments.

However, despite five years of study already, a 15-volume report released at a news conference here anticipates at least two more years before any plan is finally enacted.

Burglar Gets $50,000

The theft of $50,000 worth of jewelry and money from his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel was reported to the police by Habib Chatti, Foreign Minister of Tunisia. Mr. Chatti, who is here for the United Nations Assembly session, said he discovered the burglary when he and his wife returned to their suite at 1 A.M. after a four-hour absence. Jewelry valued at $42,000 was taken from the couple's luggage, and $8,000 in United States and Swiss currency from Mr. Chatti's attaché case. The police said there were no signs of forceable entry either to the suite or to the luggage. They described the crime as the work of a professional burglar.

Westchester Raise Voted

Westchester County legislators have voted to raise their own pay, along with that of the County Executive and top management officials. The measure passed 11 to 6 on a quick roll call after a two-minute recess in a desultory session of the Board of Legislators in White Plains. The vote on the raise, effective in 1978 for elected officials, was postponed from mid-August, when Edward Brady, the Republican majority leader, found that he was one vote short of the nine needed for approval. Under the act, the legislators, who now are paid $10,000 a year, will get $12,444 if re-elected, and the County Executive will get $58,580 a year after the 1977 election, compared with the current $55,695. The legislators also approved raises for 81 top management officials.

No Delay for Carter Trial

Judge Charles S. Joelson refused in Superior Court in Paterson to delay the retrial of Rubin (Hurricane) Carter and John Artis on murder charges. It is scheduled to start Oct. 12 in Jersey City. The delay was requested by the Passaic County Prosecutor, Burrell Ives Humphreys, and Myron Beldock and Lewis M. Steel, defense counsel.

Judge Joelson also said that a new grand jury investigation announced Monday by Ronald Marmo, an assistant county prosecutor, concerning Alfred Bello, a key witness for the state, would not be held. Judge Joelson, after meeting privately with both sides, refused to say why.

Wage Freeze Banned

Nassau County has been found guilty of violating a contract with its Civil Service Employees Association by prohibiting the payment of salary increments in the last two years to employees earning more than $25,000 a year. State Supreme Court Justice Eli Wager ruled that despite the efforts of Ralph G. Caso, the County executive, to impose a "wage freeze" on the "fat cats" on the public payroll by denying them increments, the county violated the collective bargaining agreement between the two parties. The county estimated it would have to pay between $250,000 and $300,000 to about 149 employees as a result of the decision.

The Evening Great Chefs Dined Toget

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE
Special to The New York Times

BRUSSELS, Sept. 28—If you were to ask the average restaurant enthusiast in the United States where on the map he would situate a restaurant called Comme Chez Soi, he might hazard a guess that it was in the heart of Paris or the South of France. Actually, it is neither. It is one of Belgium's culinary treasures and it is in a small former private residence in a little plaza in the heart of Brussels.

Heaven knows, Comme Chez Soi and its chef-proprietor, Pierre Wynants, are not unknown to connoisseurs on the Continent. Pierre Brasseur, Victor Emanuel and Winston Churchill dined there. Jean Cocteau signed his name with a "souvenir bien amicale." And Jacques Brel wrote of the restaurant's kitchen: "It is the most beautiful chanson of cooking that can exist in Belgium."

Culinary Celebrities Gather

Last night, several great chefs and restaurant owners of Europe testified by their presence that it is worth a detour. The occasion was the 50th anniversary of the restaurant's founding, and a more distinguished roster of gastronomic geniuses is rarely found assembled.

There was Jean-Claude Vrinat, proprietor of Taillevent in Paris, and Jean-Pierre Haeberlin of the treasured Auberge de l'Ill in Illhaeusern, Alsace. Pierre Troisgros of the restaurant that bears his family name in Roanne, France, was there. So was Paul Bocuse, whose name is synonymous with the restaurant in Lyon. Roger Verge of the Moulin de Mougin in the South of France was in evidence, and paying homage from Brussels itself were Marcel Kreusch (whose restaurant, Villa Lorraine, has three stars in the Guide Michelin) and Pierre Romeyer, the ebullient, much talented chef-patron of Chez Romeyer.

Royalty arrived at 8:11 — eleven minutes late—in the person of Prince Albert, brother of the King. The champagne flowed, and there was caviar for the general as well as for all assembled. The general was Thibaut de Maisières, chief of the House of the Princes de Liége, and aide to Prince Albert.

The celebration dinner, which began promptly at 8:30, was a model of simplicity, and all the more laudable because of it.

The first course was a total novelty to most of those at the gathering. It consisted of a consommé of locally harvested baby shrimp, each shrimp not much larger than a man's thumbnail. Each serving of consommé, a long-simmered, clear, rich broth made with the shells of the shrimp, contained, in addition to a score or more of the tiny shrimp, shreds of citronelle, an uncommon herb with a pungent, lemony aroma.

The soup was followed by an interesting and unusual cold molded dish, a "terrine" of vegetables. The dish consisted of green beans, peas, carrots and artichoke bottoms, held together with a delicate aspic with chopped parsley and tarragon, sliced and served with a gossamer sauce of watercress. And there was a slice of fresh foie gras on the side.

We were seated next to Monsier le Baron van den Branden, a great food enthusiast and a physician, who commented with gusto on the fish course, filet de sole Grand Papa Georges.

Last-Minute Sauces

"It is one of the great recipes of this restaurant," he said. "The sauce is made extemporanément, which is to say at the very last minute." He added that this was not true in numerous restaurants of his acquaintance, where the sauces are made a day or two in advance, which does nothing in his opinion but propagate "les microbes."

The sole dish was, in truth, a marvel of sorts, the fresh fillets bathed in a frothy savory sabayon (zabaglone) sauce that smacked lightly of lemon and barely suggested pepper, with a garnish of small, fresh asparagus tips and poached oysters.

The dishes we have remembered from years past at Comme Chez Soi have more often than not been those made of game. Mr. Wynants' father, Louis, had been an avid huntsman. We were not disappointed last night. The principal course of the evening was pouillard Papa Louis, or baby pa style of Pierre's Father.

best examples of Maxion is a black-dyed Rus-sian broadtail shawl, shiny, sleek and sized with generosity. A quiet embellishment—far from being overdone—is the light and airy black ostrich feathers that provide a fluttering frame.

Then there's a horizontally worked, blanket-sized cape. It's sable, dark and luscious, and it's dripping with quite a number of little tails. That's Maximilian's version of tassels.

And while on the subject of sheer luxury, a good design to consider is a long, black-dyed Russian broadtail, the skins running horizontally, the better to somewhow work into sleeves that look like wings. The collar and cuffs are sable because broadtail and sable are a favorite combination of the house, and probably because no one, or almost no one, does it better.

One can't get off the subject of luxury without mentioning the coats of nothing but sable and Canadian fisher. No trim, of course. Maximilian is not a house to commit sacrilege.

One of the coats, a fingertip length at that, is $9,000 but it's natural Canadian fisher, which means it's both more golden and more grayed than most. If fingertip won't do, there's also a-floor-length design for $24,000. The bottom part zips off to make a day-length coat and you'll be thankful to know there is no extra charge for the zipper.

ne York Times/Carl T. Gossett

Smaller Bundle

If sable and fisher are out of the question, which may well be unless you're loaded, Maximilian has natural baum marten. That's not bad either, and it's only 70 percent of what the other two furs cost. A bundle, but a smaller one.

These days, and in this rarified atmosphere, price tags of $3,500 and $6,000 are considered modest, if not cheap.

Let's be modest, with a soft, cuddly, floor-length, amber-shaded — skunk. Yes, 'tis true, and it's all for $3,500. But to go back for a moment—unless you're a country girl, you'd never recognize the animal.

Now that a superior Russian lynx makes a $35,000 dent in the bank account, and a Canadian lynx is in the area of $15,000, what's a person to do? Maximilian says "think coyote." Think also $6,000.

"Cheaper today means less astronomical," a Maximilian spokesman said.

The same $6,000 will also suffice for a Persian broadtail coat, with two patch pockets in a shade called Guligaz. Never mind, it translates to a color midway between gray and brown.

Dramatic Raccoon

While other houses have American raccoon which, as we all know, is a silvery gray color, Maximilian has Finnish raccoon, which is a tawny gold shade and is truly, as announced, more dramatic. It's also more money, but raccoon has never looked better.

Also shown were sheared beaver, silky and slim safari Alaska seal and natural marten. But the big seller is still mink and in that area, Maximilian has a new mutation, Black Iris, with an undertone of smoky gray. There are, apparently, only a few skins around, and from the reaction, they won't be around long.

Not to forget more ordinary mortals. There's a red Indian broadtail overblouse for $1,895 and a plum-colored mink-stripe sweater for $2,500. Strip off the mink stripes, and the sweater itself is $35.

FF for Fendi —A Quiet Part of the Initials Game

By BERNADINE MORRIS

For those who keep track of such things, it is equally prestigious to carry a handbag or a suitcase inscribed with a couple of F's in tandem as it is to have one with G's for Gucci or LV for Louis Vuitton. Perhaps even more so. The reason is that the F's for Fendi have had less exposure and, therefore, in the inverse snobbery of the fashion world, more cachet.

The Fendis have their own snobbery, but it is one that involves quality, luxury and a lack of ostentation. Their favorite fur, for example, is squirrel. And when they do sable, they are apt to mask it in a poplin slipcover.

There are a lot of Fendis—five sisters working out of their headquarters in Rome, two of their daughters already in the business, and nine other children waiting to take over.

The business has been around for a long time. It was started by Adele Fendi in 1930 as a small fur and leather goods shop in Rome. As each of her daughters reached an appropriate age, she was put to work.

"She pushed us into the business and didn't give us time to go out with boys," said Carla Fendi, the next to the youngest. Still, each one found a husband and is encouraging her children to join the family concern.

Two sisters—Paola, who boasts that she is the eldest, and Anna, the next eldest, who is considered the creative one—accompanied Carla on their present trip to New York. Anna brought her daughter, 18 years old, who will work in the Fendi shop of furs, accessories and ready-to-wear that will open at Bergdorf Goodman tomorrow.

The Fendis began to attract a wider circle of followers about 10 years ago, when they opened a shop on the Via Borgognona, in Rome's chic shopping area. A little earlier, they had asked Karl Lagerfeld, the French ready-to-wear designer, to help them with their furs.

The result was a series of innovations, comparable with those he has introduced in ready-to-wear. Linings, for example, were often eliminated.

Why hide the workmanship? asked Paola Fendi, who is the technician in furs. In addition, she pointed out, eliminating linings made the furs lighter and cut down somewhat on the costs. Silk, after all, is expensive.

The sisters all have fur coats, which they have trouble keeping, because when they have one made, a customer often spots it and wants to buy it off the back. Carla's favorite, which she has managed to keep, is a trench coat lined with sable throats ("It's like silk," she said). Paola sticks to squirrel, which is warm, soft, light and "nonpretentious."

None of the sisters likes showy furs. Their favorites in their current collection involve Persian lamb, which they believe they have redeemed from being an old-lady fur. They've accomplished this by inserting vertical stitched bands the length of the coat and by keeping the skins light. Another favored group in the show is made of weasel, which Paola points out resembles ermine but is not so expensive.

Each sister has a specific job in the organization—Carla serves as coordinator—but any new design venture is a group project. Everybody has her say, and since there are five different points of view, the results are often interesting. They must all agree before a new idea is introduced.

Establishing a business run by women was not easy in Italy, which is even less receptive to the idea than the United States, Carla remarked.

"We had to work twice as hard as men to establish ourselves," she said. In the fur business, especially, they chose to be innovative rather than conventional. That resulted in their emphasis on lightness and the use of unconventional furs.

With 13 boutiques in Japan and about 30 retail clients in the United States, the Fendis are not exactly unknown today. They are considered on a par with the Missonis, the couple from northern Italy who are innovators in knitwear. In fact, the Missonis usually travel from Milan to Rome to see the Fendi showings.

"We became friends about 10 years ago, when we saw the first collection they ever showed, at the Pitti Palace in Florence," Carla recalled. "We congratulated them afterwards, and told them they would be famous. A few hours later, we had our show, and they returned the compliment."

So much for feuds in fashion. Appreciation is the thing today.

"When we heard that Waldbaum's was open on Sunday... we couldn't wait to get there."

That's the way our customers feel.

That's why so many people all over Brooklyn, Queens, Westchester and Long Island—all over New York—kept asking us—letters, phone calls, comments to store managers—to open on Sunday.

That's why many of our friendly Waldbaum's supermarkets are open on Sunday. Now, when you go out to pick up your Sunday newspaper, you don't have to drive by a dark, empty Waldbaum's store. You can stop in and find the same fine foods you can buy there all week long.

At the deli department you can get fresh, crisp bagels, tasty herring in Waldbaum's special cream sauce and crunch onions; the finest of imported cheeses from Norway, Denmark, France . . . well, you know the whole list. It's all there on Sunday.

And there's fresh produce; all the fruits and vegetables in season. At the meat counters—Waldbaum's fine, always choice grade of meats—and whatever else you need to round out the week's shopping.

We're open Sundays.

There are 63 Waldbaum stores which are open Sunday. Please check your local store for Sunday hours.

Viewing Childhood As It Is

By RICHARD FLASTE

It's popular in certain psychological circles these days to point out to someone, "That's the child in you talking now."

Judy Blume, a 38-year-old writer whose books for children from about 9 years old to the early teens have sold millions of copies, makes her living by letting the child in her do the talking, and it obviously works.

She identifies with the child who is the main character of each book and the dialogue simply emerges. "I rewrite a lot, but I never rewrite the dialogue," she said recently on a visit to New York to discuss "Forever" (Pocket Books, $1.75; Bradbury Press $6.95) of which there are now 600,000 paperback copies in print.

Mrs. Blume's novels are a conspicuous part of the wave of frank books for children. Her characters say some outrageous things, some mean things. Although the books have met with critical approval, parents have been known to charge into libraries to demand that Mrs. Blume's books be taken off the shelves.

Cruelty in the Fifth Grade

Parents who can't stand what Mrs. Blume writes as well as those who like it may wonder what she's up to: is she deliberately trying to be controversial, deliberately trying to inculcate children with her own philosophy?

She says not. "I'm just trying to tell a story," she insists. Those stories, like it or not, often ring true. In "Blubber," Mrs. Blume's novel about cruelty in fifth grade that was inspired by the time a child in her daughter's class was locked in a supply closet, the protagonist describes her schoolmates:

"Linda's head is shaped like a potato and sits right on her shoulders, as if she hasn't got any neck. She's also the pudgiest girl in our class, but not in our grade. Ruth-ellen Stark and Elizabeth Ryan are about ten times fatter, but even they can't compare to Bruce. . . ."

In "Forever," the story of a girl's sexual love affair ("the end of innocence," as the cover insists on describing it), there is this observation:

"I thought for sure that as soon as my parents saw me they'd be able to tell. But after a while I realized that they were acting the same as always, so I guess my experience doesn't show, after all."

With "Forever," Mrs. Blume wanted to write "a realistic love story with nice kids." Too often, she said, "in teen-age fiction if a girl succumbs to this thing it's because she's unhappy."

Sees a Contemporary Significance

Also, Mrs. Blume said, "in most of the books the details are skipped over." But "Forever" cannot be faulted for that, as it gently, but explicitly, depicts the details. And at the end of this story, when the affair turns out to last a good deal less than forever, nothing is regretted.

It is a story, Mrs. Blume said, that has contemporary significance because it is her impression that children today frequently move directly from no boy-girl relationship at all into a much more intense one than was the case in the past.

In a number of respects, Mrs. Blume appears to be a contemporary woman. Ten or so years ago, as a housewife in Scotch Plains, N.J., she decided housework was not enough for her, that she needed a "creative outlet," which she ultimately found writing books. (Her first successful one of the 12 so far was her third, "Are You There, God? It's Me, Margaret," in which Mrs. Blume portrays what she describes as her own adolescent "ultra-concern, over-concern" with her physical development).

A couple of years ago her marriage became something she no longer wanted.

Letters Spell Out Feelings

"It was a nice marriage," she said, "but I was dying." It was hard to communicate to her son, Larry, now 13, and her daughter, Randy, now 15, why the family was coming apart. And so this frail-looking, emotional woman resorted to a device she can recommend to others in such cases: each family member wrote a letter about their feelings to the others, retired to their bedrooms, read the letters and then they all cried together.

Mrs. Blume is remarried now, to Tom Kitchens, a physicist whom she lived with in London for several months and with whom she and her children are now setting up house in Los Alamos, N. M.

Through all the years of travel and trauma, boredom and success, Mrs. Blume says she's learned a few things about children and about parents.

"It's really hard to be a child," she said, "and no one has shown just how hard it is. No, I wouldn't be a kid again."

As for the plight of parenthood, she said, "The longer I'm a parent, the less I'm sure of what's right and what's wrong. Anyone who's too sure of himself is the one I doubt."

Adventures In Cooking For One

By MIMI SHERATON

COOKING FOR ONE IS FUN. By Henry Lewis Creel. Foreword by Craig Claiborne. 244 pages. Quadrangle. $8.95.

Among the requests we receive most often are those for cookbooks and recipes geared to serve one, for the man or woman who lives alone, loves good food and is tired of the steak-chops-omelette-scrambled egg routine.

Cutting down on standard recipes is not always a satisfactory answer since not all ingredients change in proportion and unless one is an experienced cook, the idea of making a single serving of pot au feu or stew seems almost impossible.

To prove it isn't so, Henry Lewis Creel, who lives alone and loves to eat, and who is a friend and kitchen companion to Craig Claiborne and Pierre Franey, has put together this practical and enticing book. Recipes include soups, beef, veal, lamb, pork, poultry, seafood, vegetable and pasta dishes, among others, without straining for desserts which are easily devised for one serving. Although here and there one might wish fresh alternatives had been given for such things as canned clams in spaghetti sauce, and canned vegetables in a stew, the recipes are, on the whole, appetizing and well described. Two follow.

Lamb Stew French Style

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
5 ounces lean lamb, cut in 1-inch cubes
2 tablespoons chopped onion
½ clove garlic, minced
¼ cup beef broth
⅛ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon flour
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
1 medium tomato, peeled, cored and diced
1 pinch of thyme
½ bay leaf
2 small potatoes, peeled and cut in ½-inch cubes
1 carrot, peeled and cut in ½-inch pieces.

1. Heat the oil in a small skillet and brown the lamb pieces on all sides. Transfer them to a small casserole.

2. Add the onion and garlic to the skillet and cook, stirring a minute or so. Then add the broth and stir to dislodge the clinging brown particles of flavor.

3. To the casserole of lamb add the sugar, flour, salt and pepper and cook stirring a minute or so until well mixed.

4. Add the broth from the skillet to the lamb casserole and follow with the tomato, thyme and bay leaf. Let the contents boil.

5. Cover the casserole immediately and let it cook on top of the stove over a flame tamer at low heat for 1 hour.

6. Now add the potatoes and carrots and continue cooking until the vegetables are tender to the touch of a fork.

7. Serve over the rice with a slotted spoon discarding any excess liquid or reduce the remaining liquid and use a portion for sauce.

Note: If you purchase a small half leg of lamb, bone it and cut it into usable pieces and freeze part for another time or for another dish. Preferably buy a shoulder lamb chop with approximately 5 or so lean ounces showing.

Chicken Sauté Chasseur

½ chicken breast or your favorite piece (or two)
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
½ cup sliced mushrooms
¼ cup diced onion
1 teaspoon flour
¼ cup dry vermouth or white wine
½ cup canned tomatoes
¼ teaspoon minced parsley.

1. Salt and pepper the chicken and brown it in oil in a skillet 10 minutes on each side.

2. Add the mushrooms, cover and cook 10 minutes.

3. Remove the chicken and keep it warm.

4. When ready to serve, add the onion to the skillet and cook stirring 1 minute or so. Stir in the flour.

5. Now add the vermouth or white wine and reduce by half. Then add the tomatoes and cook 5 minutes stirring continually.

6. Serve the sauce over the chicken and garnish with parsley.

A Sweet Variation Of Acidophilus Milk Now in the N.Y. Area

Sweet acidophilus milk, a recent development that is a boon to those who cannot digest conventional milk but dislike the soured flavor of the previously available acidophilus milk, is now on sale at retail stores in New York, and New Jersey.

Produced with the addition of a special culture of acidophilic bacteria by a process developed at North Carolina State University under the direction of Dr. Marvin L. Speck, a microbiologist, the sweet acidophilus milk looks, tastes and smells exactly like conventional whole milk, yet is digestible by those who suffer from lactose intolerance due to a deficiency in the enzyme that digests milk. It can also be substituted for conventional milk in cooking.

It is estimated that 30 million Americans, especially blacks, cannot digest conventional milk. In this area, the milk is being sold under the Russell Farms label at most Sloan's, Waldbaum's, and A.&P. supermarkets in the five boroughs. In New Jersey it is at Shop-Rite, Pathmark, A.&P. and Foodtown markets in a number of counties. Prices vary. In some cases, the sweet acidophilus milk is the same price as conventional milk but it can be as much as 5 cents more a quart.

It is not yet on sale in Connecticut.

Plethora of Olive Nan Makes Sizing-up H

By IRVIN MOLOTSKY

There are a dozen size designations currently in use by the canners of ripe olives in the United States, a number that the Department of Agriculture finds unmanageable and confusing, that some growers find meaningless and that other growers find essential to the consumer.

To help understand the argument, the reader may want to test his skill by trying to rank the following designations of olives according to size: colossal, extra large, giant, jumbo, large, mammoth, medium, select, small, special supercolossal, standard, supercolossal.

The Department of Agriculture feels that most people would not be able to figure out which are the larger olives, except at the range of smaller sizes, whose names are the more straightforward. Even there, however, there is some confusion, the department says, because small, select and standard all mean the same thing.

Olives called small, select or standard are the smallest. The others, in ascending order, are medium, large, extra large, mammoth, giant, jumbo, colossal, supercolossal and special supercolossal.

4 Designations Originally

George Powell, secretary of Lindsay Olive in Lindsay, Calif., a cooperative that is the largest olive packer in the country, says the designations trace back to the 1890's, when there was only one variety of olives canned, and small, medium, large and extra large were adequate to describe their sizes.

"Then, in the 1920's," Mr. Powell said, "other, larger varieties were grown, and Hollywood-sounding names were adopted to account for those even larger than those previously grown."

Mr. Powell finds the "Hollywood-sounding" names "somewhat meaningless" and supports merging adjacent pairs of sizes, reaching a new total of five, saying that it would benefit both the packers and the consumers.

Sterling P. Ingram, a marketing specialist with the Department of Agriculture, said that the reduction of size names "has been talked about for years, but we have been reluctant to go it alone until now."

"The consumer trend has led us to move to get the changes," Mr. Ingram said, a point of view that is hotly contested by those olive growers who oppose changing the designations.

Consumer Attitude Questioned

"There have been no complaints except from some professional consumer advocates who have nothing better to do," said Ralph Fusano, secretary of Cristo Fusano & Sons, one of the seven California olive packers opposing the change. (The two other packers, including Lindsay, favor the change, as does the Canners League of California. Together, the nine packers account for virtually all of the canned ripe olives sold in the country, a $150 million-a-year business.)

"Are we really doing the consumer a favor if we do this?" Mr. Fusano asked. "I think we would only confuse the consumer. We expect some packers to experiment with it, and we expect it to fail."

The Department of Agriculture will receive comments on the proposal from consumers, canners and others until March 1, and then will issue its order.

Cash Customers Get Gas Discounts

The granting of cash discounts to those who forgo the use of credit cards, which has lang been advocated by consumer groups, is being tested in two cities by Exxon Corporation's domestic marketing arm.

For the last two weeks, 21 of the 23 Exxon stations in Abilene, Tex., and 34 of the 40 Exxon stations in Charleston, S. C., have been charging lower prices to cash customers than to those using Exxon credit cards.

During the test, which will run for six months or longer, dealers will be giving discounts of up to 5 cash purchases. Exxon wi the dealers during the t losses they suffer throu counts andthrough a 5 pe fee that is being charge as part of the experiment.

Robert A. Pierpont Jr. marketing executive, said cally, dealers had not credit card service, and h if the experiment could strued as a prelude to of such charges to all of ers. There are thousands ers in 44 states, and Exx million credit card custom

16 PERSONS AND SIX LABS CITED IN MEDICAID FRAUD

CHICAGO, Sept. 28 (UPI)—A Federal grand jury has indicted 16 medical service providers and six laboratories in a Medicaid fraud scheme that ran "well into the millions of dollars," United States Attorney Samuel K. Skinner said today.

Named in the 10 suppressed indictments were the laboratories; a pharmacist, Eugene Ziperstein, 32 years old, of Northbrook, 12 of his associates and three Chicagoans, including two doctors. Mr. Skinner said more indictments were expected in the next few months.

Mr. Ziperstein and his associates were accused of establishing an a quota system at various ters and pharmacies and backs from medical laborat they sent business.

The laboratories were making illegal kickbacks clinics, corporations and return for referrals. One named, Fomaro, Inc., of charged with making false billings submitted to the St Department.

The five other labora Chicago, were Genreal M tories Ltd., Norven Medic Inc., the Philam Corporat Medical Laboratory and As cal Laboratory.

To Avoid the Bifocal Look, 2 Controversial Answers

By NADINE BROZAN

"What? Bifocals?" A fashion-conscious Westchester County career woman sat in her ophthalmologist's office recently and balked at the very idea.

"I don't want old lady glasses," she declared. "After all, I'm only 42. What am I going to do, walk around with Givenchy frames and a line across the middle of the lenses?"

Now only her ophthalmologist and her optician know for sure that she happily wears spectacles that contain two prescriptions, a visual aid that becomes necessary for most people in middle age, when they develop prosbyopia or loss of the eye's ability to change its focus from distance to near-viewing points.

The Westchester woman's concern for her looks and reluctance to have separate glasses for separate purposes

Although lenses that serve as bifocals without looking like them have been available for some time, they're not often prescribed.

—"Then I'd need glasses to look for my glasses," she said—was not unusual vanity. One eye doctor said that he sometimes gets calls at home from psychiatrists whose patients are made distraught by the suggestion that they need bifocals.

There are two alternatives, still relatively unknown to the public in this country, for those who want to see clearly but refuse to accept a spectacle that they equate to the hearing aid or the cane.

Blended Bifocal 30 Years Old

One is the blended bifocal, also known as the invisible seam bifocal, which was first produced in 1946. It is basically the standard dual-prescription glass with the top meant for distance viewing and the bottom for reading, but the line of demarcation is ground down to make the seam disappear.

The other is the progressive or graduated lens, introduced in 1951. It has many gradations of power because its strength changes gradually from a distance prescription at the top half to intermediate and then near prescriptions at the bottom.

"As the eye goes lower, the power gets stronger in the lens until it hits full reading power at the bottom," said Onno Poppinga, president of H. L. Purdy, who wears them himself. "It's like having 100 bifocals blending into one another."

Both varieties, which are more difficult to manufacture and fit and more expensive than the standard bifocal, have provoked controversy among the optical specialists, with the seamless bifocal subject to more severe criticism.

The Seamless Version

Dr. William C. Folsom, assistant clinical professor at the State College of Optometry, State University of New York, who teaches the science of lenses, said of the seamless version. "It is designed to conceal the appearance of a bifocal to the person looking at the wearer. The demarcation is only invisible to the observer, not to the wearer. It [the portion of the lens that is ground down] results in a zone that is not optically correct."

Other specialists said that the blended area caused blurring, but everyone ple in professions in which they must work at different distances," he said, citing as examples engineers and draftsmen. "It's like looking through an almost indefinite region of power. The lens is always just right for whatever you're looking at. The only other glass that could fulfill the same purpose would be one cut up into many sections."

Dr. Irwin Siegel, professor of experimental ophthalmology at New York University Medical Center, disagreed and said, "My objection is that because the lens is continuously changing in power, the eye never looks through an area that can be precisely measured optically.

"The variable-focus lens is an advancing technology but not a completed one," he added, predicting that, with refinement, "it is the wave of the future."

His own preference is for the standard bifocal. "The lines are now very subtle with the use of coating and antireflection techniques," he said.

Present Many Problems

No matter what position they take, doctors still do not often prescribe either type for a variety of reasons: Precise facial measurements must be taken before the optician can send complex directions to the laboratory that processes the lenses, exact fitting is required afterward, they are not suitable for everyone and not all patients adapt to them with ease.

As Dr. Podell put it, "There are few people whom I consider have the adaptability or the need for this alternative."

The experts all agreed that the good candidate for the lenses is the person who needs reading glasses for the first time or who is not used to wearing standard bifocals, who does not have severe myopia or astigmatism, who is not elderly and who does not have a tendency to motion sickness or inner ear problems. There can be some distortion in certain areas of the lens, which could cause dizziness in those susceptible.

According to inquiries on prices and waiting periods at four optical shops here, Lugene, H. L. Purdy, Russ Opticians and Meyerowitz, the cost of the seamless bifocals (not including frames) ranges from $50 to $85 and the progressive lenses from $65 to $125, depending on the shop and other factors. The waiting time can be as short as a few days or as long as six weeks.

"My Mommy baked this pie. She's terrific."

I love it when Mom bakes her own apple pie for dessert. The whole kitchen smells so yummy. And Mom doesn't have to work hard, either. She just fills a ready made crust with Comstock Apple Pie Filling and puts it in the oven. Comstock has big chunks of apples with lots of delicious juice and cinnamon. Mom says it tastes just as good as using fresh apples without all the work. It's so easy, Mom's gonna let me bake the next Comstock pie. Wanna come over and taste some?

From Scaasi, Too, the Rustle of Femininity

"As far back as July, women came in asking me to make them a dress with a big taffeta skirt." Arnold Scaasi remarked at the opening of his fall collection yesterday. "So I decided everybody was tired of jersey—I certainly was—and I would make big, important clothes for this winter."

They aren't all taffeta. There are some satin, velvet and even chiffon styles, but they do look important.

Day of Important Dresses

"That's like the one he made for me," Esme Hammond remarked as a square-neckline dress with big sleeves was modeled. Mrs. Hammond, who was a debutante when important dresses were de rigueur, said she was happy to see the return of pretty clothes.

So was Polly Bergen. "I love the sound," she said. "It's so feminine as they rustle—it brings back a wonderful, old-fashioned quality."

What about the practicality of full skirts? Well, Scaasi's customers tend to live in villas, not bungalows, and they travel in limousines, so wash-and-wear is not exactly their concern. His clothes are custom-made, there's hardly anything with a price tag under four figures, and his fans are not likely to pack them into duffel bags. They're not too much concerned about practicality. Comfort is another story.

The bones and wires that used to make some strapless dresses an agony to wear in Mrs. Hammond's debutante days are absent from the present crop of bare-shouldered styles. So are elaborate inner construction and underskirts. What's left is the glamour.

Brilliant Colors

Part of the appeal lies in brilliant colors—purple satin over red taffeta, for example, or a yellow one-houlder top paired with orange harem pants toned down with a gray satin overskirt. The biggest applause of the show went to that yellow and orange number, which was described as an at-home outfit. Perfect to wear around the villa.

Scaasi didn't rely on full skirts and bold colors for his super-feminine effects. Many of his clothes were equipped with big, puffy sleeves and rather demure square necklines. But he also is a great exponent of the long-torso silhouette. He used stitched tucks to draw the bodices of his dresses close to the body and then released the fullness into the skirts at about hip level. Very effective.

Broadtail With Sable

The vertical tucks weren't restricted to evening clothes. They turned up in wool coats for day as well as in such little fur novelties as a gray Russian broadtail coat laden with sable cuffs.

When the aim is blatant femininity, there's no need to be subtle. There's nothing subtle about ruffles, and Scaasi indulges in them freely. A black lace jacket that looks absolutely Victorian is swimming in ruffles (Underneath lies a fuchsia bodice and an orange taffeta skirt). A black taffeta stole that is stitched and tucked like the bodice of the dress it accompanies is also rimmed in ruffles, framing the face.

Now, Scaasi's clients generally own plenty of furs, both the serious variety such as mink or fisher and the fun foxes. But sometimes they like to step out in a cloth coat. Sometimes, in Palm Beach or Palm Springs, it's just too hot for furs.

For these heady moments, he supplies a variety of wraps, ranging from quilted raincoats (one happens to be lined in fox, but no matter—it can be ordered without) to floor-length wool, velvet or taffeta capes. Some of the latter are stitched and tucked, to carry this technique all through the collection. It makes clear, at any rate, the fact that the wearer didn't toss any old thing over her satin, lace or taffeta evening dress.

"Imagine doing a collection without using jersey or crepe," the designer said after the show. "It was much more fun working with lace and velvet and crisp silks," he went on. "Even the dressmakers who stitched up the clothes enjoyed it."

That just leaves the customers to complete the chain. They seemed to be having a good time too.

The Cuddly Little Dolls Aren't Necessarily Toys

By RUTH ROBINSON

Little girls will probably flip over Colette, Magdalene, George, Pierrot and the other dolls offered in the needlework department on Altman's fifth floor Oct. 7.

dress and undress.

Chances are, though, mothers will be buying them for their own edification rather than as playthings for their offspring, since these are intended as collectors' items and ornaments rather than toys.

Were the dolls not sharing a boutique with such obviously Thai products as hand-painted paper kites and batik umbrellas, one would never dream that they, also, were made in Thailand. With very few exceptions, they owe their inspiration entirely to Western sources.

Take, for instance, the French fashion dolls such as Emma, who wears an elaborate brown silk 1890's dress and carries a feather fan in one hand and a tiny sequined reticule in the other. And Pola, a flapper if ever there was one, with her cloche pulled down low, and pliable little cloth fingers gripping a long cigarette holder.

George, a proper little turn-of-the-century boy made entirely of cloth who sports a gingham middy blous short pants and sailor cap. He may l German, or is he perhaps English?

Such personalities as Dorothy L mour, the sultry South Seas beauty tones of blue with flowers in her lu uriant hair, and Pierrot, the Fren pantomime clown, as well as appliqu Art Deco pillows depicting sun a moon, round out the collection of mo than 30 different styles. Prices ran from $30 to $80.

Collectors will be interested also the Honor Wilson costume dolls th sell for $400 each in Lord & Taylo toy department. They have all the re uisites. They are handmade and one a kind. The china heads are produc in limited editions and individual numbered. The costumes have be painstakingly researched, and wherev possible, antique fabrics have be used for the exquisitely detaile clothes and undergarments, all o which are removable.

Great Chefs Dine Together

much talk of wine and food, and we much admired a small anecdote by a tablemate, Pierre Romeyer. He told of a restaurant owner who proudly offered one of his customers a glass of rare old port at the end of a meal. Shortly thereafter they quarreled and the next day the customer called, still in a quarrelsome mood. "I want you to know," he said, "I've drunk better port than that."

To which the restaurant owner replied, "Not at my place, you haven't."

We have it by hearsay only, but we were also amused by an incident that reputedly happened when some doit of a visitor, a foreigner, perused the guest list and came across the title in French of the Prince's aide, General de Maisières. He is called Chef de la Maison des Pdinces de Liege.

"I wonder," the visitor is supposed to have wondered aloud, "in whose kitchen he served his apprenticeship."

Comme Chez Soi, which has only 14 tables and a maximum seating capacity of 40, is a place of considerable charm and great elegance, despite the fact that the dining tables are placed almost cloth to cloth. There is a narrow dining room with bevelled mirrors with a view through beveled panes into a kitchen where Pierre Wynants plus a team of six young Merlins, most of them in their early 20's, or younger, work their daily miracles.

No Copper in the Kitchen

The kitchen is immaculate and is furnished not with polished heavy copper, but rather with the more moist yet thoroughly efficient Belgian ware made of enameled iron. The silver on the tables is Christofle.

Originally the restaurant was called Chez Georges. The name was changed in the early days when a grande dame who frequented the place told the owner, "Georges, chez vous on mange comme chez soi," or "in your place one dines as at home."

Over a glass of champagne, Mr. Wynants, who is 37 years old, told us that his family's enterprise had humble origins: "My grandfather, Georges Cuvelier, came from a poor background, but he was ambitious. He had worked in many places in Europe, including Germany and England, and said that some of the best advice he ever had came from a maître d'hôtel who advised him to learn many languages. Eventually he became a maître d'hôtel and opened a small bistro-type place with a single cook and a waitress."

One of the principal dishes was the famed Belgian specialty moules e frites, or steamed mussels and french fried potatoes. The place prospered and 10 years later the grandfather purchased a fine townhouse at the presen address, 23 Place Rouppe.

Mr. Wynants told us that his own father had been a butcher, but tha after his marriage he was taken o as an apprentice by his father-in-law. He succeeded to a great degree as ho and became a much-loved figure o the Brussels restaurant scene.

Pierre, or Pierrot as he is often calle said that he fared poorly in hi school and he in turn was taken unde the wing of his father. He also worke in England at the Savoy Restaurant i Brussels and, for a brief period, 1 years ago, in the kitchen of the roya residence, the Belvedere Palace.

Given Pierre Wynants' youth and ta ent, the immediate future of Comm Chez Soi is assured. He was given th Medaillon d'Or by a Minister of th Government at the end of the evenin

But, we asked him, what of su cession, in that he has two daughter and no male heir?

"No problem," he said. "They wi marry as my mother did and bri their husbands into the restaurant."

The telephone number of Com Chez Soi is 512-2921. The cost of d ner for two, wine not included, is es mated at $30 to $50.

FINALLY, A BIG BIRD THAT ISN'T A TURKEY.

Benjamin Franklin, the inventor, wanted to name the turkey America's national bird. Someone else suggested the eagle. Which is just as well because "turkey" has come to mean more than a big bird. It's a term often used to describe a big flop.

However, the subject isn't turkeys or eagles, but a new kind of bird that tastes far better than both. It's the 'Oven Stuffer' Roaster invented by Franklin Perdue.

The 'Oven Stuffer' is specially bred and specially fed to grow bigger and plumper than mere chickens ever get. It ranges from 5 to 7 lbs. So it falls short of most turkeys' weight. But people who've tried it tell us it surpasses a turkey in a lot of other ways.

The meat always comes out moist and tender. And it has that old-fashioned fresh flavor it's hard enough to find in chickens these days. And impossible to find in a turkey.

With the Perdue 'Oven Stuffer' Roaster, you can feed 5 or 6 people without burying them in leftovers. So it's perfect for a large hungry family or for when you're having guests.

You'll find a recipe right on the wing-tag that tells you how to cook it, stuff it and serve it. So you can just sit back and watch everybody gobble-gobble it up.

Two Irish Women Seek to Block Gifts That Aid Terrorism

Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan, co-founders of the Northern Ireland's women's peace movement, announced in Belfast yesterday that they would come to the United States on Oct. 4 to renew their appeal to Americans to stop sending money to Northern Ireland that the women say fuels terrorism. The two leaders said they would fly to Buffalo at the invitation of the Public Broadcasting System and would also talk to church leaders in New York.

But when the report was sent out on news services, the Buffalo Public Broadcasting System station, WNED, began getting threatening phone calls, according to Michael Collins, president of WNED. He said Mrs. Williams and Miss Corrigan had been scheduled to tape an interview with Sandra Elkin for her show, "Woman," which is carried by some 200 stations. "Complete secrecy was planned for the women's protection," a representative of the Public Broadcasting System said, but because of the security breach, "the entire program has been scrapped."

The Defense Ministry said his duties are being performed by his deputy, Air Force Lieut. Gen. Harald Wust.

Commenting on Jimmy Carter's interview in Playboy magazine, in which Mr. Carter said he had felt lust in his heart for women other than his wife, Mr. Roberts told the former Mayor that he had felt no lust for any other woman since his marriage 38 years ago. "My attitude," he said, "is that we can admire but not desire."

He spent 22 years as a newspaper publisher and wrote two historical biographies, but Representative Paul M. Simon has been caught, nonetheless, on an unchecked fact. In his September newsletter the Illinois Democrat referred mockingly—and incorrectly—to the University of Maine as the school that had advertised for a history teacher who could combine "synchronic and diachronic analyses of events in a transcultural and holistic mode." It turned out that an aide had slipped him the wrong information — the school was actually the College of the Atlantic in Bar Harbor, Maine. Mr. Simon, a former college professor himself, has written a letter of apology to the chairmen of the departments of history at each of the University of Maine's half-dozen branches.

"We never would have left her if we'd known it would take this long to get her back," said the father of 2-year-old Elaine Griffin as she arrived in Boston Monday night, the survivor of a typhoon in the Philippines and a blizzard of paperwork. James Griffin, 23, was stationed at Subic Bay with the Marine Corps when the child was born to his wife, the former Erlinda Evangelica. Their papers for return to the United States 20 months ago contained no permission for the baby to accompany them, so she was left temporarily with her Filipino grandfather and aunt.

The Griffins ran into a wall of bureaucracy in attempts to get their daughter to the United States. "I've never seen a couple so discouraged," said Pat Carney, an aide in the office of their Congressman, Representative Michael Harrington, Democrat of Massachusetts. In addition, the baby and her Filipino relatives were missing for weeks after the typhoon in June and wound up in an evacuation center. With the help of the Red Cross and Angel Wings, an airline escort-service for small children, Elaine was delivered to her parents. Said Scott McMann, the flight attendant, "She couldn't have been a better companion."

The Hakkas of China—Wasting Nothing At All

By EILEEN YIN-FEI LO
Special to The New York Times

HONG KONG—The Hakkas are a distinctive Chinese people who traditionally raise what they eat, wasting nothing.

When they prepare roast suckling pig, they will also eat the pig's stomach, steamed and cross-cut to tenderize it, and spiced with coriander. The pig's intestines might be glazed with soy and then fried. Their diet, rich in vegetables and bean curd, also includes steamed and fried bone marrow, and kidneys cooked in pig fat.

The tall, proud Hakkas, known as the "guest people," have been the traditional wanderers among the Chinese for more than a thousand years, coming originally from the north, in Honan and the Yellow River valley. In their wanderings, they brought with them a fervor for back-breaking work and a fierce desire to preserve their own traditions.

Out in the New Territories between Hong Kong island and the Chinese border, most of the farmers are Hakka people. The women wear black cotton pajama suits and broad-brimmed straw hats fringed with black cloth to shield their eyes from the sun.

Because the number of Hakka dishes is fairly limited, and since only a few of the preparations would be culturally accepted by the American palate, Hakka cooking is virtually unknown in the United States.

Here in Hong Kong there are a number of restaurants specializing in Hakka food. Like the Hakka themselves, the restaurants try to retain their identities, although some have given up and now mix Hakka dishes with traditional Cantonese fare.

Perhaps the finest Hakka restaurant in Hong Kong is Chuen Cheung Kui, situated in a teeming, totally Chinese section of Kowloon and presided over by Chan Yick Chuen, who says he has compiled the only Hakka cookbook in the world. And he is probably right. It is only 24 pages long and it is not for sale, but rather is given by Mr. Chan to those who he believes appreciate the food he cherishes.

On a recent evening there, my fifth uncle and aunt, their four children, a set of their in laws, my husband and two of our children wedged through the round family tables of his restaurant and found the one that had been prepared for us.

There was one bottle of Hine cognac, several bottles of Carlsberg beer and a forest of soft drink bottles waiting for us surrounded by 13 place settings. We settled in, drank a polite toast and the meal began.

First out was Gai Bow Ji, which is an entire chicken, boned but with the skin intact, that had been stuffed with the tenderest of sharks fins and cooked in chicken broth. The chicken was opened in the broth and the fins and chicken pieces were served with the broth. It was superb.

This was followed by what is the proudest of Hakka dishes, salt-baked chicken, which is called Yim Kuk Gai, and is chicken that is baked completely covered by layers of coarse sea salt.

This was followed by a stir-fried mixture of abalone, sea cucumbers and black mushrooms and with a platter of deep-fried prawns and pig's intestines. The prawns were heavier than in tempura but delicious when dipped in a plate of dark soy sauce, sliced ginger and vinegar. The pig's intestine, which was really quite attractive looking, was rather bland and seemed to take its flavor from its soy marinade.

The next course was pig's stomach, which was not unlike tripe. It had been boiled and reboiled, Mr. Chan told me, then cross-cut to tenderize it and seasoned with fresh ginger and coriander. My children, I'm afraid, did not appreciate its niceties and instead concentrated on the fried prawns.

Stuffed fresh bean curd—lovely fried pillows filled with a combined mixture of pork, fish and bamboo shoots which had been steamed in dark soy sauce—followed, and in turn was followed by a stuffed duck. The duck skin was filled with glutinous rice mixed with shredded ham, the meat of the duck, mushrooms and lotus seeds, then dipped in a thin tapioca flour batter and deep-fat fried. It was excellent.

Special Meat Balls

A chicken broth filled with small beef balls and balls made of carp was the next-to-last dish. These meat balls are another dish for which the Hakka are known. The meal was concluded with a platter of fried rice with shrimps, eggs and scallions tossed in. It was rather good, perhaps a little blander than the rice most Americans expect in their corner restaurants.

Following are Hakka dishes that I think would be enjoyable to the Western palate. The salt-baked chicken is almost exactly as Mr. Chan makes it. The bean curd and straw mushrooms are a delightful accompaniment to a meat course, or are fine on their own. I have made the meatball soup a variation of the Hakka version (Hakka meatballs are pounded, rolled and overcooked so that they have the bouncy consistency of bad bologna).

Salt-Baked Chicken

1 fresh chicken, about 3 pounds, washed, all interior membranes removed, drained, dried thoroughly inside and out.
6 pounds of kosher salt
Cheesecloth sufficiently to wrap chicken entirely
1½ teaspoons dry vermouth
1 teaspoon salt
1 slice fresh ginger, peeled
3 scallions; cut off and discard whisker ends and green tips, wash and dry thoroughly
1 piece of 8-star anise
6 sprigs of coriander for garnishing

1. Rub inside of chicken cavity with dry vermouth and salt, then place ginger, scallions and anise inside.

2. Wrap chicken entirely in cheesecloth, knotting cloth at neck and tail.

3. Pour all kosher salt into wok and heat over medium flame from 30 to 45 minutes, stirring frequently, until salt is exceedingly hot.

4. Scoop out a well in salt, place chicken, breast side down, in the hole, then cover chicken completely with salt. Cover wok. Bake chicken for 1 to 1¼ hours over medium heat. Chicken should be thoroughly cooked in this time, but to make certain, if desired, pierce thigh with fork. If juice runs clear, the chicken is cooked.

5. Remove chicken from wok, brush off salt, remove cheesecloth and discard ingredients in chest cavity. Place chicken on chopping block, cut off legs and wings. Then either cut chicken into bite-size pieces with a cleaver or shred meat with fingers into two-inch long strips.

6. Arrange on serving platter and garnish with coriander. Serve with individual dishes of scallion-ginger sauce.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

3 to 4 scallions, white portions only, cut into 1-inch pieces and shredded
2 slices fresh ginger, cut into fine strips
5 tablespoons light soy sauce
⅛ teaspoon white pepper

Combine all ingredients in small bowl, allow to stand briefly then portion out into individual small soy sauce dishes.

Bean Curd and Straw Mushrooms

6 cakes of fresh bean curd (dried thoroughly and allowed to reach room temperature)
2 to 3 teapsoons peanut oil
1 cup of chicken broth
2 tablespoons cornstarch
½ to 1 teaspoon salt
1 scallion (green portion only, finely chopped, washed and dried)
6 springs of coriander for garnishing

1. In large flat skillet heat peanut oil until quite hot, then fry bean curd cakes until lightly browned on both sides. Place in serving dish and set aside.

2. Combine chicken broth, cornstarch and salt in pot over low-medium heat, stirring constantly to avoid lumpiness and scorching, until the liquid becomes clear and bubbling.

3. Add straw mushrooms and cook for one minute only.

4. Pour over bean curd cakes. Sprinkle scallions over cakes, garnish with coriander and serve immediately.

Yield: 6 servings.

Meat Ball Soup

½ pound of ground beef
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon light soy sauce
¼ teaspoon whisky
½ teaspoon sesame oil
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 small egg white
2¼ cups chicken broth
2¼ cups water
1 slice ginger
3 finely chopped scallions (green portions only).

1. Combine beef, salt, sugar, soy sauce, whisky, sesame oil, cornstarch and egg white in bowl and mix with chopsticks, stirring clockwise, until soft. Then form into bite-sized balls.

2. Bring chicken broth and water, mixed, to near boil.

3. Add slice of ginger and the meat balls.

4. When meatballs are cooked (when they float to the top of the broth) add the finely chopped scallions, and serve immediately.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

WINE TALK

Tasting: A Good Way to Learn and to Compare

By FRANK PRIAL

Wine tastings are the best means of learning about wine. Only at tastings of two or more wines is it possible to compare and begin to comprehend how and why wines of the same region, type and vintage can differ so much.

In fact, good tastings are the only reason to get involved in the various wine societies that proliferate all over. They can assemble more wines for one evening than the average drinker could get through in months.

Les Amis du Vin, one of these groups, has regular tastings. One recent tasting, presented by the Manhattan East chapter of Les Amis, was not only instructive, it also provided samples of wines that can be purchased in the better local stores.

It was a blind testing of California wines. Well, not quite. One famous French bordeaux was put in with the California cabernet sauvignons, just to see how well it did and to determine if anyone could detect it.

Most Agree on the Fetzer

There were four cabernets: a 1973 from Robert Mondavi, a 1973-1974 blend from Cuvaison, a Fetzer Vineyards 1974 and a 1973 Chateau Beychevelle. By almost unanimous acclaim, the Fetzer was the best of the lot.

It was what testers call a "big" wine. That means a powerful taste, a room-filling bouquet and rich, dark color. Second probably was the Cuvaison, another "big" wine with intense flavor and bouquet and a great deal of tannin, which can be detected by the drying effect the wine has on the back of the mouth.

Tannin is usually considered to presage a long development for the wine in which, presumably, it will get better and better.

The Mondavi came in third, probably because it was not as "forward" a wine. That is, its qualities were not so readily apparent as those of the Fetzer and Cuvaison wines. Most Mondavi fans will acknowledge that the Mondavi cabernet is not made in the same style as some of the newer premium wines. It is more closed-in, more subtle. The implication is that the Mondavi wines one day will show up these other, more obvious wines. Only time will tell.

As for the Beychevelle, it was certainly the most elegant of the four, even though it was the product of a relatively minor vintage in Bordeaux: 1973.

Too Subtle for Californians

Ordinarily, a three-year-old Bordeaux would not be ready to drink for another three years, at least. The 1973's, however, were generally thin wines without much future. Even so, the best of them display some subtleties still beyond the reach of many California vintners.

This whole business of comparing cabernets is fraught with problems. It California abernets with Bordeaux probably will take the California vintners a few more years of winning competitions to relax and accept the fact that French and California wines can both be great without necessarily being the same.

Which raises another question — about the life of these "huge" California cabernets. By now it has become doctrine that the better-made California wines will last many years. It is common at tastings to hear people—usually retailers, distributors and consumers and not enologists or winemakers—predict that the wines will last 20, 30, 50 years.

Often they are talking about wines made from vines that were planted six or seven years ago and have been bearing for four years. They may be right, but it is well to bear in mind that in Bordeau, in poor years, the great chateaux often limit their picking to vines 15 years of age and older, to get the best grapes.

The great old vineyards of California — Beaulieau, Krug, Louis Martini and the old Inglenook, among others—have produced long-lived wines. As for the rest, we won't know for a long time.

Comparisons Could Be Faulty

In the meantime, it might be wise to forgo invidious comparisons between Bordeaux that take a few years to develop and California wines that begin to show their best qualities early on.

Oh yes, there were some interesting zinfandels in the Les Amis tasting. Here again, the winner was a Fetzer: the 1974 made exclusively from grapes from the Recetti Vineyard in Fetzer's home county, Mendocino. As befits a rather rare bottle, this costs $7 in local outlets.

This makes Cuvaison's 1973, which was also a beautiful wine, if not exactly in the Fetzer class, an excellent buy at $4.25.

As a matter of fact, the Fetzer zinfandel is $1 more than the 1974 cabernet, which is $6. The Cuvaison 1973-74 cabernet is $5.50, the 1973 Mondavi is $6.50 and the Beychevelle is $7.50. Prices may vary slightly in New York City and more widely in other states.

Anyone interested in getting an example of the Fetzer style of winemaking without spending a bundle should seek out a store that handles Fetzer's Mendocino Premium Red, a table wine grape but marked with the Fetzer style: dark color, oaky taste from the aging barrels, and a lot of body. And it costs only about $2.25 a bottle (up from $1.99 just a few months ago, alas).

Lower Food Costs? Hope Is Expressed

City Consumers Affairs Commissioner Elinor Guggenheimer expressed the hope yesterday that recent decreases in the wholesale prices of grains, beef and sugar, would translate themselves into lower food costs.

She made the observation as she released the weekly data on the cost of feeding a family of four. The price of the weekly market basket went up last week by 47 cents, or 0.7 percent, from $71.20 to $71.76.

One result of lower wholesale price—the recent 20 percent reduction in wholesale chicken prices—produced a drop from 67 to 61 cents for a pound of chicken.

She attributed the 47-cent rise in the cost of the market basket to seasonal increases for many fresh fruits and vegetables, which caused prices in this category to rise by 4.4 percent.

Lawsuit Dropped When Managers Agree to Dissidents' Demand for Greater Governing Voice

By EMANUEL PERLMUTTER

Dissident members of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have dropped their suit against the agency in return for six seats on the society's board of managers.

The suit, brought two years ago by 527 members, had alleged that the agency was being fiscally mismanaged and that the society was run "like an exclusive club, for the corporate directors, rather than for the animals."

The present 15-member board of managers will be expanded to 25, to include the six wanted by the dissidents and four others nominated by the board. They are to be elected at the annual meeting of the society next month.

Dissident Nominees Listed

The six new nominees to the board of managers wanted by the dissidents are:

Leo-Arthur Kelmenson, president of Kenyon and Eckhardt Inc.; Kathi Norris, managing editor of Media Industry Newsletter; New York City Clerk David N. Dinkins; John F. Kulberg, dean of admissions at the Columbia Law School; Virginia E. Milliken, described as long active in animal welfare programs, and Linda Meyer, a former board member of the A.S.P.C.A.

In addition, Gretchen Wyler, the actress—a former member of the board of managers—will be added to the present six-member A.S.P.C.A. nominating committee for future board members. Miss Wyler and Mrs. Meyer had led the dissident forces.

The agreement was approved by Supreme Court Justice Abraham J. Gelinoff.

From the great châteaux districts of Bordeaux, three remarkable wines from Cartier.

The Bordeaux region of France has been turning out some of the finest wines in the world ever since the Romans.

Most Bordeaux wines are produced in small, individually owned vineyards, or chateaux.

Of those chateaux officially cited as outstanding over the years, 85 percent are located in just three districts — Médoc, Graves and St.-Émilion.

All three are unique in soil and climate conditions.

Conditions that result in consistently superior wines.

The wines from all three are distinctive, all three are superb.

The Cartier District Wines.

There's Cartier Médoc. A medium bodied, yet delicate red wine, made primarily from the prestigious Cabernet grape.

Cartier Graves is a crisp, dry, white wine, made from Sauvignon and Semillon grapes.

Cartier Saint-Émilion is a hearty and robust dark red wine, from Cabernet and Merlot grapes.

Two great reds, one white, from the three outstanding districts of Bordeaux. Try Cartier District Wines.

The organization also administers the Multistate Bar Examination that more than 40 states give along with their own bar examinations to lend uniformity to the process.

It was found, as was the case with the Law School Aptitude Test, that the students who scored highest were the top performers in law school as well.

But many people still wonder about the relationship between doing well on tests and achieving success in practice of the law or any other endeavor.

Lawyers Asked for Information

In the next phase of its research, the Educational Testing Service expects to explore this relationship. Information is being collected from lawyers who were graduated 5, 10 and 20 years ago to find out the degree to which they think their legal education prepared them for the day-to-day tasks required of a lawyer.

Not that much research has been conducted to find the connection among good grades, high test scores and success in life—however success is to be defined.

If, eventually, the Law School Aptitude Test and other screening devices are modified or enlarged to provide more information for admissions directors, then some professions may gain.

"What we are likely to find is that the grades and tests scrutinized in the study are reasonably good as far as they go, but that there is far more to lawyering than they can be expected to capture," the report states.

"What we hope for is significant progress in defining and measuring the 'far more' in ways that will help law schools as they re-examine their educational objectives and bar examiners as they bring their examinations into closer consonance with the realities of practice."

A record total of 192 of the 661 school district budgets submitted to New York voters earlier this year went down to defeat, according to figures compiled by the State Education Department. Last year, 156 budgets were rejected on the first submission.

Of those rejected this year, 94 were subsequently approved, including three budgets that made it on the fourth vote, and 11 are scheduled to be voted on again. Eighty-seven districts are now operating on some type of contingency budgets, compared with 62 last year.

Ewald B. Nyquist, the State Education Commissioner, said that an increased number of school budget rejections reflected in large measure a growing public resistance to higher taxes. School budget votes, he added, give taxpayers one of their few opportunities to show their frustrations and concerns over higher costs.

Ithaca College has an unusual problem this year for a small college: too many students.

A spokesman for the coeducational institution in Ithaca, N.Y., said that it opened this month with 120 more students than expected, primarily because of a 3 percent drop in the number of upperclassmen taking leaves of absence or dropping out.

The school, which normally has an enrollment of 4,200, paced several of the excess tudents temporarily in a local motel and converted several large double rooms into triples.

Rutgers University has become one of the first institutions of higher education in the country to extend counsiling services to include faculty and staff members.

The Rutgers University Counseling Service offers confidential assistance to professional and clercal staff members with problems ranging from alcoholism and marital disputes to office conflicts. Ann Baxter, the director, said that the program, which has been operating for nearly two years, was comparable to similar "fringe benefits" provided by major corporations.

"With 12,000 emloyees," she said, "the university administration has been, and is, concerned about the human element."

Louisa Gross Horwitz Prize Won by 2 Research Biologists

Two research biologists—Seymour Benzer and Charles Yanofsky—have been awarded Columbia University's 1976 Louisa Gross Horwitz Prize for outstanding contributions to the study of genetic structure and function.

Dr. Benzer, 54-year-old professor of neuroscience at the California Institute of Technology, developed techniques that made possible a detailed "mapping" of each gene's location within the chromosome. The discovery "rescued the concept of the gene from confusion," according to the Horwitz prize committee.

Dr. Yanofsky's research revealed how other parts of the cell's genetic machinery "read" genetic instructions. The discovery by the 51-year-old Stanford University professor of biology proved that inherited diseases resulted from enzyme malfunctions within the genes.

The Horwitz prize committee described both studies as "classic works." The two researchers will share a $20,000 grant. The Horwitz prize was first awarded in 1967.

MOON SECT SCHOOL IN DIPLOMA DISPUTE

Seminary, in a Brochure, Cites Its Studies for Master's Degree, but Lacks Permission to Confer It

By LEONARD BUDER

The Unification Theological Seminary, founded a year ago with funds provided by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, has been promoting a program of study for a master's degree that it cannot legally confer.

According to Therese M. Stewart, dean of academic affairs at the seminary, which is situated at Barrytown in upstate Dutchess County, the institution has 111 students enrolled in its two-year program for a master's degree in religious education.

"We have informed all our students and all prospective students that we do not have approval for the program, but that we have applied for approval and that when it comes it will be retroactive," Mrs. Stewart said.

But state education authorities, who said they were still reviewing the seminary's application for permission to confer educational degrees, expressed surprise when informed that the institution was mentioning the degree program in a recently published brochure and in news releases.

Byron Connell, assistant to the Deputy State Education Commissioner for Higher and Professional Education, said that the seminary had no authority to confer any degrees and that any literature that gave the impression that it did was "completely improper" and could jeopardize the pending request for such authority.

Foot-Dragging by State Is Seen

Michael Young Warder, chief administrator of the seminary, said that the state had been dragging its feet on the application for degree-granting power.

He said that department officials had first said that a decision—to be made by the State Board of Regents—would be forthcoming in the fall of 1975, and that the seminary was still waiting. Its application was dated April 29, 1975.

"The State Education Department should look at the academic merits of the program and not be concerned about the controversy surrounding the church," Mr. Warder added.

A brochure issued by the seminary says under "Program of Study":

"The two year Master of Religious Education Program leads to a professional degree and is intended for those whose primary responsibility will be to teach religious studies. . ."

One of the news releases, unlike the brochure, does say: "We have applied for an academic charter from the State of New York, which allows us to grant degrees. We expect the charter to be issued early this fall."

Mr. Warder said that the seminary had not misled or deceived any students. All current students are members of the church attending on scholarships, he said. Mr. Warder said that nonchurch members would be accepted as students after state accreditation was received.

Approval from the state, Mr. Warder said, would enable the seminary to join various academic associations and "qualify for grants from Federal agencies and private foundations."

Greece Modernizing Its Schools; Textbooks Lose Elitist Language

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

ATHENS, Sept. 23—When Greek school children open their new books this month, they will be able to read them—for a change.

Heretofore texts have been written in an artificial language called katharevusa, which is virtually incomprehensible to many Greeks. Now they will be in demotiki, the spoken language.

This is one of several major educational reforms introduced recently by the Government of Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis. The age for compulsory schooling has been raised from 12 to 15. More emphasis will be placed on technical and practical training and less on such subjects as ancient Greek.

The main motive behind the changes is Greece's prospective entry into the European Economic Community. "To be able to compete against Europe we have to be on the same educational level," explained Alexandros Karanikolas, an education official.

At the same time the Prime Minister has artfully defused some of the most emotional issues dividing the nation. He draws most of his support from the center and right; reform of the language has long been one of the left's strongest debating points.

Some Find Changes Inadequate

Some who welcome the reforms say they do not go far enough. Even the demotic language, they note, retains its archaic accent marks and confusing alphabet. They also wonder whether the Government has not just changed the structure and method of education without revising the underlying values and philosophy.

The language problem goes back to the formation of the modern Greek state in the 1830's. A small, primitive corner of the Ottoman Empire, the new nation was hailed in Western Europe as a reincarnation of ancient Greece.

"It was a silly, romantic idea," said Harry T. Hionides, a teacher and author. "We were really descendants of the Byzantines, but Europe told us we were the inheritors of ancient Greece, and we believed them."

Greek scholars, most of them expatriates, decided that the demotic language was too vulgar and too foreign since it was heavily laden with Turkish and Italian words. The country, too insecure and unsure of its identity to stand on its own feet, welcomed the luster of ancient Athens.

Based on the Ancient Tongue

The scholars devised katharevusa—the root of the name is the word for pure—a cleansed language based on the ancient tongue that became the badge of the educated elite and an important source of power and profit because the common people could not read the newspapers, the laws or even the instructions on a medicine bottle.

The political left pressed the cause of demotiki, "the language of the people," while the right identified katharevusa with tradition, religion and, eventually, anti-Communism. Riots erupted over the issue periodically and once even brought down a government.

Gradually demotiki gained influence. Poets and novelists used it almost exclusively. By the early 1960's some newspapers had adopted a modified version. The military junta that seized power in 1967 tried to reimpose katharevusa but only succeeded in discrediting it for good. Since the junta fell two years ago demotiki has infiltrated such institutions as television and the law courts.

The official demise of katharevusa amounts to a mercy killing, the Education Minister, George Rallis, said when he introduced one of the reform bills in Parliament this month. For the first time a piece of legislation had been drafted in demotiki.

Nine Years Now Compulsory

Starting next year nine years of schooling, including three years of junior high will be compulsory instead of six. At age 15 students will then be able to take examinations for an academically oriented senior high school or enter a new chain of vocational-technical schools.

High school students formerly spent a great deal of time and money at special coaching schools, cramming for university entrance exams; last year 85,000 competed for 15,000 places. The new system eliminates the entrance exams and promises a higher education to all who perform well in academic high schools.

Officials hope that the new vocational schools will produce the technicians needed by an economy that is rapidly shifting from agriculture to industry.

"Education is such a mess that we can get out of it in one or two years," said Mr. Hionides, who teaches at a private high school. "It will take 10 or 20 years

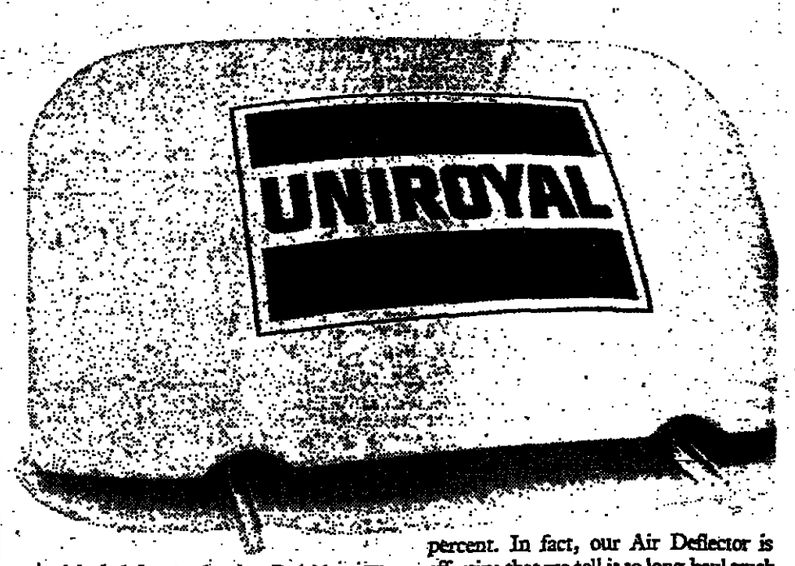
DISCOVERED BY UNIROYAL:

A simple piece of plasti that could save long-haul trucker 10 to 15% on fuel



The Uniroyal Air Deflector guarantees truckers savings—by foiling air resistance in sophisticated ways invented by Uniroyal mathematicians and missile scientists. Here's why it's needed, how it works.

America's truckers are paying a staggering bill—to the wind.

At 55 miles per hour, a large trailer truck uses about as much horsepower overcoming air resistance as it does to haul its load. (See graph below.)

The cost of this extra horsepower: easily $500,000,000 worth of diesel fuel a year for all of America's long-haul truckers.

The problem is those big, square truck rigs. They slam into the onrushing air with as much as 96 square feet of frontal surface.

(A fast-moving truck always churns up its own turbulent head wind—for the same reason you'll feel a breeze on your face when you drive an automobile with the windows open.)

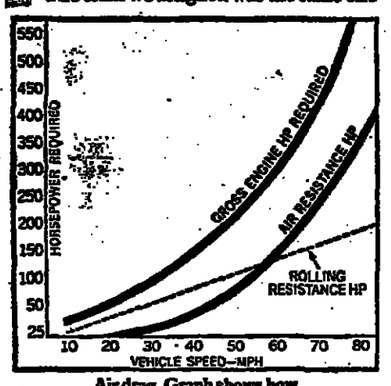
In fact, if you've ever passed a truck on a highway and felt your car suddenly shaking or swerving, you have an even better idea of the powerful forces a truck engine must overcome.

Uniroyal missile scientists find fuel-saving solution

Uniroyal spends over $50 million a year in research, development and engineering. In 1974 we devoted some of that effort to improving the aerodynamics of truck rigs.

The team we assigned was the same one we used on the Poseidon missile program. And what they came up with was the remarkable Uniroyal Air Deflector.

It's a simple-looking piece of fiber-reinforced plastic. But a lot of advanced science went into its design—from aerodynamic engineering, to stress analysis based on the same advanced mathematical model we used-in helping to develop Poseidon. The results were amazing.



Air drag. Graph shows how air drag increasingly robs horsepower as a truck approaches highway speeds.

Wind thwarts truck. Smoke in wind tunnel photo shows air turbulence at 55 mph. Trucks must put out extra horsepower and burn extra fuel to batter through this resistance.

Air drag cut 20%

Our Air Deflector moves head wind airstreams cleanly around the top and sides of trailers. And it does this without multiplying frontal mass—the force that creates extra fuel consumption.

Less advanced deflectors have flat planes that can set air to boiling along the top and sides of a trailer. Our deflector has only curved surfaces. So it works to avoid this kind of needless turbulence.

Unique "fine tuning" for best efficiency

In addition, a unique feature of our Air Deflector makes it easily adjustable to the height of different trailers that a truck may pull. And to the distance between the truck cab and the trailer.

This enables truckers to "fine-tune" the Air Deflector for maximum reduction of air drag.

Result: Air drag is cut by roughly 20 percent. In fact, our Air Deflector is effective that we sell it to long-haul truck with a money-back guarantee of 10 perc minimum fuel savings on long-haul.*

That means our Air Deflector can j for itself three times over in the first y for the average long-haul van trucker.

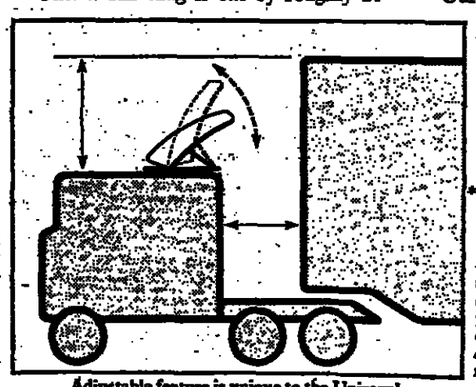
Over 1,400 Uniroyal discoveries

When issued, the patent pending on Uniroyal Air Deflector will be one of o 1,400 patents granted to us in the past years. In addition, our 3,000 scient engineers and technicians are active many other fields.

They've discovered ways to incr crop yields. To reduce energy consump in a variety of industries. To prev common fire hazards. Even to impr the golf ball.

The flood of Uniroyal discoveries paid off in substantial growth. We' company with $1.6 billion in assets th days. But we like to think our biggest a isn't even on the balance sheets.

Our urge to discover.



Adjustable feature is unique to the Uniroyal Air Deflector. So is its advanced aerodynamic design. Both promote maximum fuel savings.

For more information ab the Uniroyal Air Deflector, w to Dave Streed, Uniroyal, I Engineered Systems Departm Mishawaka, Indiana 45644. phone (219) 255-2181.

*We guarantee the Uniroyal Air Deflector reduce fuel consumption by a minimum 10% on line-haul. Guarantee requires ins tion according to manufacturer's instruct and applies to the initial order of 1 to 10 e ation units. Customers not satisfied after a day trial period may return the unit(s) fre prepaid to their Uniroyal dealer within days from the date of purchase. The full chase price (less installation charges) wil refunded.

Truck thwarts wind. With Uniroyal's aerodynamic Air Deflector, turbulence is tamed. Trucks use less horsepower, save 10 to 15 percent on fuel.

Manila's Hotel Boom May Turn Into Bust

By DAVID A. ANDELMAN
Special to The New York Times

MANILA, Sept. 28—The glittering showplace of the Philippines —the 700-room Plaza Hotel —staged its gala opening last night, but there were no beliboys, no room clerks and no guests.

The celebration saw more than 2,000 guests sampling smoked salmon and ham en croute on tables groaning under *hors d'oeuvres while workers still ham*mered away on scaffolding on floors high above. It was all only too clearly symbolic.

One of the world's most spectacular building booms —14 new international-class hotels in barely as many months —promises also to be one of the most spectacular failures, at least for the foreseeable future.

Mrs. Marcos Smiles Grimly

"We postponed this grand opening for one month," President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines recalled to the guests last night. "It was just a month ago that I visited the site. I saw the earth-moving equipment, the bulldozers everywhere. So I pulled aside the Governor of Metro Manila, who just happens to be my wife. And I suggested we postpone the opening."

He turned and grinned broadly at Mrs. Imelda Marcos, the First Lady. She smiled grimly. The Plaza Hotel, *an integral part of the sprawling Philip*pines international convention center, where later this week more than 3,000 of the world's leading bankers and financiers will converge for the annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank, was to have been her crown jewel.

Its first guests were to have been such luminaries as Robert S. McNamara, president of the World Bank. But weeks ago Mr. McNamara was shifted to an older hotel that, completed years ago, is one of the few hotels in Manila anyone is sure of these days.

The problem, of course, is that in the less than two years since the Philippines was chosen as the site of the annual meetings of the fund and bank, everyone wanted to get into the act. When the whole thing began, there was, by best estimates, a shortage of at least 3,000 hotel rooms to house more tahn 5,000 delegates and guests expected.

Occupancy rates in the old standbys —the Hilton, the Hyatt and the Intercontinental —were hovering near 90 percent or more.

24-Hour, 3-Shift Operations

But in the last two years, 13,000 new hotel rooms went on the drawing boards. And every one of them was built.

At the Plaza, nearly 9,000 workers have been pressed into 24-hour three-shift operations. And because it is the First Lady's pet project, workers, particularly skilled carpenters, have been pirated from other construction sites, details rushed and precautions overlooked until three months ago, as workers hustled ironworks of upper floors onto concrete barely dry beneath it, the entire ceiling in the grand ballroom caved in and 12 workers were killed.

Several construction companies, most of whose leaders have some ties with the Marcos family and the manifold business interests of their friends and relatives, are harvesting a bonanza from the frantic construction pace.

More than 30,000 workers have been kept busy on these projects for more than a year and a half.

How Business Is Done

Still other friends and relatives of the Marcos family are in on the ownership of a number of these hotels. None of this even raises any eyebrows here because this is how business is done in the Philippines. But what does concern some of the more thoughtful economists and businessmen is the huge volume of Government capital committed to these projects.

Most of the hotels have received some or all of their financing from such

Dow Off 18.20 on Fears Of a Setback for Recovery

Dip in Economic Index and Factory Job Loss Cited

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN

The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 18.20 points yesterday as fears of an economic downturn rippled through Wall Street.

The bad news for the stock market came at the opening bell following a Government report that its index of leading economic indicators declined 1.5 percent in August, its first drop in 18 months.

This report, coupled with a rise in factory unemployment last month to the highest level since November 1975, touched off conjecture that the steady economic recovery following the worst recession since the 1930's was in danger.

The Dow, with none of its 30 components advancing, tumbled steadily during the busy session to close at 994.93. In moving down through the 1,000 level for the 13th time since last spring, the blue-chip Dow suffered its biggest setback since a 19.22-point drop on May 24.

Analysts Discount Decline

Analysts tended yesterday to discount the importance of the August drop in the economic indicators, generally viewing it as a temporary phenomenon.

Greg A. Smith, portfolio strategist at Goldman, Sachs, in likening the latest reading of the economic indicators to "a kick in the shin," said that his firm continued to look for a favorable response in coming months from both the domestic economy and the stock market.

"We're simply going through a period like that of late 1975, when there was similar investor nervousness about the economy's continuing to improve," he noted. "Then, in late December of last year, when a pickup in the leading indicators was reported, the stock market took off for the races."

A similar analysis was offered in Philadelphia by Jack W. Lavery, economist for the Provident National Bank. "I'm not terribly disturbed by the drop reported today," he said. "It does not suggest a material flattening in the recovery."

Yesterday's performance, coming on the heels of market psychology already weakened by the report late last week of a huge increase in the nation's basic money supply, contrasted sharply with the ebullient session of just one week ago. At that time, the Dow industrials surged 20 points in their best advance in more than a year and finished at 1,014.79; highest level for the average in 44 months.

The underpinning for that advance was provided by the recent downward trend in interest rates and the hopes—now questionable—of a further easing in credit conditions by the Federal Reserve Board.

Declining issues outnumbered gainers on the New York Stock Exchange by an 11-to-4 ratio.

Kodak Is Dow's Biggest Loser

Eastman Kodak, the biggest point loser in the Dow average, fell 3¾ to 88¼ and traded at its lowest price since last year. This decline reflected the impact of a lawsuit alleging patent infringement in Canada brought by Polaroid, Kodak's big competitor in the instant camera and film market.

Polaroid, after selling on Monday at a new 1976 high, declined 1¼ to 43¾.

A market standout was Sabine Royalty, climbing 4¼ points to 54, after moving as high as 56 and as low as 50¼. Sabine, trading for the first time in a week, has announced plans for a tax-free merger with the Hamilton Brothers Petroleum Corporation. Sabine would be the surviv-

Drop, First in 18 Months, Seen as 'Pause' in Economic Recovery

By STEVEN RATTNER

The Government index designed to predict the nation's future economic trends took a sharp drop in August after rising steadily for 17 consecutive months, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Some economists said the 1.5 percent drop in leading indicators—considered large in comparison to the index's average monthly movement—provided new evidence that the national economic recovery might be sputtering.

"The fact of the matter is that the economy entered a pause in April and clearly didn't leave it in August," said Otto Eckstein, president of Data Resources Inc., an economic research firm. "The drop in the indicators is so large that you cannot strike it off as an aberration."

Decline Unexpected

However, a number of economists cautioned that the August decline in the indicators was not unexpected after such a long sustained increase and that several months of significant declines would be needed to signal a major reversal in the country's economic fortunes.

In addition, economists who did not attach much importance to yesterday's announcement said the separate numbers used to compile the index had already been reported and widely discussed.

In reaction to the announcement yesterday morning, the stock market plunged more than 18 points, its worst drop in four months.

The decline in the leading indicators was attributed primarily to problems in two major economic sectors that have been consistently troublesome: employment and capital spending.

According to preliminary figures, the layoff rate, considered a sign of business strength, rose to 1.5 percent in August from a revised 1.1 percent in July.

Similarly, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, considered a sign of capital spending, fell to a preliminary $7.50 billion (in 1967 dollars), from a revised $8.57 billion in July. The figures raise new questions about the strength of capital spending, which only recently began to display the energy that economists had expected from that sector to fuel the recovery in its later stages.

Building Permits Increase

Out of 11 components of the index that were available yesterday, three rose while eight declined. A substantial decline was also shown by the average workweek.

The only component to increase significantly was building permits and economists said yesterday they were heartened because construction had been among the weakest sectors of the economy and had only recently begun to move tentatively upward.

John W. Kendrick, chief economist for the Commerce Department said in a tele-

Ford's Car Prices Up 5.7%, or $271, On Its Base Models

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS
Special to The New York Times

DETROIT, Sept. 28—The Ford Motor Company announced today that the average "sticker" price of its base-model cars for 1977 would rise by 5.7 percent, or $271 a car. This compares with 5.8 percent, or $269, announced last month by the industry's pricing leader, the General Motors Corporation.

But in the big-car segment of the market, where the coming year's most important selling battle is expected to be waged, Ford raised its prices 5.9 percent, or $343 a car—compared with 4.9 percent, or $290 a car, for General Motors.

G.M. is bringing out a new line of full-sized family and luxury cars that are 700 pounds lighter, a foot shorter, and more conserving of gasoline than their 1976-model predecessors. Ford, on the other hand, is continuing to build big cars on the 1976 pattern, and has hoped to capitalize on G.M.'s gamble at a time when buyers have shown renewed interest in the big cars.

Exception in Luxury Cars

When Ford released its prices today, however, it was found that, in the most popular big-car lines, G.M.'s base-model sticker prices for the most part will be $125 to $446 less than Ford's. The Ford LTD four-door sedan, for example, will sell for $5,152, or $251.35 more than its chief G.M. competitor, the Chevrolet Impala four-door sedan, which lists for $4,900.65. The major exception was in the luxury-car segment, where Mercury's Lincolns will cost $180 to $228 less than Cadillac's De Villes.

On the surface, it would appear that G.M. is in the stronger pricing position. But much depends on how well General Motors succeeds in convincing buyers that the new G.M. cars are as roomy on the inside as their 1976 forebears, and that the driver will be sacrificing nothing of real import. Ford will be attempting to counter this argument by telling buyers it is still "the home of the whopper," and that the consumer is getting more car for the money.

Industry observers were cautious in drawing pricing comparisons between the Ford and G.M. big-car lines because it was unclear just how much changes in equipment—particularly in the extensively redesigned G.M. models—had altered the relative values. A Ford spokesman asserted that, when such factors were taken into account, the LTD, for example, was only $10 higher than the Impala.

On Sale This Weekend

Both companies' new models are going on sale this weekend, as are those of the Chrysler Corporation and the American Motors Corporation. Chrysler and A.M.C. have not yet announced their prices.

RCA Looking Into Any Involvement In Tax Problems of Its Ex-Chairman

By RICHARD PHALON

The RCA Corporation is investigating the possibility that the company itself or some of its employees might have been involved in the tax problems of its recently resigned chairman, Anthony L. Conrad, a regulatory source said yesterday.

Robert L. Werner, executive vice president and general counsel of the company, confirmed that an internal investigation was in process, and said it was being conducted by an independent outside counsel, Fowler Hamilton—a partner in the law firm of Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen & Hamilton—in conjunction with RCA's accountants, Arthur Young & Company.

Mr. Werner said it would be "inappropriate" to talk about the areas that the accountants—under the supervision of the RCA board's three-man audit committee—were looking into. He added that the primary objective of the internal investigation was "to determine the accuracy" of Mr. Conrad's statement outlining his problems with the Internal Revenue Service.

The regulatory source, however, said the investigation was aimed at establishing "whether anyone, so to speak, was doing anything wrong."

Mr. Conrad, on the advice of his attorney, Boris Kostelanetz, is not talking to newspapermen and Mr. Kostelanetz himself told a reporter yesterday that "we have nothing to say."

Mr. Conrad—president of RCA since 1971 and chief executive officer since last Nov. 5, when a "palace revolution" deposed his predecessor Robert W. Sarnoff —was forced to resign on Sept. 16.

The resignation came after the 55-year-old Mr. Conrad, who had spent almost all his adult life with the company, disclosed to directors that he had failed to file income tax returns for the years 1971-5.

Beyond indicating that he had taken "corrective action" by belatedly filing the returns and asserting that withholding had covered almost all of the Federal tax liability on the $1.2 million in salary and incentive payments he received during those years, Mr. Conrad declined to give directors a comprehensive account of his problems.

At the time, however, in a 300-word statement, Mr. Conrad did say that his tax problems had nothing to do with the company. He also said he had "neither given nor received improper payments of any kind."

Mr. Werner said yesterday he knew of "nothing that would be contrary to Mr. Conrad's statement," but he added that the investigation "is still going on."

The internal check could prove to be an important first step in amending the registration statement on a proposed $130-million stock offering RCA temporarily withdrew when Mr. Conrad left.

Mr. Conrad's departure is a material fact that would have to be explained in the registration filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

It could not be determined yesterday whether the S.E.C was conducting its own investigation into Mr. Conrad's departure, or whether the Government agency would rely on RCA's own finding's to establish if the former executive's tax problems were purely personal or somehow involved his corporate activities.

Kleindienst Reports $250,000 Fee Tied to Teamsters

By ROBERT D. HERSHEY Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 —Richard G. Kleindienst, an Attorney General in the Nixon Administration, said he received a $250,000 fee last spring for about five hours' work helping an insurance company obtain business from the Teamsters Union.

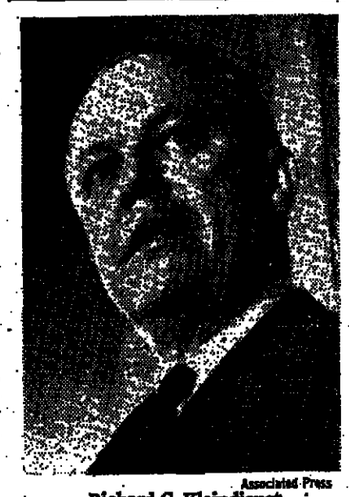
Mr. Kleindienst, now a Washington lawyer, disclosed his role in this transaction and others under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission in testimony he gave here early this month and filed in Federal District Court today.

The fee, he said, was subsequently split evenly with another intermediary, Thomas Webb of Washington, who was paid by a check issued by Mr. Kleindienst's firm, Welch, Morgan & Kleindienst. It appeared that Mr. Kleindienst's role resulted only from a long-standing friendship with Frank Fitzsimmons, the Teamster president.

Major Negotiating Role

The S.E.C. charged in Federal District Court here last Friday that the Teamsters insurance premiums were fraudulently diverted by four men who devised an elaborate ploy —described by the commission as "a textbook case" —to loot the companies that received them.

Mr. Kleindienst was not named as a defendant, but his testimony filed by the commission with the court disclosed that he played a major negotiating role in two transactions other than the one by which the Old Security Life Insurance Company of Kansas City acquired the Teamsters insurance business.



Associated Press

Richard G. Kleindienst

The former Government official was neither at his office nor at home this afternoon and could not be reached for comment on his testimony.

A woman at the law firm confirmed rumors that Mr. Kleindienst was leaving the three-man partnership Oct. 1 but said this had nothing to do with his involvement with those charged by the S.E.C.

Mr. Kleindienst said during his appearance before the S.E.C. on Sept. 3—one that produced 157 pages of testimony — that it was Mr. Webb who introduced him to Joseph Hauser, one of the principal figures behind the alleged insurance-looting plan.

Mr. Kleindienst said he met both Mr. Webb and Mr. Fitzsimmons at a Washington country club while he was Deputy Attorney General from January 1969 to March 1972.

When asked about his discussions with Mr. Fitzsimmons involving the insurance deal, Mr. Kleindienst replied that he told the union official that he had been employed by Old Security and that he repeated to him what he had been told by Mr. Webb.

"Old Security Life Insurance Company was one of the life insurance companies that had been recommended to the Central States Pension Fund as qualified to write this kind of business, that it was a good company, that it had submitted the lowest bid and that if those facts indeed were true, that anything Mr. Fitzsimmons could do to help cause to bring that result about I'd appreciate," Mr. Kleindienst testified.

Mr. Kleindienst added that Mr. Fitzsimmons had said, "Old friend, I'll look into it and call you back."

The business was later awarded to Old

Money Managers Need Skill—and Luck

By ROBERT METZ

Last week's suggestion by Harrison J. Goldin, New York City's Comptroller, that the United States Trust Company and Citibank be dropped as investment advisers for the municipal employee retirement systems for inadequate performance on common stocks has distinct overtones of irony.

In a recent compilation of the performance of the nation's top 100 banks for the five-year period ended June 30, a somewhat longer period than Mr. Goldin had in mind, U.S. Trust did show a negative performance in the management of equity investments while some other banks in that difficult period showed gains. However, U.S. Trust turned in the fourth best performance in the period among the major banks with regard to investments in fixed-income securities.

The performance compilations appear in the Sept. 13 issue of Pensions & Investments, a publication of Grain Communications of Chicago. In a separate article in that same issue, James Degnan, a U.S. Trust vice president, is singled out for high praise in the management of fixed-interest investments.

Mr. Degnan was mentioned along with 16 other money managers—most of them specialists in stocks—in a poll of a dozen pension fund administrators who have broad experience in dealing with bank trust departments. The money managers were called the best and brightest in the nation.

No one at Citibank received a comparable mention, but the bank's fixed-interest performance also ranked high—No. 15 out of 100—in a five-year period. Moreover, investors are increasingly viewing performance on an overall basis.

What the performance of leading banks suggests is that almost no money manager is good at all phases of the game and that those that are rarely manage to stay on top forever.

Take the case of the Summit and Elizabeth Trust Company, a bank so small until this year that it did not rank among the largest banks and was thus unrated though its performance was sensational.

The bank, whose employee benefit assets under management grew from $35 million to $200 million in less than three years, turned in the best performance of all for the five years ended June 30. Summit posted a compound annual rate of return for its equity commingled fund of 11.6 percent, substantially ahead of its nearest rival, the First National Bank of Birmingham (Ala.), which had a gain of 8.8 percent.

Summit's success can be traced to its strategy of buying high-quality growth stocks when the market for such stocks was strong and moving to nearly all cash and equivalents when the market turned bearish.

The fascinating side has to do with the bank's performance in the latest 12 months. In a period when many of the banks were doing well, Summit's commingled equity portfolio dropped 5.9 percent. What happended was that the bank went back into growth stocks at the beginning of 1975, a time when those stocks did poorly. With $200 million under management, the bank was either unable to move to cash or failed to follow its past strategy for some other reason.

Drop in Leading Indicators Spurs Optimism on Bonds

By JOHN H. ALLAN

A large drop in the Government's leading economic indicators announced yesterday morning wiped out the credit market's concern with rapid growth in the money supply and replaced it with a more optimistic view of the outlook for bond prices. The fixed-income securities market recovered, and new bond issues sold more readily as traders and investors concluded—for the moment, at least—that the demand for borrowed funds was not likely to pick up quickly.

Credit Markets

The Treasury sold $2.5 billion of five-year notes at an average rate of 7.08 percent, which was below the 7.15 to 7.20 percent range that the Government securities market expected late Monday evening.

Florida sold $75 million of high-grade tax-exempt bonds that were priced to yield from 3.20 percent to 6.30 percent from 1977 to 2006. For longer maturities, these yields were as much as 20 basis points lower than Aa-rated Ohio bonds marketed last week. And yet the Florida bonds sold quickly. The unsold balance late yesterday was $8.28 million.

Dealers Less Apprehensive

In the corporate bond market, the Household Finance Corporation's $175-million note offering scheduled today was increased in size to $200 million. A small issue of Interstate Power Company preferred stock, rated Baa/BBB, was priced to yield 8.70 percent, well below the 9.80 percent on a similar offering in late July. And yet the newly offered shares sold out quickly.

In all three main sectors of the credit markets—Governments, corporates and tax-exempts—bond dealers became less apprehensive yesterday and perhaps more ready to believe that the summer-long trend toward lower interest rates was still intact.

Besides the drop in the leading economic indicators, the credit markets benefited from a Government forecast that the Federal budget deficit during the current "transitional quarter" would be smaller than the earlier forecast.

The Federal Reserve again provided temporary reserves to the banking system by entering into more repurchase agreements with Government securities dealers. The Federal funds rate, the basic short-term interest rate in the money market, had risen to 5½ percent, or ¼-point above its level most of the time since late July, when the Fed added the bank reserves.

With the credit market's sharp decline late last week and its partial recovery yesterday, some traders seemed to be tired of the buffeting they had to take from unexpected news. "It's a difficult market," one Government securities dealer commented. "Every day becomes a crap game."

Still, most investment bankers were pleased with the change in the marketplace. An underwriting group led by the Chase Manhattan Bank won the Florida bond issue, which was also notable because it was priced to yield a full point or more below Florida bonds marketed on Sept. 24, 1975, when tax-exempt bond yields reach their highest levels on record.

The Florida bonds sold a year ago carried the highest yields for a double-A state issue—yields ranging from 4.50 percent on three-year bonds to 7.60 percent on 30-year bonds. That scale contrasted with a range of 3.50 to 6.30 percent on Florida's new bond issue.

In another tax-exempt new bond development, Standard & Poor's rated an $83.66 million issue of the city of Yonkers, as BBB+, while Moody's reported that it was still conducting its review of the bonds. As a result, underwriters said they had no tentative terms for the bonds, which are scheduled for sale this week.

In the corporate bond market, $800 million of fixed-income securities for the Alaska pipeline moved through different stages of the financing process. Morgan Stanley & Company completed the sale of $500 million of 9¾ percent notes, due in 1993 and 1998, of Sohio-BP Trans Alaska Pipeline Capital Inc. to institutional investors.

An underwriting network headed by Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Company offered $300 million of Arco Pipe Line Company notes, and it estimated that about 75 percent of them were sold to investors yesterday.

The total included $150 million of 7.50 percent notes maturing in 1982 and priced at par and $150 million of 7.75 percent notes priced at 99.65 percent to yield 7.80 percent. The notes are rated Aa by Moody's and AA by Standard & Poor's.

The Interstate Power Company, a moderate-sized utility that provides electricity and natural gas to parts of Iowa, Illinois and Minnesota, sold $25 million of A-rated 25-year bonds to a group headed by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith.

The bonds were priced to yield 8.70 percent, but unlike the company's preferred, the stock did not sell quickly and an estimated $18 million remained in the underwriters' hands.

Interstate Power's preference stock, awarded to an E. F. Hutton & Company group, was marketed at $26.206 a share, a price that produced an 8.70 percent yield with its $2.28 annual dividend rate.

The Household Finance enlarged offering, to be made by a Goldman, Sachs & Company group, is expected to consist of two $100 million issues. There will be 7.85's due in 1986 priced at par and 8¾'s of 2003 priced at 99.20 to yield 8.45 percent. Both are rated Aa/AA.

5-Year Notes at 7.08% Sold by U.S. Treasury

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—The Treasury sold today $2.5 billion of five-year notes at an average return of 7.08 percent. The department received $4.17 billion of tenders for the notes, which will carry a coupon interest rate of 7 percent.

Accepted tenders included 23 percent of the bids at the highest yield. The Treasury awarded $425 million of noncompetitive tenders at the average price of 99.641.

In the sale bids ranged from a low yield of 7.02 percent to a high yield of 7.10 percent.

The Treasury now sells five-year notes toward the end of each quarter. The 7.08 percent average rate compared with 7.63 percent in the preceding note sale on June 30 and with 7.38 percent on March 25. The notes are sold in minimum denominations of $1,000.

Variable-Rate Time Certificates

By LEONARD SLOANE

Bank depositors may be able to buy a time certificate with an interest rate based on the money market rates at the time of purchase if an idea circulating in official circles in Washington successfully makes the long journey between concept and regulation. And if it does, time certificates based on the then current money rate—known in the industry as variable-rate time certificates—could offer some important advantages to depositors.

At present, certificates of deposit issued by commercial banks, savings banks and savings and loan associations are for fixed interest rates depending on the maturity. Interest rate ceilings are one-quarter of 1 percent less at commercial banks than at the two groups of thrift institutions.

For example, the ceiling for six to seven-year certificates is 7½ percent at commercial banks and 7¾ percent at the other two types of financial institutions. Similarly, the ceiling for certificates that mature in two-and-a-half to four years is 6½ percent at commercial banks and 6¾ percent at savings banks and savings and loans.

With variable-rate certificates, consumers could get an insured deposit with rates comparable to those offered by Treasury bills, other short-term securities and shares of money market mutual funds. In addition, depositors would have the convenience of less frequent reinvestment at no transaction charge.

Banks would also benefit since there would probably be less erosion of deposits when significantly higher interest rates are available in the money and capital markets. Furthermore, this new instrument might be cheaper for banks than the existing fixed-rate certificates with longer maturities.

Proposals for variable-rate certificates have been voiced from time to time for many years—at least since the late nineteen-sixties when the banking community began to be troubled by disintermediation. This multisyllabic word refers to the movement of funds from bank accounts directly into various financial instruments such as Federal and municipal bonds.

More than two years ago, Frank Wille—then chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and a former New York State Superintendent of Banking—presented a variable-rate proposal in a speech before the annual conference of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

"Would it not be better," he said, "if the thrift institutions of the country could offer a time deposit which fluctuated with the market rates on Treasury bills and notes rather than being forced to offer only a 7½ percent certificate to which they would find themselves committed for a full four years."

The latest official statement about this proposal was again made by Mr. Wille just before he left his post at the F.D.I.C. in March.

In requesting comments from the public on variable-rate deposits, he suggested that they be adjusted quarterly based on prevailing three-month Treasury bill rates and that substantial penalties continue to be imposed for premature withdrawals.

Among the features of this kind of certificate, he proposed that banking institutions issue them in minimum amounts of $1,000 and minimum maturities of two years. He noted that banks could specify a floor—as high as 4½ percent but still below the regular passbook rates of 5 percent and 5¼ percent—below which interest would not be allowed to fall. They could also impose, under this plan, a maximum rate as long as their advertising and deposit contracts disclosed this "upside" limit.

Before a variable-rate certificate could be authorized, it would have to be approved by the Inter-Agency Coordinating Committee on Bank Regulation. The agencies represented on this committee are the F.D.I.C., the Federal Reserve Board, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

About 75 percent of the public comments regarding variable rates were favorable, although many of them asked for modifications of the proposal. For instance, the American Bankers Associations are for fixed maximum interest rates depending on the maturity. Interest rate ceilings are one-quarter of 1 percent less at commercial banks than at the two groups of thrift institutions.

None of the agencies has formally commented on the variable rate proposal, although it was discussed by the committee before Mr. Wille made his statement.

The Federal Reserve Board noted this summer, however, that Public Law 94-200 required approval by the House of Representatives and the Senate before it could eliminate or reduce any interest rate differential in effect as of last December.

With Treasury bills now at relatively low levels, this may be the time when full and unhurried consultation regarding variable-rate certificates can take place between the regulatory agencies, the financial institutions and representatives of consumer groups. And this much-discussed proposal could reach the stage when final action is taken in the not-too-distant future.

This announcement is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation of an offer to buy these securities. The offer is made only by the Prospectus.

Technology

Savings for Bell in New Techniques

By VICTOR K. McELHENY

Telephone customers in Utica and Syracuse, N. Y., hardly know it, but they are taking part in a significant step in automating the work of the Bell System's many thousands of operators.

Since May, using a linkage called the Remote Trunk Arrangement, operators of the New York Telephone Company, sitting at consoles in the two cities, have been able to act as a single team for aiding long-distance and other calls.

The Utica and Syracuse operators are using the modernistic equipment of what is called the Traffic Service Position System, or T.S.P.S.

Now used in about 110 densely populated areas, the T.S.P.S. consoles can call on the computer controls of electronic switching systems to enter billing information automatically by pushing buttons instead of scribbling on cards. Operators release calls in about 45 seconds, on the average, instead of 60.

Since the first installation of the automated T.S.P.S. in Morristown, N.J., in January 1969, the equipment has allowed teams of up to 60 operators to be located 50 miles and more from the call-switching exchanges whose customers they are aiding. The operators can be gathered at easy-to-reach highway or public transit crossroads.

With the Remote Trunk Arrangement, according to planners at Bell Telephone Laboratories, the T.S.P.S. pattern of grouping operators will cover the entire nation within a few years.

Steve Bauman of the laboratory in Indian Hill, Ill., that concentrates on the operator-automation efforts, says large annual cost savings are anticipated.

By 1980, he said, the Bell System anticipates installing a total of 167 T.S.P.S. setups. The annual cost, owing to the investment in advanced equipment, is forecast at $260 million. But the investment will reduce the need for operators by 33,000, at a saving in salaries of $650 million. The net annual saving would be $390 million.

The Remote Trunk Arrangements at 48 of the T.S.P.S. centers will reduce needs for operators by an additional 8,000, at a further saving in salaries of $160 million. The additional net saving would be $100 million, Mr. Bauman said in a long-distance telephone interview.

An additional Remote Trunk Arrangement is to be put into service, along with a T.S.P.S. center, in Daytona Beach, Fla., late this year, followed by other R.T.A. setups in Harrisburg, Pa., and Portland, Me., in the first half of next year.

The spread of the two technologies, Mr. Bauman said, is to open the way for automated long-distance calls from coin telephones, starting in Phoenix, Ariz. The system would cut requirements for operators by at least another 2,500, for a net annual saving of $40 million, he said.

Study Shows Savings In Recycled Aluminum

As the economic interests affected by moves toward environmental cleanup become larger and more vocal, the Environmental Protection Agency is sharpening its estimates of the savings in energy and output of pollutants from such steps as recycling aluminum and steel cans.

The Federal agency recently granted clearance for the Calspan Corporation of Buffalo to disclose details of a $91,000 study, completed last year by Dr. Robert C. Ziegler, the project engineer, and his colleagues. Among other findings, the study showed that aluminum made from recycled cans had an environmental cost only one-twentieth of that of aluminum made from bauxite ore.

The study included calculations of energy use and pollution from such phases on metal-processing as mining, milling and transportation. It is called "Environmental Impacts of Virgin and Recycled Steel and Aluminum," and is available for $5.50 from the National Technical Information Service, Springfield, Va. 22151.

Optical Fibers Seen As Growing Business

The recent emergence of so-called optical fibers as practical pathways for transmitting electronic signals is revising upward the investment community's forecasts of the size of the business. The fibers are hair-thin threads of glass, with precisely controlled composition, that serve as pipes for laser beams carrying large bundles of messages with no electrical interference and little chance of error.

One forecast, by researcher Philip Leigh of the First Boston Corporation, estimates that an industry that at present ships about $5 million worth of goods annually will grow to $175 million in 1981, including $100 million in sales to the communications industry and $30 million to computer manufacturers.

Mr. Leigh bases his estimate for the communications field on a present annual demand for 200 million feet of coaxial cable and 400 billion feet of other wire, accounting for 20 percent of the nation's requirement for scarce copper, growing to some 270 million feet of coaxial and 500 billion feet of other wire in 1981.

If optical fiber cable, replacing 100 copper wires, costs an expected 20 cents a foot in 1981, Mr. Leigh estimates, the new technology could well get 5 to 10 percent of the market, generating domestic sales of $50 million to $100 million and foreign sales of $25 million to $50 million.

The United States, he indicated, would oppose any effort to establish a "right rate" for currencies or any effort to design a mathematical formula for determining when a nation was improperly "manipulating" its exchange rate. Instead, Mr. Yeo favored a "case by case" approach with the use of "judgment" by the I.M.F. management and executive board.

The revised articles of agreement of the I.M.F., now in the process of ratification by Congress and other national parliaments, outlaw manipulation of exchange rates to give nations competitive advantages in world trade. The I.M.F. is supposed to oversee the workings of the system, which now includes floating rates, and the executive directors will be drafting guidelines so that they can be put into operation about the time that the articles of the fund are formally amended, probably in the last half of next year.

The second, related point, Mr. Yeo said, is what is called "the adjustment process"—how deficits and surpluses in national balances of payments are to be eliminated gradually. Mr. Yeo said that elimination of the present imbalances was "essential for sustained economic expansion."

Mr. Yeo said he did not expect a meeting of the "big five" Finance Ministers—those from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan —to discuss the problems of the British pound.

There are 17 persons on the board of Con Edison, and in 1975 they were paid from $5,383 to $15,200 each, according to Mr. Stein, who said the figures were based upon a 1975 Federal Power Commission report. The highest amount went to William S. Renchard, who is chairman of the executive committee and a director of the Chemical Bank, and who attended 34 meetings. The lowest amount went to Peter S. Paine, chairman of the executive committee of the Great Northern Nekoosa Corporation who amended 11 meetings.

Seymour Graubard, national chairman of The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said yesterday that it was time for President Ford to state publicly his support for legislation that would bar American companies from complying with an Arab trade boycott against Israel. Noting that the Export Administration Act, which opposes such boycotts as a matter of policy, expires Sept. 30, Mr. Graubard charged that senior Administration officials, several American oil companies and spokesmen for Arab interests were engaged in "a desperate and misleading propaganda campaign," which is protecting Arab boycott operations in the United States.

At a news conference in New York Mr. Graubard and several other Anti-Defamation League officials, contended that the "propaganda line," which he asserted began with the Arabs, claims that "the United States will suffer political, economic and energy reprisals if an anti-boycott bill becomes law."

The chairman of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, John D. deButts, testified before a Congressional committee yesterday that Federal Communications Commission policies that add to costs of communications, particularly those for home telephones,

The New York Times

John D. deButts

Assays competition and phone rates will leave A.T.&T. no alternative but to "press for a massive cost related restructuring of our rates."

Testifying before the House communications subcommittee, Mr. deButts said that a restructuring might mean lower short-term costs for large businesses and long distance users over the short-term, but would produce significantly higher costs for 68 million home telephone users.

Theodore F. Brophy, chairman and chief executive of the General Telephone and Electronics Corporation, was another witness who contended that the F.C.C. has ignored the public interest in adopting a policy of what he termed "pseudo-competition" within the telephone industry. Mr. Brophy and Mr. deButts were testifying on the proposed Consumer Communications Reform Act of 1976, which would, among other things, give the states rather than the F.C.C. jurisdiction of telephone units and switchboards. *DOUGLAS W. ing corporation, although it is believed that the Hamilton interests would emerge in a control position.

Northern Telecom fell 2 points to 34¼. Earlier in the day it sold as low as 33. The company announced late in the session that it had reached agreement in principle on revised terms of its acquisition of Cook Electric.

Zenith declined 2 points to 28¾ after a Japanese trade group said it would not recommend to television producers in Japan that they cut back exports to the United States because of complaints by American manufacturers.

Upjohn lost 1⅞ to 43¾. The drug company said Monday that fourth-quarter profits might be reduced by the decline in the Mexican peso. It is one of numerous American companies adversely affected by the recent devaluation of the peso.

Volume rost to 20.44 million shares from Monday's 17.43 million shares. However, it was far below the 30.3 million shares registered during the dramatic rise in prices a week earlier.

Consolidated trading of all issues listed on the Big Board rose to 23.62 million shares from the previous day's 20.03 million shares.

Westinghouse, the most active issue, traded at a new yearly high of 19½ before closing at 19, down ⅛.

Prices also moved lower on the American Stock Exchange, the market value index falling 0.96 to 102.73.

Amex volume eased to 1.88 million shares—again running less than 10 percent of the Big Board turnover—from 1.98 million shares.

The NASDAQ industrial index dropped 1.11 to 94.69, while the composite index declined 0.80 to 91.64.

On the Amex, trading in options rose to 45,142 contracts from Monday's 31,507. On the Chicago Board Options Exchange, 91,220 contracts changed hands, compared with 94,658 in the previous session.

Key Indicators Fell 1.5% in August

phone interview: "Most business cycle expansions have lasted three years, so I don't think this one-month decrease should be interpreted too negatively. It would be very unusual for the economy to fall out of bed at this stage in the expansion."

However, Jimmy Carter quickly issued the following statement: "While Mr. Ford says he is proud of the economic recovery, current economic indicators continue to show that the economy is sputtering, faltering and too weak to put our people back to work."

Mr. Kendrick said a rise in the leading indicators next month was likely because a number of the components, such as money supply, stock market and preliminary capital spending had already reversed themselves.

However, in response to the continued sluggish behavior of the economy, some economists have begun to lower their forecasts for economic growth. Dr. Eckstein, for example, said yesterday that his projected increase for the third quarter for the Gross National Product, adjusted for inflation, had been lowered to between 2.3 and 3.3 percent from 4.3 percent.

"There are too many pauses," he said. "All we have are pauses." Among the components that declined were money supply chance in total liquid assets; net business formation index; index of stock prices and new orders.

Increases were posted by vendor performance, that is companies reporting slower deliveries, and change in sensitive prices—in addition to building permits.

Japan Lists Balance of Payments Of $107 Million Surplus in August

TOKYO, Sept. 28 (UPI)—Japan's overall balance of payments registered a $107 million surplus in August, the smallest since last February, the Finance Ministry and the Bank of Japan announced jointly today.

The figure compared with a $721 million surplus in July, which was the largest since February 1973, the announcement said.

The shrinkage in the favorable balance of payments in August was attributed chiefly to a sharp increase in imports and a substantial amount of long-term capital outflow.

tried to deal with that ol. There, he faces not better pay from more but also other problems, many economists' views would upset the British economy again.

Left-wingers in his party have been demanding that the Government nationalize the banks. They have asked as well for new public spending to relieve the country's high unemployment, and they've asked that Mr. Callaghan and Mr. Healey restore the cuts in public spending they are making to divert more money to industry and to bring down the national debt.

Mr. Callaghan, like his predecessor Harold Wilson, has been able to repel such demands so far.

'In a Too-Troubled World'

In Blackpool today, Mr. Callahan tried to restrain the left. "We live in a too-troubled world," he said, "to be able to promise that in a matter of months or even a couple of years we will be able to enter the promised land."

"This cosy world which we were told would go on forever," he said later in his speech, "where full employment would be guaranteed by a stroke of the chancellor's pen, cutting taxes and deficit spending, is gone."

Mr. Callahan defended his industrial policy. "When I say they must be able to earn a surplus, that is a euphemism for saying that they must be able to make a profit."

The left was unimpressed. "His analysis of the economic crisis was purile to the point of illiteracy," said one left-wing member of Parliament.

The pound might still have fallen, despite anything that Mr. Callaghan might have said. The reason, in the eyes of many economists, is the Arabs.

After they quadrupled their oil prices three years ago, the oil exporting countries plowed much of their windfall into British banks and British securities, and this became part of those countries' holdings of foreign currency reserves.

By March 1975, they held £3.445 billion in such investments. At that time those pounds were worth $8.268 billion. Now they're worth $5.65 billion. The oil exporters have become concerned about their British investments.

Slowly—whenever they see the pound recover a bit from a fall—they sell. By the end of June, their holdings were down to £1.964 billion. Since then, currency dealers said, they have continued to sell.

Dollar Remains Depressed Abroad

BRAUSSELS, Sept. 28 (UPI)—Against a backdrop of a continuing slide in the pound, the dollar today remained at its lowest rate in 14 months on some European money markets and gold slumped to the $116 area.

In Frankfurt, the dollar closed at 2.4655 marks, down from yesterday's 2.4690, in Amsterdam it went from 2.5785 guilders to 2.5690, and in Brussels it went from 38.70 to 38.675.

In Zurich, the dollar colsed at 2.5663 Swiss francs, compared with yesterday's 2.4683.

In Paris, however, the United States currency rose from 4.9055 francs to 4.9085, and in Milan, where it has been rising steadily for the last 10 trading days, it went from 850 lira to 852.75.

Gold dropped from $119 an ounce to $116 in Zurich and from $118.50 to $116.75 in London.

Israeli Pound Adjusted

JERUSALEM, Sept. 28 (Reuters)—The Israeli pound was adjusted tonight and from midnight will be worth 8.40 to the dollar compared with 8.25, a Government announcement said. It is the second small change in the Israeli currency since it was linked to a basket of foreign currencies after having previously been linked to the dollar. The adjustment effectively devalues the Israeli pound by 1.8 percent.

Brazil's Trade Deficit Narrows

BRASILIA, Sept. 28—Brazil's trade deficit in August narrowed to a provisional $100 million from a revised deficit of $149 million in July and a deficit of $211 million in August last year, Finance Minister Mario Henrique Simonsen said. Mr. Simonsen told reporters August exports were estimated at $950 million against $902 million in July and August imports of $1.05 billion against $1.05 billion also in July.

cials believe confidently next two years tourism one million tourists a Manila the "gateway" to rom the United States.

But many hotel managers believe there may well be many lean years ahead before this goal is reached. "To do that, you'd need to double the number of flights into here," said one manager. "And to do that you'd need a new airport. This one can barely handle two flights coming in full at the same time."

And the pessimism runs deeper. Even now, with only half the number of hotels operating, lights flicker at times in the evening along Roxas Boulevard by Manila Bay. When all hotels switch on, brownouts may become a regular fact of life, along with low water pressure and frustrating traffic jams on the already-packed four-lane roadway, which also serves, incidentally, as the principal access to the bayfront convention center complex itself.

"And just think of something else," added a hotelier. "In a few years, when we're still pushing our 50 percent occupancy rate, cutting each other's throats with bargain-basement rates, who's going to pay for the hotel upkeep?"

Noting that there were no indications of a substantial improvement in the market in the near future, the company said that its plant in Silver City, N.C., would supply customers of the Warner Robins unit. The company has six other mobile home plants in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee, Texas and Idaho.

Basic Industries Oil

Basic Industries International announced the discovery of oil in commercial quantity by its joint venture with the Shenandoah Oil Corporation on a concession in Guatemala. The company said that four exploratory wells had been drilled in the Rubelsanto sector of its 933,000-acre concession and had been successfully completed as producing wells.

Borg-Warner Dividend

Directors of the Borg-Warner Corporation of Chicago voted to raise the quarterly dividend from 33¾ cents to 40 cents. Payment will be made Nov. 15 to holders of record Oct. 22.

Canadian G.E. Contract

The Canadian General Electric Company of Toronto has been invited to negotiate a contract to supply Venezuela with five hydro generators valued at $60 million, according to an official of the Canadian Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce in Ottawa. The company is a subsidiary of the General Electric Company of the United States. The generators will be part of an expansion of a Venezuelan power project. The Canadian company supplied four generators for the initial phase of the project.

American Can Dividend

Directors of the American Can Company of Greenwich, Conn., voted a 20-cent increase in the annual dividend, raising the quarterly payment from 55 cents to 60 cents. The annual dividend will now be $2.50. The quarterly payment will be made Nov. 26 to holders of record Oct. 15.

Flying Tiger Service

The Flying Tiger Line of Los Angeles announced the start of its International Skyroad Service, a truck-air cargo transportation system directly linking 20 United States cities with the Far East. Richard E. Macklin, director of national sales accounts, said it would help both American and Asian companies to develop new markets and added: "In a highly competitive world, a businessman in Harrisburg, for example, can call Flying Tiger and within 19 hours his cargo can be in Tokyo."

Ford Car Prices Increasing 5.7% On Base Models

depends largely on the duration of the strike against the company by the United Automobile Workers. The strike, which enters its second week tomorrow, appeared today to be some distance from settlement. Some progress was said to be taking place.

Ford's overall price increase of 5.7 percent on its base models did not include one of its new offerings, the 1977 Thunderbird. It is much smaller and $2,727 cheaper than the 1976 Thunderbird, which is being discontinued. A company spokesman said that the Thunderbird was not included in figuring the overall price rise because it would distort the figure for purposes of making a comparison with last year and with other companies' prices.

The average price of a company's cars is computed on a sales-weighted basis—that is, by taking account of how well each line of cars is expected to sell in the model year ahead. Based as it is on a forecast, the "average" price increase is really an informed estimate. Ford calculates that the new Thunderbird will sell at high volume. If it is included in the average-price computation, the company spokesman said, Ford's price rise is 2.2 percent, or $132 a car.

When options typically selected by consumers are included, Ford's increase (minus the Thunderbird) is 5.1 percent, or $310 a car. That compares with 5.9 percent, or $338, for G.M.

Foremost-McKesson to Purchase Mueller Stock

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER

Foremost-McKesson Inc. announced yesterday that it had signed an agreement to purchase all of the outstanding capital stock of the C.F. Mueller Company, the maker of spaghetti and other pasta products, for $115 million in cash from New York University.

The university has owned the Mueller Company for some years having obtained the stock as a gift. Mueller, headquartered in Jersey City, N.J., had sales last year of $75 million and profits of $6.1 million.

The income from the university trust, which has controlled Mueller, will go to the New York University Law School. The university said the proceeds from the sale would be dedicated primarily to the law school but that a substantial part of the proceeds would also be available fo general university purposes.

William W. Morison, president and chief executive of Foremost, said the transaction would be financed from cash reserves supplemented by a bank loan. Foremost-McKesson is a diversified concern with interests in foods, drugs, chemicals, wines, spirits and land development.

In an unrelated development, Foremost yesterday said it had acquired substantially all the assets of Gentry International Inc., a manufacturer of 107 chemicals, wines, spirits and land development.

In an unrelated development, Foremost yesterday said it had acquired substantially all of the assets of Gentry International Inc. a manufacturer of dehydrated onions and garlics. The purchase was made for 500,000 shares of Foremost common stock and the assumption of certain current liabilities of Gentry. Gentry has annual sales of about $20 million.

In recent months, the Sharon Steel Corporation, which is controlled by Victor Posner, the financier, has accumulated 9.9 percent of Foremost-McKesson.

Mr. Posner has been preparing to acquire 80 percent of Foremost through a debenture offering, a plan that has been delayed pending a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation into the accuracy and adequacy of certain papers filed with the S.E.C. concerning Sharon, the NVF Company and the Birdsboro Corporation, all Posner-controlled concerns.

SCM Agrees to Sell Foreign Copier Units

The SCM Corporation said it had agreed in principle to sell its office-copier sales and service organizations in Britain, France, West Germany, Switzerland and Belgium and its distribution operations covering Europe, the Middle East and Africa to a company controlled by N. Norman Muller, a private investor. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

Paul H. Elicker, president of SCM, indicated that SCM would incur a pretax loss of about $1.4 million on the transaction. Sales of SCM's copier operations overseas represented about 40 percent of the company's total copier sales of $107.1 million for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1976. SCM will retain its domestic copier operations which it began in 1959.

Gulf and Western to Get Share of Her Majesty

Arthur Magill, chairman of the executive committee of Her Majesty Industries Mauldin, S.C., makers of children's wear, said he had agreed to sell his 48 percent in Her Majesty to Gulf and Western Industries for an undisclosed amount of cash and promissory notes. The transaction is subject to the execution of a definitive agreement and other conditions.

Gulf and Western has also agreed to propose to the board of Her Majesty that the latter merge into Gulf and Western and that stockholders of Her Majesty receive shares of Gulf and Western series D preferred stock in the merger.

The number of shares of Gulf and Western series D preferred stock to be received in the merger for each share of Her Majesty common stock would be not less than the number determined by dividing $18 by the average market price of Gulf and Western series D preferred stock during a specified 10-day trading period. Gulf and Western is a diversified company engaged in manufacturing, paper and building products, food and agriculture products and natural resources.

Terms of Northern Deal With Cook Revised

Northern Telecom Ltd. and the Cook Electric Company announced that they reached agreement in principle on revised terms of a previously announced acquisition of Cook by Northern Telecom of Montreal.

Under the revised terms, Cook Electric holders will receive $15 in United States funds a share in cash for each Cook share instead of 0.3636 of a Northern share as originally announced. Cook, which has 1.91 million common shares outstanding, manufactures electronic products, which it sells primarily to the independent telephone industry. Northern Telecom is the largest telecommunication equipment manufacturer in Canada.

The Agency Route to Barickman

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY

From McCann-Erickson to Benton & Bowles to J. Walter Thompson to Barickman Advertising. That has been the agency route of E. Wyatte Hicks, one of whose jobs now is somehow to deliver some of the size and reputation of the first three to the fourth. For the last six weeks he has been its chairman.

Barickman, based in Kansas City, Mo., with a New York office, billed about $35 million. The other agencies have clients that bill that much and more.

"I've taken pretty much the big agency route and that's why this new job is fascinating from some standpoints," said Mr. Hicks, he of the snow-white hair.

"When you're small you have speed and efficiency and can get things done fast. Of course, you don't have the security blanket of seeing a lot of bodies around."

The former executive vice president of J.W.T., who resigned because the road to the very top was blocked, has three priorities at his new place of employment. "We have to consolidate what we've got and achieve some recognition, which is practically nil in New York," he said. Then in late October, he'll be running a new business seminar in Kansas City similar to one he gave at Thompson a year and a half ago.

When those two things are accomplished, the plan calls for expanding the Barickman capacity. Mr. Hicks said he has been talking to direct-response, public-relations and new-product firms as well as other agencies about the possibility or a merger or acquisition.

Mr. Hicks is now the second largest owner of Barickman after James H. Barickman, who founded the place. And one thing that must make him popular with his new associates is the contacts he has built up with advertisers over the years.

He says that about 60 percent of the people he has approached to make pitches for the agency have been quite agreeable even though they had trouble remembering the name Barickman.

His usual pitch, he said, is "We've got a fully staffed, competent agency doing work for a lot of people you've heard of." "The reason you haven't heard of us is that not much of our work is being done in New York," he added.

And on the subject of contacts, the 50-year-old Mr. Hicks shares this line from one of his—"familiarity breeds attempt."

Some of those well-known clients he was referring to include Green Giant; Pillsbury; Hallmark Cards; Lee, the maker of jeans; the Safeway chain, and Rival, the maker of Crock-Pots. All of them are handled by the Kansas City or Denver offices.

Approximately two-thirds of the billing in New York, where Mr. Hicks is making his headquarters, comes from the Bernard Hodes Advertising division, specialists in recruitment and corporate advertising.

Speaking of the overall agency, Mr. Hicks puts its strengths in the areas of retail advertising, food advertising, new-product ("really new market") development and corporate communications.

During an interview in his office at 711 Fifth Avenue yesterday, the executive said that when word of his impending resignation got out he was approached by five or six less-than-giant agencies all with a common plaint—they didn't have recognition and they couldn't seem to climb from the billings plateau they were on.

"Their theory was maybe I could help," recalls Mr. Hicks, "and I began to think maybe they could help one another."

The idea he developed was that they set up an umbrella corporation in which each agency had equity and under which each acted as a division—combining perhaps the accounting and media functions. All of them liked the idea, but the negotiations fell through over the amount of equity each was entitled to.

The New York Times

E. Wyatte Hicks during interview.

Undaunted, Mr. Hicks says, "The concept is still alive in my mind, and I think I can still do it from this base."

Growth, thy lure is like a siren's song.

A Deal on Extermination

You got bugs? You got mice? You want to get rid of same? Talk to the J. Walter Thompson Company. You might be able to work out a deal.

The Atlanta office of that dear old agency is going to be doing the advertising for the Orkin Exterminating Company, which has 1,200 contact points in 42 states. Neither client (a subsidiary of Rollins Inc.) nor its new agency will discuss billing or manner of compensation. However, Orkin was backed by about $2.8 million in TV alone last year.

Birth of Pinnacle Group

The Pinnacle Group is a new joint venture involving seven United States public-relations firms with total annual billings of about $4 million. It will also include foreign participation.

The chairman of the organization, the formation of which was announced yesterday, is Don Underwood, chairman also of Underwood, Jordan Associates, New York, and the president is Lee Seabolt, president of Selz, Seabolt, Chicago.

The other companies involved are A. R. Busse Associates, Houston; Hoefer-Amidei Public Relations, San Francisco; McCarthy Communications, Minneapolis; Alfred Russell Associates, Denver, and Sibley, Flemister & Company, Atlanta. The group will have "formal affiliations" with firms in Britain, Europe and Japan.

Air France Casts Gene Kelly

Gene Kelly, the star of "An American in Paris," has been signed to a similar vehicle for his talents—a broadcast and print campaign on behalf of Air France. The agency is Kenyon & Eckhardt.

Mr. Kelly, the agency reports, is under a two-year contract and the first ads showing him will be in newspapers. The headline: "Air France presents Kelly." The ad defines Francophile. Isn't that helpful?

Guy M. Perdiue appointed advertising director of CBS's newly created automotive group, which consists of Road & Track, Cycle World and Pickup, 4 WD magazines.

Roy A. Duffus appointed public-relations manager of Tenneco Chemicals Inc.

Accounts

The Telecom Corporation, which designs, installs and services telephone interconnect systems, to David Mann Advertising Inc.

Besides Eastern's prize-winning building, there are separate structures housing regional offices for the Prudential Insurance Company, Engelhard Industries and the Siemens Corporation, the West German electronics company. There is also a 10-story multitenant building built by the Sutton Construction Company.

"If the Web plan goes ahead, there will be no more land available," said Lewis Huck, Eastern Air Lines director of real estate development. Eastern itself has 30 acres in the park, and a building with 145,000 square feet of space.

The building that Web Associates envisions for the eight-acre site will be long and low, with an exterior of precast concrete and reflective glass. The parking will be away from the street, Wood Avenue, so that drivers will see a shield of trees.

In conjunction with the Hilton hotel, Web intends to install one of its "National Conference Centers," which offer training facilities for corporate staffs, a growing way of building hotel occupancy. Web plans similar ventures with the Hilton organization across the country.

Mr. Wolosoff's partner in Web Associates is his uncle, Morton. Another partner, Gerald Baroff, died in April, and a fourth, Charles Elin, was bought out.

In New Jersey, office development has tended to follow road patterns, when it has not occurred in downtown areas. Industrial parks, which consolidate industrial or warehousing operations of a variety of companies, have been more common than corporate office parks.

But in Woodbridge, where the Garden State Parkway and the New Jersey Turnpike come together, there has been a concentration of both office and retail development.

"Sometimes there is trouble getting mortgage money," said Mr. Wolosoff, "but here the insurance companies and pension funds are after me. This is a bullish sign."

Plan for Emergency Oil Financing Apparently Dead

portant part of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's plans for a coordinated Western approach to the big oil-price rise engineered by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in late 1973 and 1974.

This approach included the creation of a new international organization in Paris known as the International Energy Authority (with the same membership as the O.E.C.D.) that encourages energy conservation and the development of new supplies, negotiation with the oil producers, and the fixing of a so-called "minimum oil price" to protect new high-cost supplies against an excessive price cut by OPEC.

Conditional on Following Policies

Under the Financial Support Fund, loans or loan guarantees would be made available to any member country faced with bankruptcy as a result of its increased oil bill. These funds would be conditional upon its following internationally approved policies to conserve energy and adjust its economy to the higher cost of oil.

The Senate's refusal to let the Administration participate on its own initiative has upset the governments of other industrial countries that have been under strong American pressure to join.

"We bent over backward to do what Henry [Kissinger] wanted," said one European diplomat in Washington, "and now he can't deliver."

Another diplomat said, "It's another example of the creeping paralysis in American foreign policy which stems from the power struggle between Congress and the White House. Remember the arms embargo against Turkey and now the dispute about military aid to Saudi Arabia. It's apt to make you wonder whether America's really a reliable ally."

But Congressional coolness toward the Financial Suppart Fund has also drawn attention to two other themes of increasing importance in the world of international finance—the success of the oil-importing countries in financing their oil bills through borrowing from existing lenders, and the Administration's concern that this borrowing may go too far.

A major objection to the Financial Support Fund at Senate hearings on the legislation earlier this year was that it was unnecessary. Skeptical Senators pointed out that the industrialized countries had been able to finance their oil bills by borrowing back petrodollars (that is, surplus oil revenues) from OPEC members, either through the private market or from the International Monetary Fund.

In rebuttal, Treasury Secretary Simon warned that "huge debts have been accumulated" and that, as a result, "adequate financing from existing sources may not be guaranteed."

The Financial Support Fund was needed not only to guarantee this financing, he said, but also to force borrowers to "adjust" in return for help—that is, take painful domestic economic measures to bring their external payments into balance.

"The Support Fund has an important role to play in sustaining the system and inducing countries to follow adjustment policies which are both effective and internationally responsible," Mr. Simon said.

Since then, Administration officials have drawn attention in a series of recent interviews to the still mounting burden of debt that industrial as well as developing countries are accumulating in financing their payment deficits.

These same officials have made clear that Treasury Secretary Simon will urge industrial countries and the better-off developing nations to cut back on their borrowing and take internal adjustment measures instead at the annual ministerial meeting of the I.M.F., which open in Manila next Monday.

$16 Billion in Six Months

According to an I.M.F. survey of government borrowing in private markets published earlier this month, loans to industrial countries totaled $16 billion during the first six months of 1976—or more than half the $20.5 billion total for all 1975.

Much of this borrowing, I.M.F. officials say, has been by European Countries with weak payment balances, such as Britain, Italy and France.

Borrowing for balance-of-payment purposes by the poorer countries has also remained heavy so far this year. The I.M.F. puts total new bonds and credits for the developing countries at $7 billion during the first six months, again slightly more than half last year's total of $13.5 billion.

Meanwhile, borrowing from the I.M.F. itself has also reached record proportions at nearly $14 billion, compared with only $3 billion in 1973, before the oil crisis and world recession. The greatest proportionate increase has been by developing countries under the so-called compensatory finance plan, which compensates members for temporary reductions in their export earnings.

However at the end of June, industrialized countries accounted for nearly half the I.M.F.'s outstanding loans, with total borrowings of some $6 billion.

In trying to persuade both industrial and developing countries to curb their borrowing and correct their payment deficits through domestic measures, Mr. Simon faces several problems, in the view of United States and European officials.

One is that the size of these countries' collective deficit is growing again as economic recovery increases their demand for oil. According to the latest forecasts by the secretariat of the O.E.C.D., the organization's member countries will see their collective deficit on current account (trade in goods and services) rise from $20 billion this year to $23 billion in 1977.

While this increasing deficit makes the need to take internal corrective measures more urgent in the view of United States officials, it also increases the size of the adjustment required.

But the problem of adjustment is also made more difficult by signs that the economic difficulties of the weaker European countries, such as Britain, Italy and France, may be becoming self-perpetuating.

Both the O.E.C.D., in its publication Economic Outlook, issued last July, and the I.M.F., in its annual report released this month, warn that inflation in these countries is tending to feed on itself by forcing down their exchange rate, a development that in turn lifts the cost of imported goods and raises prices.

Fragile Political Situation

Finally, many of the industrialized countries that have borrowed most heavily in recent months have a fragile domestic politicial situation that makes it difficult for the govenment in power to take the unpopular economic measures needed to lower inflation and correct payment defiets.

The British Labor Government has only a slender parliamentary majority and is dependent on the good will of the labor unions for the success of its attempt to limit wage claims. In France and Italy, moderate governments face strong opposition from Socialists and Communists.

EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES 2500

SECRETARIES ONLY

TO THE EMPLOYER
—in search of a secretary

The best secretary you'll ever have could be sitting in our computer.

We'll let you know in 2 hours or less.

We place secretaries exclusively, and all our interviewers are secretaries themselves. We know what a good secretary should deliver. Our computer profiles will match your company's needs. Whatever they are. From the brand new beginner to the seasoned professional). And do it within 2 hours from the time that you call.

TO THE SECRETARY
—in search of an employer

The ad that appears above is one of a series currently appearing on every Commuter Rail Line entering or leaving N.Y. City. It's just part of our very extensive campaign to make sure that we can offer you more of the better, ready-to-fill secretarial positions than other agencies can (and that they're all fee paid).

At Hamilton Systems, we talk your language in many ways. We should be able to because placing Secretaries and Executive secretaries is our only business.

If your language isn't Gregg, we talk Pitman, Speedwriting, Sanskrit and sometimes even a little fast longhand.

Our counselors are all secretaries themselves. They're paid excellent salaries. They earn their salaries by getting you a job without sending you all over town on fruitless interviews—(they've been there themselves).

We work by appointment only and that appointment will be in a comfortable private conference room, not a room subdivided like an egg carton.

There's a lot more about us that is different and we will be happy to tell you about it right over the telephone. We won't ask you to come in to see us unless the job we have for you is right—and available.

A special newspaper for people with limited vision

The New York Times Large Type Weekly

This unique newspaper gives people with poor vision a chance to read the news. The Large Type Weekly has letters more than twice the size of regular newspaper print and contains a review of the week's major news events from the Sunday Times plus news of business, finance, the arts, entertainment, sports, family/style features and much more.

A thoughtful gift

And now you can give a three-month trial subscription to someone at a 20 per cent saving. Instead of $11 for the first three months, pay only $8.80. (After that each three-month period costs $11)

To order, call toll-free 800-325-6400.

UNOPENED HOSPITAL TOURED IN THE BRONX

North Central Shown to Visitors by Dr. Holloman in an Appeal for Quick Approval by State

By LENA WILLIAMS

Dr. John L. S. Holloman, president of the Health and Hospital's Corporation, sponsored a tour of the new North Central Bronx Hospital yesterday to prove his contention that it was a bona fide hospital, fully equipped, well-staffed and deserving of an operating certificate from the state.

Some of the politicians, clergymen, and community leaders who took the tour of the new $100 million, 420-bed hospital, whose wards and emegency rooms were empty of patients, charged that the state, by holding up its operating certificate, was contributing to a health crisis in the Bronx.

"People are being turned away from Jacobi and Lincoln Hospitals in the Bronx because they can't accommodate them," Dr. Holloman said. "And yet this hospital stands ready to go at a moment's notice and the state refuses to give us the go-ahead."

The State Health Department has refused to issue an operating certificate for the hospital until the Health and Hospital's Corporation proves it can meet its medical and financial responsibility once the hospital is opened.

All Wards Monitored

On Monday, Dr. Holloman filed suit in State Supreme Court against Dr. Robert P. Whalen, Commissioner of the State Health Department, to force the Commissioner to issue a certificate for the hospital. A hearing has been set for this morning.

Medical experts have called the hospital, at 210th Street and Kossuth Avenue, the most modern, well-equipped and well-staffed in New York.

Its outstanding features include audio-physiological monitors in each ward, a 12-bed intensive-care unit where patients can be viewed on a screens by nurses and physicians, an emergency room that contains two operating rooms and one medical trauma suite, and a nursery with equipment capable of handling premature and neonatal patient care.

A staff of nearly 700 physicians, nurses, technicians, and clerks have been at the hospital since July 1. Harold Weinberg, the executive director of the hospital, said that even though the hospital was closed, monthly costs for salaries and other nonpatient-related services were running at $2,500,000.

Doctors at the hospital have said that the uncertainty about the date of opening for full services has resulted in the loss of three specialists and other key personnel.

Of Guarantees and the M.A.C

Urgent Appeal to Washington by Rohatyn Likely to Draw Little Favorable Response

By STEVEN R. WEISMAN

News Analysis

A year ago, Governor Carey and his high-powered financial advisers trooped to Washington seeking Federal guarantees for Municipal Assistance Corporation bonds, which were then having trouble in a marketplace wary of the security behind anything with the name "New York" attached to it. The Governor and his supplicants were dealt a blunt turndown by both President Ford and by the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Now the proposal has surfaced again with an urgent appeal from Felix G. Rohatyn, the M.A.C. chairman, that Federal guarantees be applied so that the city and the assistance corporation can "refinance" more than $10 billion in outstanding bonds—that is, issue new 20- to 25-year bonds as a way of paying off existing bonds of five to 10 years in maturity.

The effect of Mr. Rohatyn's proposal would be to permit the city to "stretch out" the retirement of its bonds over the 20-year period, rather than a much shorter period of time—a step he said could save perhaps $200 million a year in debt service costs and bring about a reduction in the real estate tax, which is pegged to the cost of paying off city bonds.

On the surface, it would seem no more likely for the Federal guarantee idea to win acceptance in Washington this year than it did last year. Skepticism, in fact, was perhaps the most favorable reaction given to Mr. Rohatyn's proposal, from Democrats and Republicans alike.

Jan. 1 Deadline Cited

Why then has he brought it up again? The answer lies in an assumption by Mr. Rohatyn—one that is shared privately by many city and state officials—that residents of New York City, as well as politicians in Washington, have been lulled into a complacency that the fiscal "crisis" has receded.

On the contrary, financial experts say that the city is now hurtling toward yet another turning point in its fiscal affairs that is almost certain to bring the same screams of pain, the same calls for municipal bankruptcy and the same down-to-the-wire theatrics that were suffered last year.

Their prediction rests on the knowledge that, by Jan. 1, Mayor Beame must make concrete proposals in how to eliminate a roughly $500 million deficit in order to achieve a balanced budget for the third year of the city's financial plan beginning July 1.

Worse, these cuts must all be in place by the outset of the year in order for them to yield a full $500 million in savings, without which the city will not be able to repay its short-term loan from the Federal Government.

The magnitude of the cuts to come is huge, even by comparison to those the city has already achieved. Barring some sort of unlikely windfall from the state or Federal Governments, many officials who used to be in the forefront of the calls for more spending reductions—such as Mr. Rohatyn—are frankly skeptical that the new cuts can be achieved without doing damage to the very fabric of the city.

Some people looking at the need for drastic new budget cuts suggest that the city ought to "stretch out" the requirement that it balance its budget next year. Perhaps if the city took another few years to make the reductions, these people argue, they could be made with less disruption.

For a long time, Mr. Rohatyn said recently, he, too, was leaning toward this approach—among other things, it had the distinction of already winning at least partial blessing from Jimmy Carter, the Democratic Presidential nominee.

The crucial reason why Mr. Rohatyn said that he now has rejected this approach, however, lies in something he said he had asserted that few people perceived—that is, that with any delay in the balancing of the city's budget, the Federal Government would almost have to step up its commitment to the city to the point of granting the loan guarantees it resisted last year.

This is so, Mr. Rohatyn argues, because a continuing budget deficit means that the city would have to issue bonds to raise the cash to meet the resulting shortfall. Moreover, the city would have to issue bonds to pay for its capital budget, which has always been financed by borrowing.

During the course of its recovery plan, the city has issued bonds to its municipal employee pension systems. But those systems are thought to be dangerously filled with city and M. A. C. securities. So if the deficit is to be carried forward, some new source of credit is going to have to be found if the city is to get the money to pay its bills after next year.

$2.3 Billion in Debt Service

If people realize that this dilemma is going to force the city to turn to the Federal Government, Mr. Rohatyn said, they may also see that his latest proposal makes more sense. It has the virtue, he argues, of being a broad-gauged approach to the entire problem because it tackles that aspect of the city's budget woes that present the biggest difficulty—the huge cost of debt service.

In the current year's $12.5 billion budget, the city is paying a huge $2.3 billion for interest and principal on its bonds.

Seizing this sum as its major source of expense, such politicians as Representative Herman Badillo, Democrat of the Bronx, have called for an outright municipal bankruptcy so that the city can default on its debt service payment and "stretch out" what it owes over a longer period of time.

Mr. Rohatyn's proposal has the same effect of Mr. Badillo's—except that it is a "refinancing" rather than a default and bankruptcy.

Last year, Mr. Rohatyn turned his habit of being blunt into a successful strategy when unions, politicians and banks backed off in their insistence that they would never do certain things to rescue New York City. This year Mr. Rohatyn is again counting on the crush of events in the next several months to make people see that his course is the logical one once more.

McCarthy Now Has A Theoretical Chance

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Eugene J. McCarthy, running as an independent candidate for President, has won ballot status i enough states with enough electoral votes to make his election in November at least theoretically possible.

In the last two days the former Democratic Senator from Minnesota won court contests that resulted in his being listed in four more states: Texas, Massachusetts, Maryland and Utah.

This raised his total to 29 states with a total of 318 electoral votes. To win the Presidency, a candidate must take a majority of the 538 electoral votes, or 270. McCarthy representatives are involved in litigation in 11 other states, and two more are still considering whether or not to certify him for a position on the ballot.

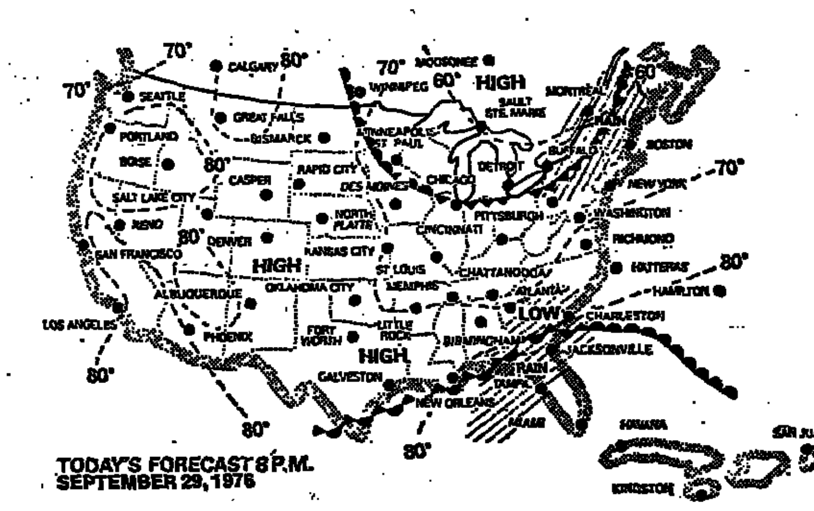
Weather Reports and Forecast

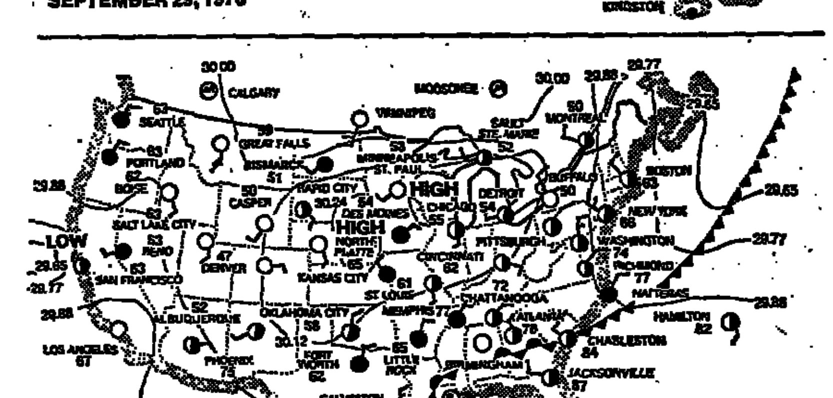
Summary

Skies will be clear across most of the Northeast today. Scattered showers and thundershowers may develop from northern New England to the upper lake region, and also in the central Appalachians and southeastern Texas. Showers and thundershowers will be scattered from the Carolinas into Florida and the eastern Gulf Coast. Except for some showers along the southern California coast, it will be fair elsewhere. Cool weather will spread from the Northeast across the Ohio and middle and lower Mississippi Valleys into the Central and Southern Plains States and southern Rockies. Temperatures will be mild from the Northern Plains States into the Pacific Northwest.

It was partly cloudy yesterday from the Northeast into Tennessee and Kentucky; another band of broken clouds covered the Carolinas and Georgia. Skies were cloudy from Iowa into Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas; scattered showers and thundershowers continued from Louisiana into northern and eastern Texas, while showers developed in western Missouri, western Arkansas and northeastern Oklahoma. A few thundershowers were reported in southern Florida. Isolated showers developed along northern and central sections of the Pacific Coast, while elsewhere, skies were clear. Cool weather continued



TODAY'S FORECAST 8 P.M. SEPTEMBER 29, 1976



YESTERDAY 2 P.M. SEPTEMBER 28, 1976

Cold front: a boundary between cold air and warmer air, under which the colder air pushes like a wedge, usually south and east.

Warm front: a boundary between warm air and a retreating wedge of colder air over which the warm air is forced as it advances, usually north and east.

Occluded front: a line along which warm air was lifted by opposing wedges of cold air, often causing precipitation.

Shaded areas indicate precipitation.

Dash lines show forecast afternoon maximum temperatures.

Isobars are lines (solid black) of equal barometric pressure (in inches), forming air-flow patterns.

Winds are counterclockwise toward the center of low-pressure systems, clockwise outward from high-pressure areas. Pressure systems usually move east.

About New York

A Commercial, if not Critical, Success

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

His voice is all around us in 6,000 commercials. He has been the Beloved Herring Maven, Taylor Wines' Answer Grape, Hostess Cakes' Captain Ho-Ho—the separate voices of an entire Greek chorus as America goes to market—snatching at our minds with resonant talk of hamburgers (Burger King), dog foods (Milk Bone, Cycle) and other stuff made vital.

With a radio or TV set on, there is no way to avoid the artistry of Allen Swift as he flattens, raises, plunges, twists and twitters his voice to fit 1,000 niches in the pantheon of broadcast huckstering.

But, safe and rich, he could not resist the chance to come out of his soundproofed closet recently and be the star and author of a Broadway comedy. And, quick as it takes a critic to rise up from front row center and get to a typewriter, Mr. Swift was estimated to have bombed.

Never mind the show, entitled "Checking Out," which, despite critical advice, people were laughing through the other night in the half-filled Longacre Theatre. Consider Mr. Swift, the Olivier of the voice-over field, who is quite secure economically as he makes up to 30 commercials a week and manages a national corporation whose assets are his voice box and his imagination.

Mr. Swift is a 52-year-old actor who began his career four decades ago in Brooklyn as a celebrated class clown in his Bensonhurst public school. In command performance as Ira Stadlen, he went classroom to classroom and did imitations of the teachers that, he recalls, even broke up the teachers.

He graduated to trying the Catskill hotel circuit as stand-up comic, and was ready to quit in the face of the show business depression wrought by postwar television when he got a job on the "Howdy Doody" show. After Bob Smith, the character's originator, had a heart attack, Mr. Swift stepped in and did the principal voice as well as dozens of others, writing on the side and finding his way.

As he recalls these events, Mr. Swift slips in and out of pertinent voices — the Pete Smith Specialty announcer, the March of Time man—and the effect is more than entertaining; it displays the actor's magic rooted in the abandonment of his own identity.

He has acted on the stage before, receiving favorable reviews Off Broadway in "Portrait of the Artist," for example. But he said he had turned down various supporting roles over the years and stayed with voice-over.

"I wanted to do it my way, not be a flunkie," he says of Broadway. So, goaded by a friend, he wrote a play based on an old Yiddish actor he met years ago in the Catskills — "the kind of guy who sat up in bed wearing a beret and an ascot and talked all night about the theater" — and he became the character, Morris Applebaum, at the Longacre.

The outcome is we have another broken heart on Broadway, right?

"Well, not really," Mr. Swift responds, his whitened hair looking unreal off the stage. "I have a lot of chutzpah. My ego isn't really on the line. I try to do the best I can and have some fun."

The problem is, he told the audience the other night after the curtain, "the only people who didn't like the play were the critics."

"So please tell your friends about it," he said, nodding gratitude as the audience applauded again.

Talk of chutzpah can be role-playing, too. And as Mr. Swift describes his effort to get to Broadway—badgering producers and angels, working for the nuance that triggers a laugh in time—his disappointment becomes evident.

"I think I carried out my end. I saw the audience reaction in all the right places. Aw, when I think of how much work, I just . . ."

He sighs, with nothing extra on his voice, just plain Ira Stadlen.

If money be comfort, withhold your tears. Mr. Swift makes a good deal. He won't say how much but describes the voice-over field as a kind of lottery where "I have managed to hold lots of tickets."

Fifteen minutes of work involving one sentence, for example, earned him $27,000 in 13 weeks some years ago. The ear-shaking line? "Checked all the way with Accuray, they satisfy the most". — delivered for Chesterfield cigarettes in a rolling-rich Southern voice conjured by the actor from Bensonhurst.

A few days after his play opened, Mr. Swift was making a radio commercial only a block from the theater in a converted executive suite where Cecil B. DeMille reigned years ago. Somehow it was all part of show business, particularly when the other actors in the commercial offered congratulations and reassurances to Mr. Swift for his Broadway adventure.

He thanked them and went to work as Christopher Columbus in a Carefree chewing gum commercial. His curtain line, delivered flawlessly, was: "Now available in bubble gum, too!"

Asians and Arkansas Hill Folk Ease Their Mutual Misgivings

workers were arrested and fined for stealing chickens at the plant.

One rural man refuses to allow Vietnamese on his property because he says some of them stole things from him.

It is commonly believed that the Vietnamese who moved away included the troublemakers and that those who stayed are the better educated and more stable.

The Americans have been a little astonished to learn that many of the newcomers are college-educated. Hien Duc Nguyen, for example, speaks five languages and is an artist as well as a teacher. He worked for the South Vietnamese embassies in Singapore and Vientian before coming to the United States.

Barriers Between Groups

Race is not the only barrier separating the two groups here. There are also custom, taste and language.

The Asian children are learning English rapidly, the adults more slowly. Mr. Hien is teaching English to 36 adult Vietnamese and Laotians. The only American who seems to know any Vietnamese is a disabled veteran named Jesse Palmer, who wounded in Vietnam.

A few American families exchange social visits with the Asians. But the two groups mostly stay to themselves except at work and school.

Community life for the Asians revolves around their new Roman Catholic Church. Mrs. Lane donated the land for the building.

The new Vietnamese priest conducts mass every afternoon. Most of the women and girls come to church wearing the floor-length Vietnamese garment that became familiar to Americans through news and television pictures during the war.

The Vietnamese have had to change an important holiday, Tet, because it falls on a working day here. Melvin Sullivan, assistant to Mr. Lane, said they agreed to start celebrating the American New Year.

The younger Asians have picked up not only the new language but also new tastes more rapidly than have their elders. Many have begun to buy cars, television sets, stereo equipment and tape players. Like Americans, they buy on credit.

"Some of them don't pay their bills," Mrs. Lane, a peppery retired teacher, said. "But then, I've known a lot of Americans who don't pay their bills."

One potential problem will not have to be faced for a while. The Asians will not be eligible to vote for five years. No one is ready to think about what will happen to the town government when that time comes.

Perhaps it will be handled as it was in the schools. The American youngsters just moved over and made room. One extra teacher was hired.

Many of the newcomers were shopkeepers and military people back home. Some find it hard to adjust to the dirty, monotonous work in the poultry plant. And to the weather.

"They thought they were going to freeze to death last winter," Mr. Sullivan said. Sandals are giving way to shoes.

He said the Asians were making good workers. All around, he said, they are turning out to be about like Americans—some good, some bad.

"It's come true to me," he said, "that people are people, not matter where they're from."

WMAL Radio In Washington Is Sold by Star

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 (AP)—The American Broadcasting Companies Inc. agreed yesterday to purchase two affiliated radio stations here from Washington Star Communications Inc.

The agreement in principle, specifying a purchase price of $16 million in cash for WMAL-AM and WMAL-FM, was announced by the two corporations after the network's board formally approved it. The purchase is subject to a final agreement between the two companies and approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

"The decision to sell these stations was not based on normal business judgment, in that Washington Star Communications would prefer to retain them," Joseph L. Albritton, chairman of the company, said in a prepared statement.

F.C.C. Ordered Divestiture

"The F.C.C.," he continued, "last January ordered the company to divest itself of all but one media property in the Washington market, and this is the result. I understand the $16 million would be the largest cash transaction ever for an AM-FM radio combination."

The commission's ruling early this year continued to implement a policy of allowing a single company to own only one public communications vehicle—either television, radio or newspaper—in a single market.

With the sale of the two radio stations, Washington Star Communications must still sell either WMAL-TV or The Washington Star newspaper by January 1979 to comply with the F.C.C. order. The F.C.C. does not regulate publishing of newspapers.

In addition to its Washington properties, Washington Star Communications owns network-affiliated radio and television outlets in Lynchburg, Va., and Charleston, S. C.

TV: Lear's Factory Hums Along

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

The Norman Lear factory hums along with incredible efficiency. One of its new products, "All's Fair," is already on display at CBS at 9:30 P.M. on Mondays. Another, "The Nancy Walker Show," will be unveiled tomorrow at 9:30 on ABC. Meanwhile, the established series are being carefully monitored and adjusted to insure continuing freshness.

"All in the Family," the series that started television careers for Mr. Lear and his co-producer, Bud Yorkin, nearly six years ago, returned to CBS last week with a one-hour episode that had Edith Bunker walking out on "unfaithful" Archie. Tonight at 9 the crisis will be resolved, at least temporarily, in the program's new weekly half-hour slot.

It can hardly be denied that the series is showing its age. Routines with son-in-law "Meathead" and the racial and ethnic slurs—"You ain't supposed to say dago no more; the wops get sore"—are growing noticeably tired. Worse; there is a perceptible drift toward being overly cute.

Archie's malapropisms—"The sexual act was never constipated," he explains about his date—have been escalated from occasional frills to full-time and counterproductive props. And some new pieces of business, such as the regular use of a "Bronx cheer" are merely silly and out of character.

But, thanks largely to the marvelously shaded and controlled performances of Jean Stapleton and Carroll O'Connor (who is indeed a relative of this writer—but distant, very distant), "All in the Family" still manages to surprise and amuse.

Tonight's script by Mel Tolkin moves from stock comedy to moving pathos, from daffy lightheartedness to threatening reality, with stunning ease. The transitions from jokes to quiet seriousness are accomplished most deftly. Paul Bogart is the director. Solid, all-round professionalism is still scoring heavily on "All in the Family."

"Maude," which was a spinoff from the Bunker series, has given every indication of expiring several times in the past. Beatrice Arthur is devastating in the title role, but the wisecracking character of Maude can become overbearing with prolonged exposure. Obviously aware of the problem, the producers have experimented with two solutions: toning down Maude to "normal" dimensions, as in her analysis session last season, or surrounding her with characters and situations even more outrageous than she is.

The latter route has been taken on this season's first two episodes (CBS, Mondays at 9:30). The first had Maude recovering a borrowed brooch from the corpse of a disliked neighbor. With more than half the program placed in a funeral home, hardly the most likely setting for situation comedy, the episode was almost indecently hilarious.

Last Monday Maude found herself locked in a lawyer's office with her second husband, played by Martin Balsam. Essentially a two-character playlet, the half hour was carried off with verve, intelligence and clever humor.

By now, of course, the Lear factory is a leading beneficiary of the typical show-business syndrome. Talent breeds success, and the success tends to monopolize talent, enabling the fortunate producer to attract and handsomely reward the best and the brightest of available abilities. Surrounded by many of the best producers, directors and writers in television sit-com, demonstrating an uncanny ability to pick the right actors for the right roles—it can be argued convincingly that Mr. Lear owes half his success to casting director Jane Murray—Lear & Company will rarely be less than interesting. They will never be worthless.

The Lear people have now taken Nancy Walker, formerly of "Rhoda," "McMillan" and paper-towel commercials, and packaged the marvelous comedian in a weekly series, which starts tomorrow night, for ABC. The diminutive Miss Walker has been transformed into a Hollywo

The Best Place for Advertisers to Invest Their Money is Where Readers Invest Their Time

This message is intended for people in the advertising industry, but we hope you will read it, too.

Advertisers ask important questions when they place their ads. They want information not just about the size of a magazine's circulation but about the readers themselves. Buying power. Special interests. Education. Possible leadership position in the community.

Even this information, however, is secondary. The best demographics in the world are meaningless unless a magazine makes and sustains contact with the reader. That means reader time.

Advertisers want readership, not flippership.

How does an advertiser know if the space he buys is justified by the time a reader gives to a magazine?

The advertiser need not be in the dark on where to look for hard answers.

If a large percentage of readers pay the full subscription rate for a magazine, this says something.

If a large percentage of readers subscribe not just for part of a year but for a full year or more, this says something.

Now consider the evidence:

The Saturday Review is Number One among all weekly and bi-weekly magazines in terms of the percentage of people who subscribe and re-subscribe at full rate.

The Saturday Review is Number One among all general interest magazines in terms of the percentage of readers who subscribe in advance for three years at full rate.

Reader time and reader dollars go together.

Against this background of reader commitment, the demographics take on special importance:

—The Saturday Review is Number One among all magazines in terms of the percentage of readers who graduated from college—60.7%...of whom over 60% went on to graduate or professional training after college.

—The Saturday Review is Number Three among all general interest magazines in terms of the percentage of readers who have household incomes of over $25,000...32.1%.

—The Saturday Review is Number One among all general interest magazines in terms of the percentage of readers are strong public activists—more than 3 times the national average.

Together, SR's impressive reader profile and reader involvement make dramatically clear: The best place for advertisers to invest their dollars is where readers invest their time.
